Tentative pact ends long press shutdown

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver's two daily newspapers could be back on the streets by late next week if union members ratify a tentative contract which would end a strike-lockout in its eighth month now.

Management and union negotiators shook hands over a tentative agreement early this morning to climax a marathon bargaining session which started Thursday morning.

About 1,400 members of six unions at Pacific Press, which produces the morning Province and evening Sun, will vote on the proposed pact during the next few days.

Pickets are to remain around the Pacific Press building until all votes have been held. If the agreement is ratified, company spokesman Jerry Marr said it will take 72 hours to get the papers back into production.

Harold Dieno, co-chairman of the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions since last week, said the agreement would run 40 months and would be retroactive to last Nov. 1, the day members of two unions walked out and members of four others were locked out.

Neither Dieno nor Marr would give any other details.

Kagel, a high-priced labor lawyer who helped settle the previous contract, was called in in March to try to do it again. He pulled out in May, but both sides say he had drawn them close to a settlement by the time he left.

The final agreement was thrashed out in an almost continuous 40-hour session at the provincial labor ministry's office in Burnaby. Marr and Pacific Press general manager Dave Stinson did the company's talking while Dieno and Bob Jennings represented the council.

Some of the pickets doing their overnight rounds at Pacific Press were happy to hear the news while others remained cautious.

"Let's see what the tentative agreement has to offer," said a member of The Newspaper Guild, the largest of the six unions. "We've been on the street for some time and if they don't come up with something that meets our expectation, I'd be prepared to reject it."

No easing up on helmet law

Greater Victoria police will continue to lay charges against any motorcyclist who doesn't wear a helmet despite a Burnaby court ruling that the regulation covering the requirement is invalid.

"We have received no directive from the attorney-general not to lay charges so we'll carry on as usual and continue to prosecute violators," Victoria police Insp. Scotty Grant said today.

On Friday, Burnaby provincial court Judge Selwyn Romilly ruled that Section 207 of the Motor Vehicle Act which requires motorcyclists to be helmeted is null and void.

Romilly said the section states the superintendent of motor vehicles must specify which helmets meet provincial standards.

However, he noted the superintendent has been using test results in other parts of the world without testing helmets locally. No helmets have been officially approved in B.C., the judge said.

Grant said that regardless of the ruling a motorcyclist would be foolhardy not to wear a helmet, approved or otherwise.

"I've seen too many people injured in accidents not to doubt the helmet requirement is a good one," he said.

BCGEU lays strike plan

By VIC PARSONS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Government Employees' Union, which is expecting a rough round of negotiations with the government, is considering a strategy of escalating strikes directed at key government services.

The plan, to be presented at the union's annual convention this weekend, lacks specifics about which groups would be called out on strike.

But it says immediate and total walkouts by special "target groups" are the most effective way of putting pressure on government negotiators.

The plan also calls for gradually escalating strikes, beginning with withdrawal of services for one or two days initially with the walkouts getting longer or hitting other groups if disputes are unresolved.

The union, which represents 37,000 provincial government employees, is preparing for negotiations for a master contract next week and general secretary John Fryer has predicted the talks will be the toughest the union has yet faced. The current master agreement ends July 31.

Fryer says it will be almost certainly necessary to take a strike vote this round and a walkout may be necessary.

In formulating its strike plan, the union knows it is facing a provincial government that has extended essential service legislation to cover many of its employees. That factor could affect their ability to use strike action effectively.

Although the union sets out a general plan for strike activity, it does not reveal which government services would be hit.

During the last round of talks in 1977, the union had proposed to hit liquor distribution stores. A strike was averted but the government has since moved to blunt the effectiveness of liquor store strikes by excluding managers and assistant managers from bargaining units. That situation has not yet been resolved.

"It is important therefore that, within our over-all strategy, we retain the element of surprise to prevent the employer from having the lead time to introduce contingency plans to weaken a strike," the paper says.

The report says that because calling out target groups would put undue financial strains on only one portion of the membership,

New Boeing kickback probe

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Allan McKinnon has asked for an investigation to determine whether Canadian law was broken when Boeing Co. of Seattle sold aircraft to Canada on a dual contract system.

McKinnon said in a telephone interview today that he has discussed the matter with Solicitor-General Allan Lawrence and has drafted a memo asking him formally to launch an investigation.

Boeing officials told a U.S. investigation into possible kickbacks that it sold aircraft to a number of countries, including Canada, on a dual contract system, but former Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais told the Commons in February that an RCMP investigation had found no grounds for laying charges.

The RCMP report was never made public and McKinnon said he would like to review the report to see how far the investigation went.

McKinnon said he was not satisfied that there had been no wrongdoing. The double payments could constitute bribery or evasion of income tax laws, he said.

If an investigation warranted it, the issue would be turned over to a parliamentary committee for further study after the next session opens this fall, he said.

The U.S. Securities and Exchanges Commission is investigating $52 million in Boeing payments to consultants in countries including Canada, Argentina, Greece, India, the Sudan and Venezuela since 1968.

Boeing said in a July 24 submission to the commission that "the company executed two consulting agreements in connection with aircraft sales in a number of countries."

These agreements were negotiated between 1971 and 1975 at the request of consultants, the company said.

A man whose identity has not been made public told the commission he worked as a consultant on Boeing sales in Canada and received payments.

Boeing sold aircraft to Air Canada, the defence department, Eastern Provincial Airways, Nordair and Transair during the period being investigated.

Union reacts bitterly to civil service freeze

OTTAWA (UPC) — The union representing more than 180,000 federal public servants has reacted bitterly to a Treasury Board freeze on new spending and hiring in the public service.

In response to the freeze announcement Friday, Andy Stewart, president of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, called on Stevens to hold immediate discussions with the public service unions to explain the Tory plans to reorganize the civil service.

He said the decision to freeze all hiring will affect the number of women, francophones and native peoples in the public service.

"The turnover rate in the public service is higher for females," Stewart said in an interview. "The turnover in the public service is higher for francophones, which means if they don't fill those positions, the ability of the government of Canada to deliver programs in both official languages is going to seriously suffer."

Meanwhile, The Moncton Times says a moratorium has also been placed on the former federal Liberal government's decentralization program.

According to the New Brunswick newspaper, officials in the federal public works department said late Friday a program to move federal government departments outside the Hull-Ottawa region has also been frozen by Treasury Board President Sinclair Stevens.

Stevens' press-release announcement of the temporary freeze on public service hiring made no mention of putting the decentralization program on hold.

Stevens could not be reached for comment.

Uganda prison for Astles

KAMPALA (Reuter) — Bob Astles, British-born aide of ousted Ugandan dictator Idi Amin, was flown back to Uganda today from Kenya and taken to Luzira prison, where he will await trial for murder.

The pilot of his aircraft said the former head of Idi Amin's anti-corruption squad said as he arrived at Entebbe Airport: "It's nice to be back."

Ugandan officials said he would be arraigned Monday.

Astles is the first senior official of Idi Amin's toppled regime to be returned from abroad to face criminal charges. Ugandan officials have applied to Kenya for the extradition of 45 other Ugandans held in Kenya.

Astles arrived in Kenya on April 10 after crossing Lake Victoria in a canoe.

Referee mum on port strike

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Federal mediator Bill Kelly remains tight-lipped about his first day of closed-door discussions with B.C. longshoremen's union officials and their employers Friday.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce has added its voice to that of various farm groups urging an end to the strike.

Quebec bus crash kills 11

ST. HYACINTHE, Que. (CP) — Eleven members of a senior citizens' club, on their way home after a night at the racetrack, died early today when their chartered bus slid off the rain-soaked Trans-Canada Highway near this town 50 kilometres east of Montreal.

Thirty-nine persons, including the driver, survived the crash. Most were treated and released from hospital, but four remain in serious condition.

Police who spoke to driver Jacques Sauvageau said he told them he was trying to pass a car on a long, curving stretch of highway about 1 a.m. Quebec time when the vehicle began hydroplaning on the slippery pavement and he lost control. It was raining heavily.

The bus fishtailed, with the rear end smashing into three pylons supporting an overpass. The rear third of the vehicle was crushed almost completely on the driver's side and severed from the rest of the bus.

Police said it was one of the few curves on a mostly straight segment of highway.

It appeared the driver was observing the speed limit, they added.

All the passengers were members of the a Victoriaville, Que., senior citizens' club, who had spent the night on an outing to Blue Bonnets Raceway in Montreal.

Victoriaville is east of St. Hyacinthe.

Twenty were treated at Honore Mercier hospital here, but only the four seriously injured remained in hospital.

The tragedy marked the third major bus accident in the province in less than a year.

Last August, 40 persons, most of them mentally or physically disabled members of a club for the handicapped, died at Eastman, Que., in Canada's worst-ever highway accident.

Just days later, another bus crash in St. Sauveur, north of Montreal, killed three schoolchildren on their way home from an outing.

Those two accidents prompted an outcry across the province and led the Quebec government to commission a report on bus safety.

Clark firm on embassy move

OTTAWA (UPC) — Despite opposition from the Arab world, Prime Minister Joe Clark has not changed his decision to move Canada's embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to the disputed city of Jerusalem, a Clark spokesman says.

"Our only comment is that Mr. Clark stands by the comments he made on Tuesday and there is no change in the commitment," Clark's information director Jodi White said Friday.

Clark had told a Tuesday news conference that he "would not want anyone to think that there has been any slackening in our determination" to enact his election promise to move the embassy.

Late Thursday, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald sought to defuse the issue by assuring nine ambassadors of infuriated Arab nations that no move was imminent and Canada would not take sides.

Arab states have threatened to retaliate by cutting all diplomatic and economic ties, a move that could cost Canada $885 million in exports, 55,700 jobs and half its oil imports. The Palestine Liberation Organization hinted at violent reprisals.

Canada "has indicated its support in rhetoric for the State of Israel and we now have an opportunity ... to take an action that will back up what we have been saying," Clark said. "We intend to do it."

The statement appeared to differ from that of Miss MacDonald, who said after her meeting with the Arab ambassadors, "We have made it clear that we would not wish any move we make in this matter to be construed as taking sides in the on-going negotiations ..."

The status of Jerusalem is one of the most bitterly disputed items in the Middle East conflict. Only the Netherlands and 12 Latin American nations locate their embassies in Jerusalem, and none has been added since the 1967 war when Israel occupied the entire city.

Meanwhile in Saudi Arabia, the Islamic Conference today urged the canadian government to reconsider plans for moving the Israel to Jerusalem, the official Saudi news agency said.

A statement issued by the conference's secretariat here said the Clark government's plan hostile to Moslem countries, the agency reported.

In Vancouver, Pierre C. Fortier, president of the Association of Consulting Engineers of Canada, said Canadian consulting engineers could lose millions of dollars worth of business if Canada moves its Israeli embassy.

"There's no doubt that an Arab boycott on doing business with Canada would have a serious effect on consulting engineering businesses," Fortier said in an interview.

"There are at least two dozen major Canadian consulting engineering companies with substantial contracts in various Arab countries," Fortier said.

Pigott engaged as adviser

OTTAWA (CP) — Jean Pigott, the Progressive Conservative MP defeated in her Ottawa-Carleton riding in the federal election, is to serve as a special adviser to Prime Minister Clark on human resources.

Pigott said Friday she is to make recommendations on hiring personnel and dealing with lobbyists and special interest groups.

Pigott said she had considered taking on the chairmanship of the National Capital Commission or the presidency of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, but decided on the human resources job.

Pigott ran a bakery before winning a byelection in 1976 and was Opposition critic on housing in the last Parliament.

Mexico collars runaway well

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Engineers are ringing a huge oil spill from a runaway off-shore well in the Gulf of Mexico to prevent environmental damage, a spokesman for the state petroleum monopoly said Friday.

Pemex spokesman Rogelio Cardenas said a flotation collar made of special plastic material was being laid down around the oval slick, which is about 32 kilometres long and more than one kilometre wide, to keep it from spreading while collector boats scoop up the oil.

Cardenas said Pemex had accepted an offer of help from the Norwegian state petroleum agency and special equipment and technicians are on their way.

"The engineers are working on it and it is being brought under control. There isn't very much danger to the ecology. In fact, it's minimal," said Miguel Tomassino, another Pemex spokesman.

The test well 80 kilometres off shore in Campeche Bay, one of Mexico's richest oilfields, turned gusher and caught fire before dawn Sunday. It is spewing out 30,000 barrels of light oil and comparable amounts of natural gas daily.

Tomassini said two collector boats are scooping up about 15,000 barrels of the spilled oil daily and dumping it in a tanker anchored nearby.

"The other 15,000 barrels is either evaporating because of the heat or is burning off," Tomassino said.

Banged pipe gushed twice

Bad luck, they say, comes in threes.

But two is quite enough, thank you, as far as the peninsula water supply is concerned, Capital Region District spokesman Mike Williams said today.

Water service was restored at 2 p.m. Friday after two breaks in two days in a new section of pipe connecting the main system to a pumping station on Martindale.

"The quality of the pipe is good but it travelled several thousand miles and it was damaged in transit. These things happen sometimes."

Usually they happen rarely.

"It happened to us twice which is a bit of bad luck. When the pipe is banged it can be damaged without showing any outward signs of a problem. It only breaks when the water flows through and it is subjected to pressure."

The first bang must have been quite severe because the pipe broke on Tuesday as soon as water began to flow through it.

The second break came Wednesday in another section of the line after the first break had been repaired and as pressure was being increased.

The second break has been repaired and the pipeline now is operating at 140 pounds pressure, about 10 pounds under its rated capacity.

But the two breaks have caused enough concern to require a full testing of the quarter-mile section.

This test will be conducted in about two weeks by raising pressure to about 200 pounds, about 50 pounds above rated capacity, to see how the pipe responds.

If there are no further breaks, the project engineers will feel confident no other damage occurred during the trip.

While repairs were under way, peninsula residents were asked to conserve water by delaying washing cars or watering lawns. The CRD now has given the go-ahead for normal water use.

Williams, senior design engineer for the CRD, said it was unusual for two breaks to occur in a short section of pipe.

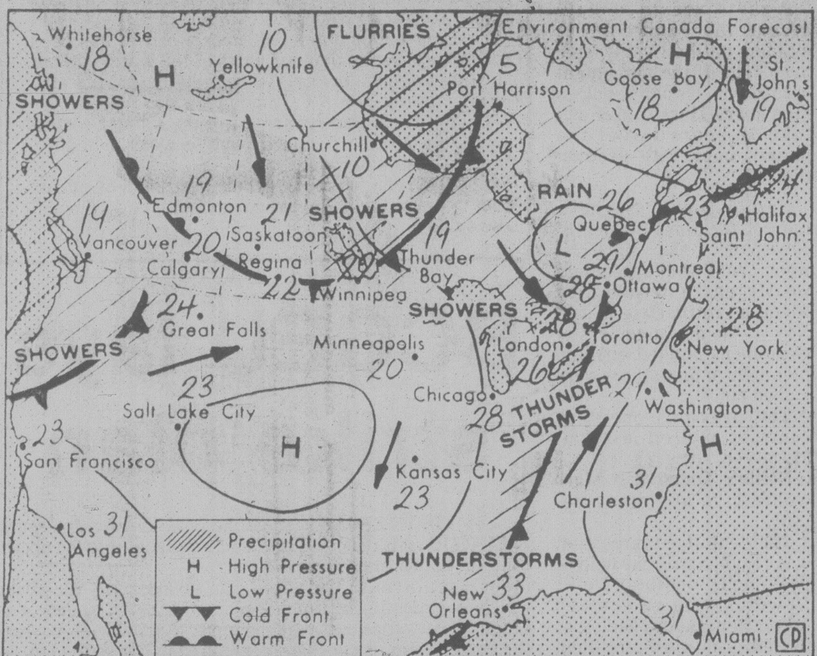

Map valid until noon Sunday

Cloud and showers covered most of the northern parts of the province this morning as a frontal system passed through the Queen Charlotte islands. The front is expected to weaken and move slowly south today spreading clouds and isolated showers to the southern parts of B.C. later today. Some clearing is expected Sunday as the front continues moving south but cool unstable air will give isolated showers to all but the south coast with a chance of some thundershowers over the interior.

Iran, Iraq clash

TEHRAN (AP) — Iraqi border guards shot up an Iranian border post at Shalamchem, near the port city of Khoramshahr in southwestern Iran, the official Pars news agency reported today. No casualties were reported.

The attack Friday was the second reported Iraqi raid in Iran this week. Last Monday Iran said Iraqi jets bombed and strafed several Kurdish villages in northwestern Iran, killing at least six persons and wounding many more.

Pars said "the patience of the Iranian guards" involved in the latest incident at Shalamchem prevented any further clashes. No additional details were available.

Earlier in the week Admiral Ahmad Madani, the governor-general of Khuzestan province, accused the Iraqi government of smuggling large quantities of weapons across the border to arm autonomy-seeking ethnic Arabs.

The border incident Friday came as a crowd of 5,000 Iranians demonstrated noisily but peacefully outside the Iraqi embassy in Tehran to protest Monday's air raid.

Cleaners tackle intruder

A city police spokesman said the cleaning staff spotted a man in the store after hearing glass shattering in a jewelry display counter at about 3:30 a.m.

They tackled him and held him until police arrived.

Officers recovered between $4,000 to $5,000 in rings from the man's pocket.

The spokesman said the thief apparently entered the mall through an insecure door and then forced his way into the department store.

Stab death in Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Harold Demoskoff, 37, of Vancouver was found stabbed to death early Friday in an underground parking lot in the West End.

Police said he had been stabbed a number of times and his throat was slashed. The body was discovered by a resident of the apartment.

Feeling old today? So's Donald Duck!

It was June 9, 1934, that Donald was introduced to the world in The Wise Little Hen. Since then he has delighted millions with his jabbering temper tantrums and frantic squawks that might have been unprintable if anyone could understand him.

And Donald would probably go into another of his rages if he knew the sound that made him famous was inspired by a goat. But that's the word straight from the voice behind the bill — 74-year-old Clarence (Ducky) Nash.

"I use to feed my pet goat on a bottle and it made a funny little noise," recalled Nash, who was born in Oklahoma and grew up in Missouri. "'Gee,' I thought, 'I can do that voice.' "

Nash, who retired 10 years ago, said that while Donald's screen debut was in The Wise Little Hen, it was in a later cartoon, The Orphans Benefit, that his character began to develop.

Girl, 13 gets 114 years for murder

She and four other teenagers aged 12 to 17, all of Miami, were charged with kicking and beating an 85-year-old man while robbing his home in February. He died a month later.

Circuit Judge Jon Gordon said Friday he will retain veto power over parole decisions for 38 years.

Postell, the only one of the five tried so far, was convicted May 5 of second-degree murder.

The actual sentence was 99 years for second-degree murder to be served concurrently with 99 years for burglary, and 15 years for strong-arm robbery.

Police probe letter bombs

LONDON (UPI) — A letter bomb exploded in the Berkshire town of Streatley today, just one day after four bomb blasts at two Birmingham mail sorting offices, slightly injuring five postal workers.

Police said a mailman suffered shock after the letter bomb exploded in his mailbag as he was making his morning round in Streatley, a small rural town 40 miles west of London.

A police spokesman refused to comment on possible terrorist connections in today's blast, but said police were investigating possible links between the Streatley and Birmingham explosions.

Friday night's letter-bomb explosions in Birmingham slightly injured six persons and destroyed thousands of letters.

Postal officials said three incendiary devices exploded within 30 minutes of each other at the Post Office's main Birmingham sorting office, wounding one man slightly.

The fourth bomb exploded at a district sorting office in Hockley, where five persons were wounded and a fire broke out.

More than 2,000 workers were evacuated from the main sorting office which handles 1.5 million letters a day.

"We are surmising that all four devices were posted in the Birmingham area at roughly the same time because of the timing of the explosions," a Post Office spokesman told reporters.

It is not learned to whom the letters were addressed but officials said it is unlikely any mail will be delivered in the Birmingham area today.

U.K. trade stats sour

LONDON (Reuter) — Industrial strife contributed to huge trade deficits for Britain in February, March and April and even held up publication of the trade figures themselves until Friday.

Businessmen were shocked at the size of the deficits, which showed Britain had gone into the red by hundreds of millions of dollars in the three months. A more balanced trade position had been expected.

After being held up by labor unrest among civil servants, many of whom have now reached pay agreements, the figures were finally released Friday by the government.

They showed Britain's current account balances of payments totalled deficits of $1.27 billion in February, $316 million in March and $434 million in April.

The figures provide a pessimistic background for the new Conservative government's first budget Tuesday, which many Britons expect to produce substantial cuts in income taxes.

The department of trade, which issued the figures, said they had been heavily distorted by industrial disputes, including a nationwide truckers' strike last winter.

Corinne Cote, making her first television appearance as the wife of Quebec Premier Rene Levesque, said Levesque was "much easier to get along with than most would think, but he's not much use in the kitchen." He likes to spend his free weekends watching films, reading science fiction and playing Scrabble. Does she beat her husband at Scrabble? "All the time, but I'm not supposed to say so," she said.

Mark Porteous, company manager of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, has resigned in disagreement with the handling of an internal dispute involving artistic control of the company.

Colin McQuillan, 19 months old, of St. Paul, Minn., can breathe on his own in his sleep for the first time in his life despite being afflicted with a rare ailment called Ondine's Curse, which causes automatic body functions to cease after sleep. Doctors have implanted a second pace-maker into the blond, 22-pound boy in a 3½-hour operation.

Jerome Vaccarezza, 5, of Washington Township, N.J., was walking to his seat for the opening act of the circus when he came too close to the leopard cage and one of them slashed his throat. He died later in hospital.

Dutch millionaire Pieter Menten, 80 — due to be re-tried on war crimes charges — is out of the hospital a week after collapsing while being read the terms of a warrant for his arrest.

JAGGER

Rock star Mick Jagger has been ordered to pay his estranged wife, Bianca, $3,000 a week for at least a month — until another hearing is held on her divorce case. In Los Angeles Friday, Superior Court Judge Harry Shafer ordered the Rolling Stones singer to pay the allotments for a governess and schooling for the couple's seven-year-old child, Jade. Mrs. Jagger, 28, said the couple spent about $450,000 a year on expenses before they separated, and that Jagger grossed $13 million on a recent band tour. Jagger, 35, was not in court for the hearing Friday.

A Superior Court judge in Palo Alto, Calif., has upheld the death penalty sentence for Richard Chase, 28, convicted as the "vampire killer" who murdered six people and drank their blood.

Two Canadians and an Austrian have died while trying to climb 6,120-metre Alpamayo Mountain in northern Peru. They were identified as Pierre Cadot of Montreal, William Porrit of Toronto and Austrian Ulrike Hladik.

Sir Norman Hartnell, 77, the royal dressmaker who designed miniskirts and hot pants but scorned more-revealing fashions as "strip-tease clothes for dirty old men," died Friday of a heart attack in Windsor, England.

An international search for Werner Gruener, the one man acquitted in the murder of Toronto shoeshine boy Emanuel Jacques almost two years ago, has ended in Athens. Gruener, 31, was being sought for a Crown appeal of his sentence.

The manager of a McDonald's restaurant in Louisville, Ky., has no intention of paying a $200 ransom demand for return of an eight-foot statue of the store's mascot, Ronald McDonald. Said manager Susan Tolson, when asked if the ransom would be paid. "I just turned it in to our insurance."

A rash promise

The possible consequences of Joe Clark's pre-election promise to move the Canadian embassy in Israel to Jerusalem are now obvious even to him.

Anyone with the slightest knowledge of Middle East affairs was aware that the question of who governs Jerusalem — the second holiest site to Moslems, as well as a sacred place for Christians and Jews — is a central issue to the Arab countries.

For that reason, plans have been put forward sporadically to have the Holy City come under UN control with access guaranteed to all.

The proposition doesn't interest Israel in the least. The Israelis say they now provide access to all faiths, and that Jerusalem is and always will be the capital of the country. To reinforce their claim internationally, they have spent much time trying to persuade countries to move their embassies from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

Even the United States has refrained from doing so, recognizing that the future of Jerusalem will have to be part of a peace settlement involving the Palestinians and other issues.

During the election campaign, Clark compared his position on Jerusalem to the Canadian initiative in establishing diplomatic relations with communist China. It was a silly statement.

When Canada recognized China, there already were embassies in Peking from Great Britain, Denmark, Holland, France, Norway, Sweden, Yugoslavia, Finland and Switzerland as well as many other countries. The only major concern for Canada, which was doing hundreds of millions of dollars of business annually with Peking, was whether the move would alienate Washington.

But there were many prominent Americans, including Robert Kennedy, who were leaning toward recognition of Peking.

With Jerusalem, Clark is indeed in an awkward position. If he goes back on his word, he will seem to have bowed to Arab threats of economic retaliation. Whatever he does, he will appear inept in foreign affairs.

External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald indicated yesterday that the government's facesaving response will be to refuse to withdraw Clark's pledge but to promise (to the Arabs) not to fulfill it.

A possible but unsatisfactory compromise might be to locate a Canadian trade office in Jerusalem while keeping the embassy in Tel Aviv. But one can't help but wonder why Clark landed his government in such a dilemma in the first place.

To be cynical, let's hope it was an attempt to win Jewish votes rather than a matter of principle. At least he would have had a sensible reason for his decision.

Out for dinner

From the Every-Cloud-Has-A-Silver-Lining-Department:

The rapidly rising food costs of last year did save B.C. taxpayers almost $20 million.

A provincial agriculture ministry report shows that the government spent $11.8 million in payments under the farm income assurance program, compared with about $32 million in 1977.

The government pays farmers to cover their basic costs of production when those costs are not covered by the sale of their produce. The report explains that the higher prices consumers paid, especially for beef and dairy products, went a long way to cover the farmers' costs so that much lower government subsidies were necessary.

The gross farm cash receipts for B.C. farmers were $525.5 million in 1978, up 16 per cent from the previous year. The net increase in farmers' income was 12.9 per cent.

The figures show that every British Columbian saved about $8.50 in provincial taxes because of higher food prices. Let's all go out for one good dinner!

CLAUDE ADAMS

Of basketball and priests

Gen. Jorge Videla, president of Argentina, was sermon's subject.

WASHINGTON — One of the most grotesque of American springtime rituals is that university body-hunt called "athletic recruiting."

Consider the case of Ralph Sampson, a seven-foot, four-inch high school basketball prodigy who has been wooed, badgered, sweet-talked and driven to near nervous exhaustion for two years by up to 200 universities seeking the use of his extraordinary body.

One of the schools spent $10,000 in a vain effort. They worked on him, his mother, his coach and his teachers.

Sampson, a shy and softspoken giant described by one of his teachers as a "weak" student, made up his mind this week, sort of, at a press concerence. His comments demonstrated the pressure he's been under.

The night before he hadn't slept. He took out the garbage at 2 a.m. and wandered the streets of Harrisonburg, Va., by himself. Later, he had to sneak out the back door of his high school to avoid the television crews and the recruiters lurking near the schoolyard.

Probably not enough

In the hours leading up to the press conference, he changed his mind at least 50 times. Finally, he walked into his high school gym, approached a bank of microphones, and murmured "Virginia," meaning the University of Virginia.

"I don't want to make anybody unhappy," he said plaintively. "I haven't signed yet. But it'll probably be Virginia."

At the word "probably" his mother put her head in her hands and his high school coach squirmed in his chair. Meanwhile, across the land, at least 199 coaches who had lusted after his rebounding and shooting ability sighed at their loss.

Sampson will only be going to college for two years before jumping to the pros. His mother says he is 25 pounds underweight and needs seasoning.

"What are your academic interests?" a reporter asked.

"I don't have any yet," Sampson replied.

The coach of the University of Virginia basketball team immediately predicted that a national championship was in his grasp next year, thanks to the big nervous kid with the superstar touch.

People close to Sampson are worried. "I hope they promised to take care of him, 'cause he'll certainly need it," commented a member of the faculty at his high school.

An insurance company in Des Moines, Iowa, has come up with a plan to cover clergymen, like doctors and lawyers, against malpractice suits.

The Church Mutual Insurance Co. says that the plan is aimed at those men of the cloth who counsel members of their flock on marital and childrearing problems. Company president Max Johnson says he has heard of "dozens of instances" of lawsuits against ministers whose soothing advice turned sour.

Incredible? "We used to think that no one would ever hold up a church during service either," Johnson told skeptics.

Premiums for $300,000-a-year coverage will be about $20 — a small price to pay for that hell on earth called litigation.

Argentine embassy officials, along with that country's generals, admirals and colonels, strode into St. Matthew's cathedral here recently for a special mass celebrating Argentina's national day, they expected nothing more than an hour or two of serene prayer.

For a junta that has been described as tyrannical by Amnesty International, what better public relations gimmick is there than a solemn ceremony in a holy place in a world capital?

But the celebrant of the mass, the Rev. Sean O'Malley of the Washington archdiocese, had other ideas. His sermon drove the 300 Argentinians from the church and left them grumbling about upstart priests in pulpits.

No politics

Father O'Malley's lack of tact consisted of a sermon in which he related scripture and the thoughts of Pope John Paul II on social justice to the brutality of Argentina's Videla regime, which has been accused of imprisoning and killing thousands of citizens since it took power in 1974.

He referred to Herod's slaughter of the innocents. At that point, a high-ranking general left his pew, and the rest of the congregation followed.

"Priests have no place in politics," grumbled one of the military men. "He should have given a sermon on another subject, like the love of God."

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

The impossible dream: It's beginning to work

Bernard Gillie may still be dreaming the impossible dream. The job he has taken on — heading a commission to decide the educational needs and priorities of Victoria's school system — is such a Herculean task that no mortal may be able to complete it.

But Gillie and his six commission members are trying. And while they're doing so, they're providing the forum for some of the most interesting public debates heard in Victoria for years.

The forum is the public hearings the commission has called to try to ascertain public opinion on such questions as: What are our children not learning in school that they should be? What is your opinion on instructional methods used in the schools? What is your opinion of discipline in the schools? Why are the majority of parents so apathetic about what is going on in their children's schools?

The hearing this week was held on Tuesday evening at Richmond elementary in a bright, cheerful well-equipped gymnasium. About 40 people attended, perhaps one-third of them teachers or others involved in education professionally, the rest parents.

In a way, Gillie would like to have bigger crowds. He says it would be nice to see hundreds of parents concerned enough to attend such a meeting. But in another way, he wouldn't.

"I don't know what I'd do with them if they came," he said. "A group this size pretty well takes up the evening." He's right. Between formal briefs, informal comments, and some dialogue, the meeting went on for 3½ hours, and could easily have gone on longer.

The 40 people brought many different perspectives to the hearing. They saw different things as problems. They approached those problems from different angles. Some of them disagreed energetically, both about the definition of current problems and about the possible solutions to those problems.

One outstanding impression, however, remained the same for speaker after speaker: These people cared.

They cared passionately about children and about the world their children would enter when they finished school.

The teachers who came were teachers who each day watch kids struggling to cope with "the system," who try to help above and beyond the call of duty, who see how much more they could do if only things were different.

The parents who came see their children growing up in a world where rapid change is the only constant, who understand, perhaps dimly, that their children are not being prepared for that world, and who know that either the preparation or the world needs to be changed.

When those people came together, the result was a discussion that was provocative, intense and thoughtful. There were no political slogans bandied about, no easy answers given the commission, no problems defined in black-and-white terms. Everyone knew there were no simple definitions and no easy answers.

They talked about reading. Is reading as important today as it was a few years ago, now that children can get their information from so many other sources, especially television? If reading becomes a neglected skill, will we develop an elite of "readers," an elite that will eventually use their reading skills to gain power in our society? In any case, how can parents or teachers motivate kids to read, when television is so much easier?

They talked about history and how appallingly little Canadian schoolchildren know of Canadian history. Why is history always seen as dry and dull by Canadian kids? Is it the curriculum that is at fault, or the teachers? And what do you say to a kid who wants to know why history is important anyway?

They talked about discipline. Why do some schools seem to have so many more discipline problems than others? If we suspend children who are too disruptive in the classroom, aren't we just giving them an opportunity to go out and get into worse trouble on the streets? What sort of resources can a school provide to help a disruptive, troubled child with home problems? What sort of resources can a school afford to provide?

They talked about grading, compulsory attendance, and why we make every kid do more and more of what he's poor at (in the hope that he'll become proficient) while neglecting his existing strengths.

When 11 p.m. came, the janitor had to close up the school so they went out onto the playground in smaller groups and kept on talking about these things.

I don't think they came up with a single concrete solution to any of their questions. I don't think they provided a single neat recommendation that Gillie and his commmissioners can write down in their report.

All the same, they did a couple of very exciting things. First, they moved through the usual jargon and rhetoric of school politics ("budget-balancing" vs "educational quality," "neighborhood schools" vs "school closures" to talk about things that are real, things that matter to themselves as parents and teachers. Second, they proved that apathy has not completely taken over Greater Victoria, that there are many ordinary people in our community who care and who want to improve things.

That is probably sufficient reason to make the commission worthwhile.—B.McL.

No airport, thanks

There has recently been considerable publicity about a proposal to build an airport at Work Point in south Esquimalt. As residents of this area, we are adamantly opposed to such a development. It would destroy the residential integrity of one of the nicest living areas in this city.

An airport at Work Point would have at least three obvious negative results. First, the frequency of incoming and outgoing flights would result in a continuous disruption to the existing tranquil and relatively undisturbed environment. Second, a monumental and similarly disruptive influx of traffic would occur which existing local roads would be hard-pressed to support. Third, a beautiful park-like open area which looks out to the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the Olympic Mountains would doubtless wind up under runway and parking lots.

What about the financial and safety factors? According to one knowledgeable individual, the quoted price tag of less than $1 million is at least $6 million low. Even more important is the fact that this is a densely populated area which should not be subjected to the ever-present risk of human error and accident. Finally, why should the proposed airport, with all of its negative implications for the surrounding area be dumped into Esquimalt after Victoria and Oak Bay have said they want no part of it? — Patrick and Colleen Wolfe, 1035 Bewdley Avenue.

May one express to Mr. Ward-Harris one's profound appreciation for his review of Suffer the Children: The Story of Thalidomide. (Prevue, June 1).

Not many days ago thoughts on another subject brought to mind the figure of Justice in the stained glass window which one saw treading the steps to art classes in the red Law Courts building in Winnipeg. One thought, "Yes, Justice is blind." The figure upon which I looked so many years ago represented to me truth and nobility, though my young mind equated it with law.

Mr. Ward-Harris's fine mind and superlative writing expressed that which in my youth I did not recognize. — A. Miller, Victoria.

LEVESQUE . . . clear winner at PQ convention

By WILLIAM JOHNSON
The Globe and Mail

Le Parti Quebecois, c'est moi, Rene Levesque can now say. Last weekend's party convention made an honest man of him. He is now in total control of the party, as he has never been before. His line is now, for the first time, the party line. There is no other.

The PQ emerged from its last convention before the referendum united, with an overwhelming consensus on where it is going and how. There is now no significant opposition to Rene Levesque within the party, no faction challenging his leadership. The famous controversy over "etapisme" has ended: the party is now committed to the gradualist road to sovereignty with all the moral weight of a policy adopted overwhelmingly by a convention after a lengthy debate.

Now, at last, it is clear what the PQ stands for. All the rest is strategy.

I was astonished, watching the 1,590 delegates go about their business, to see the extent of the consensus that had grown in the party. Issues that divided the members right down the centre in 1974 passed through this convention as easily as though God had spoken.

For Rene Levesque, the biennial convention was an unmitigated triumph. Over the years since 1968, he has fought for his ideal of sovereignty for Quebec coupled with an economic association with Canada. The party never before followed him all the way. While he spoke of sovereignty-association, the party spoke of "the accession to independence." The party program, in its first chapter, put forward the ideal of "realizing the political sovereignty of Quebec." It did couple that ideal with a commitment to "propose to Canada a mutually advantageous economic association." But what that meant, nobody knew.

Now the PQ has given content to the proposed association. Association, as in the expression "sovereignty-association," henceforth means something. It's not subject to arbitrary interpretation according to whim or the popular currents of the moment. For the PQ's credibility, that was important.

Also important, for Rene Levesque, is the fact that he has now closed the legitimacy gap. Last October he announced the government's position going into the referendum: he would be asking the people of Quebec for a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association. He promised that a majority yes vote would be considered a mandate for negotiating sovereignty-association, but that no unilateral action would be taken to achieve sovereignty in the absence of an agreement with English-speaking Canada on association.

This is what was called the "strategy of the hyphen." It introduced a new stage in the peregrinations of gradualism. It meant that English-speaking Canada would hold a veto over sovereignty until the PQ had obtained a new mandate, either by a second referendum or, more likely, by a general election.

There was considerable disquiet in the party: to some, it looked as though the PQ was watering down its commitment to independence. Others found it high-handed that Premier Levesque simply announced a new policy, one that was seriously discrepant from the party program, on a matter so utterly fundamental to the very existence of the party.

To act so imperiously was risky with a party as committed to grassroots democracy as the PQ. The members have always believed profoundly in the import of their deliberations at the conventions.

But the convention shows that Levesque now has the trust of the members. The set of resolutions adopted last Saturday, which emanated from the party's executive committee, has the effect of reassuring the rank and file that the PQ really is committed unqualifiedly to sovereignty, while at the same time leaving room for the hyphen strategy as a means of winning the greatest possible number of votes in the referendum.

The government can now go into the referendum campaign aiming its appeal both at separatists and federalists who are nationalists. To the former, the government proclaims its long-term commitment to sovereignty, while asking the members to accept an attempt to reach it by negotiating an association with Canada. To federalists, the PQ can now propose a yes vote in the referendum as the best means of getting constitutional change off the ground. A no vote would end the willingness of English Canada to move.

If the PQ wins its referendum, in this scenario, and English-Canada refuses to agree to sovereignty-association, as everyone knows it would, the stage is set for the best election issue in the world, an election which will be for keeps, fought on the issue of sovereignty itself.

The major elements of the strategy are in place since last weekend. There now remains to adopt the wording of the referendum question and to choose the date. Both will be done behind closed doors at a meeting June 16 and 17 of the PQ's national council. They will then be announced by June 24, national feast of the Quebecois.

STRAY FEATHERS

harold hosford

The lead for this story could be — With "friends" like this, who needs enemies?

The "friends" I refer to are a pair of Brewer's Blackbirds. The first showed up at the bird feeder around the beginning of May. I remember their arrival because they were the first of their kind to grace my avian diner.

The glossy, iridescent, purplish-black male led the way. He was obviously nervous about the situation. He neither took too well to the commotion of finches and cowbirds that were then attending the repast, nor did he like the enquiring glances of the homo sapiens on the other side of the window.

But, fixing them all with a baleful but alert stare from his remarkable yellow eyes, he overcame his fears and soon established himself as a confident "regular" at the tray.

Not long after his arrival, a dull, sooty-grey bird of the same size — but without the yellow eyes — began accompanying him on his visits. She was his mate and the two of them soon became fixtures around the yard.

Their presence seemed to suggest they were nesting somewhere nearby but, while I occasionally idly speculated on where, I never carried my interest further.

As occupants of the yard, those two blackbirds were delightful companions. Instead of fleeing in fear as many birds might, they seemed to be attracted by my presence. If I came out to do a little gardening, I'd usually find the yard empty. But it wouldn't be long before the two of them would arrive, to the accompaniment of a couple of loud "checks," and settle down near where I was working.

* * *

They got as tame as a pair of Robins, following me wherever my horticultural wanderings took me. If I turned up the soil anywhere, they quickly dashed in to snap up the little wiggly creatures I'd exposed. If I was mowing, they weren't far behind the mower, again snapping up the insects disturbed by the machine.

I began to look on those blackbirds as true "friends" and, in the egocentric way of people, thought my feelings were reciprocated. After all, didn't they arrive when I did; and didn't they sit confidently in the shrubs, less than an arm's length away, passing complimentary remarks about my garden?

Well, be that as it may, I soon discovered that in the bird world there are friends and friends.

The revelation came when my wife and I took an evening stroll through a vacant piece of land behind our house. The blackbirds were far from our minds when we set out, but they quickly changed all that.

We had hardly stepped off the road into the field when, out of nowhere, the two of them appeared and hovered over us, "checking" in a peculiarly nervous way.

I knew enough about Brewer's Blackbirds to realize that we'd stumbled on to their nesting territory.

Now, I had no interest in their nest, also my intentions were of the highest. But none of this seemed to get across to those birds, because for the next few minutes, as we continued our walk, we were subjected to the most audacious outburst of physical and verbal abuse, the likes of which I hadn't encountered since the bird-nesting days of my youth.

A short time later, the incident almost forgotten, I was back in the yard fussing with the compost heap when, with a cheery "check," my two "friends" appeared — apparently none the worse for our encounter in the field.

It was obvious that our "friendship" was still alive — but they'd made it clear that if it was to remain so, it would be on their terms.

Such is life!

ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM

OTTAWA — Could we lay out a scenario?

Let us imagine, just for openers, that you were elected in 1957 at the unusual age of 29 as a Conservative MP from Nova Scotia.

Let us imagine, further, that you have been approved eight more times by the voters — in 1958, 1962, 1963, 1965, 1968, 1972, 1974 and 1979. Which makes you, by now, the youngest man in the House of Commons with 22 years of continuous service under your belt.

Let us stretch the imagination just a bit further and project that you were asked two years ago by Joe Clark to assume the presidency of the party — even though you don't speak French — so your leader can keep in line the old guard who respects you and will soften the mutterings about the new leader who first of all must unite his caucus.

To complete the mental gymnastics — imagine that it is now Monday and that when the Joe Clark cabinet is announced, you are not in it. You are by now, of course, all of 51.

The man's name is Bob Coates and the Tories — famous first of all for eating their offspring in public — have flamed into their initial flap by enraging the right wing of the party with a cabinet selection that includes a 35-year-old unelected Robert de Cotret and excludes the nine-times elected Coates.

"I've been used," a bitter Coates told a colleague when he got the news.

He is not a man of means, as could be surmised after 25 years as an MP but — to the feelers of moving to the Senate as a sop to his anger — he said Wednesday, "I am not a political prostitute."

What we have here is a fallout from Prime Minister Clark's daring attempt to leap a whole generation in his cabinet-making. It is an unusual problem, since Clark — just 40 this week and still regarded by so many in his caucus as a lucky young man who somehow stumbled into the leadership despite being supported by only 3 MP's — is now boss of the 25 of 29 ministers who are older than he is.

As a man who is still insecure in so many ways, he faced the problem of selecting men who are as old as his father.

The red-tempered Woolliams, he of Calgary leather-lunged fame, is livid. The volatile Patrick Nowlan of Nova Scotia, another passed over, is enraged. Hees would be bemused, Hamilton philosophical. They were never considered in the running.

But what has inflamed the Tory old guard has been the slap in the face to Coates. There were eight separate ministers angry when they learned — some of them were still asking reporters in the reception line at Rideau Hall — that Coates was not included.

A minister who was on Clark's side says, "Look, you don't realize the courage of the guy. He had a whole generation to leap. He had to look into those guys' eyes and tell them it wasn't to be. Trudeau never had to do that. Clark was stuck with the vestiges of the Diefenbaker era. He took the whole thing and leaped 20 years down the scale."

It's true. Pierre Trudeau inherited the nucleus of his cabinet from Lester Pearson. A major reason why he was defeated is that he never renewed his cabinet with new blood that impressed the public.

The nervous Clark, aware that people think him nervous, did his best to yank his first cabinet back to near his own age. The average age of 29 picks is 48.

He just may have overreacted a mite too far. A token toss to the old guard — a harmless junior post — could have disarmed an insulted right wing that feels itself humiliated and has always been famous for blood sport.

Bob Coates, now the third senior MP in the Commons behind John Diefenbaker and Dinsdale, says quietly, "I told my colleagues today that, with TV, an individual MP is a very powerful person. The game has changed."

There is dynamite loaded in that observation.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

On Language

Not a matter to be taken for granite

The most saluted man in America is Richard Stans. Legions of school children place their hands over their hearts to pledge allegiance to the flag, "and to the republic for Richard Stans."

With all due patriotic fervor, the same kids salute "one nation, under guard." Some begin with "I pledge a legion to the flag," others with "I led the pigeons to the flag." This is not a new phenomenon. When they come to "one nation, indivisible," this generation is as likely to say, "One naked individual" as a previous generation was to murmur, "One nation in a dirigible," or, "One nation and a vegetable."

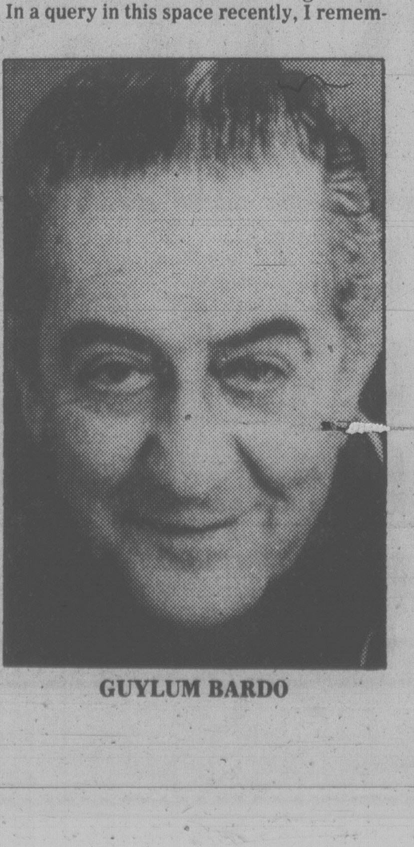
"The Stars Bangled Banger" is a great source for these creative mishearings: "the Donzerly light," "oh, the ramrods we washed," "grapefruit through the night" that our flag was still there.

Then there is the good Mrs. Shirley Murphy of the 23rd Psalm: "Shirley, good Mrs. Murphy, shall follow me all the days of my life." (Surely, goodness and mercy would not lead us into Penn Station.)

We all hear the same sounds. But until we are directed by the written word to the intended meaning, we may give free rein to our imagination to invent our own meanings. ("Free rein" has to do with letting horses run; some people are changing the metaphor to government, spelling it "free reign.") Children make sounds to fit the sense in their own heads. In "God Bless America," the misheard line "Through the night with a light from a bulb" makes more practical sense than "a light from above." Writes David Thomas of Maine: "In Sunday school I used to sing, 'I will follow Henry Joyce,' part of a hymn. Who Henry Joyce was didn't concern me — I was following him at the top of my lungs. when I learned to read, I found the words were 'I will follow and rejoice.'"

Sometimes that awakining never takes place. "To all intents and purposes," a nice old phrase, is sometimes spoken as — and written as — "for all intensive purposes." With the onset of adulthood, correction should not be taken for granted — or "taken for granite." In the song "Lucy in the sky With Diamonds" (its title subliminally plugging LSD), the phrase "the girl with kaleidoscope eyes" came across to one grandmother as "the girl with colitis goes by."

What is this mistaken hearing called? In a query in this space recently, I remembered that I had called bandleader Guy Lombardo "Guylum Bardo," and asked for other examples of "false homonyms." That was a slight misnomer; homonyms are words pronounced the same, but with different meanings. Along with the other examples sent in — crooner Victor Moan, actress Sophie Aloran, musician "Big Spider" Beck, pro-football back Frank O'Harris, novelist Gorvey Doll — came instruction from linguists too mentionable to numerate. In each category, childlike translation can lead to semantic change.



GUYLUM BARDO

(1) The Guylum Bardo syndrome — the simple misdivision of words — is called metanalysis. Many of the words we use correctly today are mistaken divisions of the past: a "napron" in Middle English became an "apron" — the "n" slid over to the left; an "ekename" of six centuries ago became a "nickname" — the "n" slid to the right.

In a future century, some of today's metanalyses (for "wrong cuttings") may become accepted English. An exorbitant charge is called "a nominal egg," perhaps committed by a "next-store neighbor;" some runners, poised at the starting line, hear, "On your market — set — go!" Millions of children consider the letter of the alphabet between "k" and "p" to be "ellemeno." Meteorologists on television who speak of "a patchy fog" do not realize that many creative viewers take that to be "Apache fog," which comes in on little cat feet to scalp the unsettled settler. Affiants seeking official witness go to a land called "Notar Republic,' and Danny Boy, hero of "The Londonderry Air," casts a backward glance at what is often thought of as "The London Derriere." Future historians may wonder why chicken-hearted journalists coveted "the Pullet Surprise."

(2) The "Jose, can you see?" syndrome — the transmutation of words when they pass through different cultures or languages — is known to linquists as the Law of Hobson-Jobson. British soldiers in India heard the Mohammedan cry "Ya-Hasan, ya-Husain!" and called it "hobson-jobson." Noel Perrin at Dartmouth College reports that American soldiers in Japan transmuted a popular Japanese song, "Shi-i-na-na Yaru," into "She Ain't Got No Yo-Yo." Similarly, "O Tannenbaum" is sometimes rendered "Oh, atom bomb."

(3) Semantic change can come from malapropisms, named after Mrs. Malaprop, a chracter in The Rivals, a 1775 play by Richard Sheridan. More people than you suspect read and pronounce "misled" as "mizled," and the verb "to misle" will one day challenge "to mislead." Others hum what they call "the bronze lullaby," though it must spin Brahms in his grave. One fascinating malapropism is "to hold in escarole," which combines the escrow function with the slang metaphor of money as lettuce.

(4) Folk etymology is the term for the creation of new words by mistake or misunderstanding or mispronunciation. "Tawdry," for example, came from Saint Audrey's, a place where cheap merchandise was sold. In today's language, "Harebrained" is often giddily and irresponsibly misspelled "hairbrained," perhaps on the notion that the hair is near the brain.

The slurred "and" is one of the prolific changers of phrases. When "hard and fast" is spoken quickly, it becomes "hard 'n' fast," which sometimes gets transformed to "harden-fast rules." In the same way, the old "whole kit 'n' caboodle" is occasionally written as "kitten caboodle," a good name for a satchel in which to carry a cat. ("Up and atom!" is not a member of this group; it belongs with those Christmas carolers singing, "Oh, atom bomb.")

A 23-year-old man was given concurrent, four-year penitentiary terms Friday in Victoria provincial court for two Victoria holdups.

Jamie William Ramsey, of 595 Gorge Road East, pleaded guilty Monday to robbery with threats of violence, armed robbery, and breaking and entering and was remanded until Friday for sentencing by Judge William Ostler.

The robbery charges were in connection with a May 28 holdup at Freddy The Freeloader's, 1537 Fort, in which $610.74 was obtained after a weapon was simulated and a holdup Sunday at the Niagara Grocery, 579 Niagara, in which $100 was obtained after a knife was shown.

"I've had a lot of difficulties," Ramsey said Monday. "Unfortunately, I drink.

"Lord, I'm tired, I've blown everything. I'm asking for help, I don't want to blow my life."

The break-in occurred June 2 at Zaccarelli and Sons Blacksmiths, 2315 Government, and a truck was stolen from the premises.

Defence lawyer John Hills told the court Ramsey was a complex person who admitted to drug dependency, an alcohol problem and psychiatric problems. Hills said until June of 1976, Ramsey had no previous serious criminal convictions.

On June 28, 1976, in Vancouver, Ramsey was convicted of robbery and was handed a three-year sentence.

Hills said his client served one year of the sentence before being placed on day parole. He said Ramsey's troubles began immediately on parole, stemming from alcohol, drugs and pills. His parole was suspended and Ramsey was returned to William Head penitentiary to serve out his term. However, due to infractions of prison rules, Ramsey was transfered to the B.C. Penitentiary.

Ostler said the offences were ones of extreme gravity and noted that Ramsey was on mandatory supervision at the time of the robberies.

The judge said he was "encouraged and impressed" by Ramsey's submissions Monday in court, both in his candor and sincerity. Ostler called it the "first step out of the wilderness to rehabilitate yourself."

Ostler also stated he was satisfied that Ramsey required deep and sustained counselling for psychiatric, drug and alcohol problems and said the institution at Matsqui had facilities for him.

Ostler imposed the four-year sentences for the holdups, two years for the break-in, and a one-month term for failing to remain at the scene of an accident April 15 in Vancouver, all sentences to be served concurrently.

Judge Harold Alder sentenced 24-year-old Richard Allan Smith, of 2324 Dowler Place, to 14 days in jail after Smith changed his plea to guilty on a charge of possession of stolen property.

Defence lawyer Jasper Bomhof told the court that friends of Smith's sister had left the guitar at his home and that Smith's actual involvement was minimal.

Alder, who also placed Smith on six months probation, said the offence was deliberate and there was no excuse for it.

Fines totalling $600 were handed 21-year-old David Alexander Bruce, of 1126 Oxford, who pleaded guilty to dangerous driving and obstructing a peace officer.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Bruce and a companion on motorcycles were spotted at about 9:30 a.m. on the Pat Bay Highway doing speeds between 110 and 120 km/h. Saanich police began a 12-kilometre pursuit which reached speeds of 130 km/h in an 80 km/h zone until the motorbikes turned eastward on Amity Drive, going through a stop sign at Lochside. Mulligan said Bruce's bike was doing 100 km/h in a 50 km/h zone on Amity.

After finally stopping, court was told Bruce explained to Sgt. Robert Pringle that other bikers said it was easy to shake the police.

Alder levied a $500 fine on the dangerous driving and another $100 for obstructing Pringle.

A co-accused entered not guilty pleas and the case was set for trial Oct. 22.

A 10-day jail term was given 20-year-old Kenneth Scrimbit, of 3411 Happy Valley Road, after he pleaded guilty to driving while his licence was suspended May 19.

Fined $400 each for drinking-driving offences were 33-year-old Clifford Malcolm Danroth, of 8027 Galbraith Close, and 20-year-old Robert Leslie Scott, of 1334 Pembroke.

Folkfest preview Sunday

Sixth year of Folkfest, the Canada Week Celebration sponsored by the Inter-Cultural Association of Greater Victoria, will have a preview Sunday from 12 noon to 4 p.m. in Market Square.

The preview will consist of a folkloric fashion show and performances by various ethnic groups.

The Folkfest 1979 celebration will incorporate a salute to the International Year of the Child expressed in an international doll display in the Hillside Mall during the week of June 18-25, a joint exhibition with the Emily Carr Arts Centre of children's art at the McPherson Playhouse June 22-30, and children's day at the Inter-Cultural village in Centennial Square June 26.

The National Film Board's Canada Week Film Festival will also incorporate child-oriented films as part of its program at the McPherson June 25-30.

Besides the Inter-Cultural Village consisting of 14 international kiosks offering ethnic foods, handicrafts and entertainment, there will be handicraft displays at City Hall and various stores and libraries, entertainment of many kinds, carillon concerts by Herman Bergink, an inter-faith service in the Square and a dance at Cedar Hill Community Centre.

A second Folkfest Preview will take place in Cedar Hill Mall, Saturday June 16. Displays will be continuous throughout the following week — and the Inter-Cultural Village will open June 25, remaining open through July 2.

Resort run cancelled

The Wiz musical visiting Vancouver

Pop go the eyeballs! Why? It's The Wiz, of course. The yellow brick road that leads to Oz will bring Dorothy (Lillias D. White) and Toto to Vancouver's Queen Elizabeth Theatre June 19.

The Wiz, an all-black pop soul version of the Frank L. Baum classic, has now become one of the longest running Broadway musicals in history.

Currently in its fourth year on Broadway, it has already passed the runs of some of the giants of musical theatre, including Sound of Music and Oliver! and to date has grossed over $50 million and has been seen by well over five million people.

Visit of The Wiz to Vancouver is part of a Famous Artists design that will bring "the best of Broadway" to Canada's west coast.

Legal costs review sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia lawyers agreed Thursday to ask for a review of tariffs under which legal costs are apportioned in lawsuits.

The resolution, passed at the annual meeting of the B.C. branch of the Canadian Bar Association, said a committee should be set up to perform the review.

The lawyers said a successful litigant often discovers the the small portion of costs he can recover under the present tariff leaves him far out of pocket.

One lawyer said that the successful petitioner in a divorce action, for example, may be able to recover only $1,500 of the total $5,000 to $6,000 cost of the suit.

In damage suits a lawyer will often advise his client to accept a relatively low out-of-court settlement because the costs of the action could exceed any award the court might make, he said.

The resolution said the committee should include representatives of the B.C. Supreme Court, county courts, the bar and the public.

a look inside

Operation of the Johnson Energy Converter is simplicity itself. After starting the fire, and loading the converter with the desired quantity of wood, the draft is adjusted so as to produce a slow burning fire.
As the fire burns, the inner fire-box heats up. This heats the air in the 2" air chamber between the fire box and the outer cabinet. When this air temperature reaches 120°F the thermostat activates the 265 cfm blower. When the blower goes on, the air flow opens the back-draft damper, air is circulated through the air chamber into the 7" hot air duct. When used with a forced air heating system, the 7" hot air duct is connected to the hot air plenum of the existing furnace. Used as a free standing space heater, the hot air duct is fitted with a distributing cap deflector, and the unit circulates the hot air in all directions. When blower operation lowers temperature in the air chamber to under 120°F, thermostat shuts off, and the back-draft damper closes, preventing any back-flow of hot air. As the fire heats up the air chamber, the cycle is repeated; providing an almost continuous supply of hot air.

Beaten child says 'daddy' did it

A four-year-old child beaten in her bedroom in Esquimalt Dec. 21 told a doctor her assailant was "my daddy" and "John," a Supreme Court attempted murder trial jury heard Friday.

But Dr. Glenn Ashmead, who attended Elizabeth Marie MacBon when she was brought to Victoria General Hospital, added that he considered her statements and felt that even though they were her perception of what happened, the possibility of that actually having happened was slight and it was probable that what she said did not occur.

He was testifying in the fifth day of the trial of 21-year-old Kenneth Andrew Burgess. The trial will continue Monday.

The statements by the child were disclosed to the jury during cross-examination by defence counsel Robert Price.

The prosecution objected to the questions and answers as being hearsay and unreliable because of the child's injuries but Mr. Justice Hugh Legg said he had ruled the matter admissible and disallowed the objection.

Ashmead said he asked her three times who hurt her and each time she said "John."

He asked her who John was and she said "my daddy."

The doctor asked her if she was sure and she said "yes, John."

Asked why he hurt her, the doctor said the girl replied "I wouldn't take my nightie off."

The doctor asked her if the man hurt her down below, indicating the pelvic region, and she said yes. The doctor then asked her what he used to poke her with and she said his finger.

The questions and answers occurred at 4.30 a.m., one hour after she was brought to hospital in a semi-conscious condition with multiple extensive soft-tissue injuries, swelling and abrasion especially to the face, sides of the head, neck, chest, top of shoulders, arms and legs.

The neck injuries were extensive swelling and a rash or type of bruising as a result of a good deal of force as in squeezing, Dr. Ashmead said.

The pelvic injuries were two abrasions four centremetres long at the front.

There were no fractures and it was his opinion that without medical care it was likely the child would have recovered.

Dr. Ashmead the child responded in keeping with someone who had been abused. She answered questions put to her and did not appear frightened. Whenever she was left alone she would look away or turn away which was usual for a child who has been abused.

Re-examined by Crown counsel Ken Salt, Dr. Ashmead said basically he always accepts what patients tell him and believe what they say to him.

But then he said he considered the possibility of what she said having happened was slight and it was probable that what she said did not occur.

"I believe she told me what she believed happened was subjectively what she believed happened but not objectively," he said.

(Earlier in the trial, the jury heard that the child's mother, Brenda MacBon, and John Baker, 25, of the Canadian Armed Forces, are engaged to be married.

(Baker testified he and MacBon had gone out on the evening of Dec. 20 returning to her home about midnight. He hugged and kissed the child and said goodnight to her and he and MacBon went to bed, he said. He testified he was awakened by MacBon screaming at someone to get out of the apartment. He went to the child's bedroom and found her on the floor, beaten and bleeding and gasping for breath.

(He also said he metMacBon in Trenton, Ont., Dec. 7, 1975, and a little later lived common-law with her and her daughter, leaving her in February, 1977.

(Asked what was his relationship with the child during that period, and how did she regard him, he replied "as father.")

Dr. Ashmead said he felt the child's injuries must have come from multiple blunt blows with force to the face.

Shown a photograph of the right hand of Burgess, he identified two abrasions which looked like lacerations in the knuckles plus one on a finger and said there was extensive bruising and swelling and discoloration over all the knuckles and extending into the fingers.

An earlier witness, Sgt. Norman Ellison, head of the Saanich police identification section, said he saw Burgess' right hand at the back at 5.30 a.m. Dec. 21, just over two hours after his arrest by Esquimalt police, and it did not appear swollen but he saw the lacerations which appeared fresh.

At 8 a.m. he said the hand was swollen and at 11 a.m. he took the photograph shown to Dr. Ashmead and he said the swelling still showed and there was pronounced discoloration.

Ellison said he didn't think the injury occurred after 5.30 a.m. and thought the swelling and discoloration were a direct result of the lacerations.

But Dr. Ashmead agreed with the defence that a certain degree of swelling or discoloration would be quite apparent within half an hour of an injury to the hand.

The final witness Friday, Dorothy Clark of the hair and fibre section of the RCMP crime detection laboratory in Vancouver, said she received samples of hair from the child, the mother and Burgess.

She also examined certain clothing and bedding taken from the child's room.

She found a number of human scalp hairs on the clothing and bedding which were consistent with having originated from the child's hair sample and some human scalp hairs consistent with having originated from the mother's hair sample.

She said she did not find any other hair on the exhibits than the ones she mentioned in court.

Asked if it was possible that MacBon's hair was similar to the sample from Burgess, she said on the basis of the samples of their hair she received it was not.

Asked if it was possible that the hair found on the bedsheet had not come from a person's head but had been picked up in a washing machine, she replied it was "possible, yes."

NATO science co-op urged

More joint research projects would improve understanding between ocean scientists in the NATO countries, said an organizer of a workshop held at Patricia Bay this week.

The advanced institute on fiords, sponsored by NATO, was attended by nearly 100 scientists from Canada, the U.S., U.K., Germany and Scandinavian countries.

Their closed discussions were held at the Institute of Ocean Sciences, where oceanographer Dr. Dave Farmer was chairman of the program.

Dr. Rob Macdonald, of ocean chemistry, said in order for scientists to reach real understanding of their field there must be more interdisciplinary projects.

He said he was disappointed that although researchers pay lip service to the ideal, there was little evidence of it.

Chemists have to know what the physical and biological oceanographers are doing and they must know what chemists are doing to lend real value to their work, Macdonald said.

He said Norwegian scientists are oriented toward environmental concerns, such as the effect on fiords of mine tailings and hydro developments.

A similar study has recently been completed in Saanich Inlet by the institute.

"Fiords are fascinating to study because they are part of our coast and because many phenomena important in other areas can be studied in fiords under more amenable conditions," Farmer said.

He compared a fiord with a large natural laboratory. "At the same time, they are much larger than laboratory tanks."

There are large differences between fiords, researchers find. Those on the Pacific coast have large tides compared with Norwegian and Arctic fjords, with the result that there is more mixing of the water, and that in turn leads to different biological and chemical properties.

Farmer said the discussions were attended by two authorities who had no previous experience with fiords who were invited to share their knowledge of water flow over sills, and of mixing processes. Gravel or rocky sills across the mouths of inlets are common.

Farmer said two areas for further study seem apparent: the mixing that occurs in deep basins, and a study of the source of energy used to accomplish it.

Biologist Colin Levings said discussions had taken place on plankton and their interconnection with fiords and adjoining oceans; sediments and their effects on marine animals (being examined in Norway), and the effect of low oxygen content on animals in fiords where sills are a factor.

The Watch for all Time

ETERNA
QUARTZ

For 40 years, Eterna has entrusted its superb Swiss masterpieces exclusively to Birks in Canada.

Over the years, thousands of sons and daughters of Eterna owners have echoed their parents' sound judgment and chosen Eterna for themselves at Birks—a deserved tribute to a great line of watches.

Today, Eterna Quartz combines all the qualities you treasure in a fine watch: the ultimate in precision, prestige, durability and slim, classic styling.

Right: Seville Quartz, $595.

6¾% SECURED SINKING FUND DEBENTURES, SERIES A

NOTICE

NOTICE is hereby given that by virtue of a special resolution of debentureholders adopted March 2, 1979, and of the amalgamation of Lafarge Cement Quebec Ltd. with Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. and Lafarge Canada Ltd. which took place May 31, 1979, all holders of 6¾% Secured Sinking Fund Debentures, Series A of Lafarge Cement Quebec Ltd. (the "Series A Debentures") are now required to turn in their Series A Debentures to Trust General Du Canada, 10 St. James Street, Montreal, Quebec H2Y 1L2 to be replaced by a like principal amount of 7½% Sinking Fund Debentures, Series F (the "Series F Debentures") of Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd., the corporation resulting from the amalgamation.

Interest accrued on the Series A Debentures to and including May 30, 1979, will be paid by cheque when the Series F Debentures are forwarded. Interest after that date will accrue on the Series F Debentures and not on the Series A Debentures which the Series F Debentures have replaced.

For the convenience of the holders of Series A Debentures, a form of Letter of Transmittal is being mailed to all holders of registered debentures and may be obtained by those who hold debentures in bearer form from Trust General du Canada at its above mentioned Montreal address or from Guaranty Trust Company of Canada at any one of its offices at the following addresses: 366 Bay Street, Toronto, Ontario M5H 2W5; 430 Portage Avenue, Winnipeg, Manitoba R3C 0C9; 311 8th Avenue S.W., Calgary, Alberta T2P 1C7; or 800 West Pender Street, Vancouver, British Columbia V6C 2V7. For your further convenience Guaranty Trust Company of Canada at any of its said offices will, upon request, attend to the forwarding of your Series A Debentures to Trust General du Canada. The Letter of Transmittal contains detailed instructions as to how to proceed to obtain your Series F Debentures and interest cheque.

Montreal, Quebec, May 31, 1979.

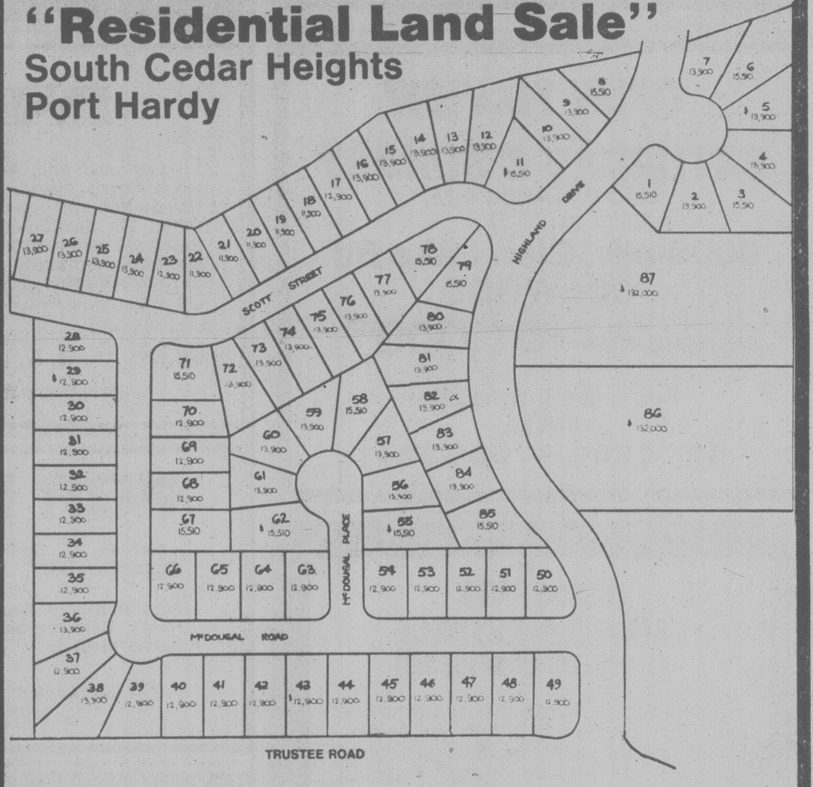
South Cedar Heights Port Hardy



PORT HARDY

Port Hardy is located 300 miles north of Victoria on the newly completed North Island Highway No. 19. Port Hardy is one of the fastest growing communities in British Columbia with an 8 to 10% population growth common in the last few years. This growth has been triggered by a number of factors: large local employer (Utah Mines Ltd.), logging, fishing, tourism and, very recently, the location of the B.C. Ferries Queen of Prince Rupert. The recent opening of the new North Island Highway assures Port Hardy's continued future growth.

Port Hardy is an interesting combination of beautiful wilderness setting and thriving community complete with large shopping areas, municipal swimming pool, many modern schools, active theatre group, and excellent fishing and hunting opportunities.

Gold speculation 'a kind of madness'

By HOBART ROWEN

WASHINGTON (WP) Gold, that mysterious and seductive metal, has been enjoying a speculative boom that has surprised and baffled the experts.

During the long slide of the dollar last year, the price of gold per ounce rose from about $132 (U.S.) to $242 Oct. 31, the day before a successful dollar-rescue program was launched.

That rise of 83 per cent was followed by a dip to $193 Nov., 30, as the program took effect and the market anticipated larger sales by the U.S. Treasury, part of the dollar-boosting plan.

But gold is nothing if not volatile. Despite the continued strength of the dollar, gold has boomed, topping the Oct. 31 high by a wide margin. At the close of the week, it was about $275 an ounce, up 42 per cent from Nov. 30, 1978.

To put it another way, the price of gold has more than doubled since the beginning of 1978, leading the way in a general commodities boom. It could be no other way, for to make speculation in gold profitable, it must jump more than other assets. Uniquely, gold pays no dividends, and is costly to store and insure. Any "income" must be derived from appreciation.

"This is a kind of madness," gold expert Edward M. Bernstein said. "It could end up with severe losses for many people."

Charles R. Stahl, publisher of Green's Commodity Market Letter, said in a telephone interview that "there is now 'golden' opportunity to go short. The next big move for gold will be on the downside."

What is behind soaring gold prices? Bernstein and other experts attribute the boom to the disturbing worldwide inflation, and a sense of instability that makes investors and speculators suspicious of all currencies.

The jumps in oil prices, creating financial uncertainty, have fed the search for a monetary refuge.

It is worth noting the dollar has held its own. Not only has it not depreciated recently against gold, but it has been appreciating against the traditionally strong currencies, the Swiss franc and German mark.

Said one official: "In this period of inflation, people look for a capital asset that has the chance of outdistancing the rise in prices. When you get past housing and other real estate, there's only gold that looks attractive."

"Swiss francs and German marks used to be so-called 'islands of stability.' But when they go down, there's only gold," he said.

Green's Commodity Market Letter observes: "The current upmove in gold is spearheaded by many foreign buyers, who for the first time in a while are getting out of the Swiss franc, the German mark, and the Japanese yen, all of which . . . are now declining against the dollar.

"Thus, the purchase of gold, which is a dollar commodity (i.e., gold prices are set in dollars) gives them a double edge: not only are they making a profit on the appreciation of gold in terms of the dollar, but also on the appreciation of the dollar in terms of the other currencies."

Put another way, the price of gold has appreciated more against Swiss francs and other currencies than against dollars - totally the reverse of experience in other gold price booms, when the dollar moved opposite to gold. "This is fantastic, almost unbelievable," says one long-time market observer.

For many speculators, gold has many advantages over real estate in an unstable world, especially for those "who want assets that are either more hidden or portable," one official suggests.

U.S. officials believe much of the recent buying has come from the Middle East, and from other private buyers upset by the instability in the Middle East.

But all insiders stress that gold moves in a relatively thin market, and prices gyrate dramatically on relatively small sales. The dollar volume on the New York Stock Exchange in a single day can amount to more than the sales on all world gold markets for months.

The entire annual volume of gold production, some 40 million ounces, has a market value of only about $10 billion at the current price level.

Another possible factor behind the gold rise, sometimes cited by market analysts, is the belief — which is inaccurate — that the new European Monetary System (EMS) is backed by gold.

It is true a number of countries have revalued their gold reserves at a market-related price, instead of the old official $42 price.

Ship firms, bosses fined $6.1 million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge slapped $6.1 million in fines Friday on seven major shipping corporations and 13 executives accused of fixing the price of ocean freight shipping between the United States and Europe.

The corporations pleaded "no contest" before U.S. District Judge June Green to a felony violation of the Sherman antitrust law, while the individuals pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor violation.

Mark Sheehan, a Justice Department spokesman, said the fines were "clearly the largest in any single case under the Sherman act."

The defendants, including two groups of shipping firms, were indicted by a federal grand jury last week on charges they fixed rates for ocean transportation of freight from 1971 to 1975 without approval from the Federal Maritime Commission.

All of the seven firms are involved in container shipping, which comprises about 60 per cent of the annual ocean shipping between the United States and Europe and had total revenues of $1 billion in 1974 alone.

Judge Green fined all 13 executives the maximum $50,000 for a misdemeanor charge.

She assessed the maximum $1 million in fines on four corporations: Atlantic Container Line Ltd., a group of firms with offices in Southampton, England; Hapag-Lloyd Aktiengesellschaft, a German concern with headquarters in Hamburg, Germany; Sea-Land Services Inc., Menlo Park, N.J.; and United States Lines Inc., New York.

The judge also imposed a fined of $800,000 on Dart Containerline Co. Ltd., a group of firms with principal offices in Southampton, England, and Antwerp, Belgium; a $450,000 fine on Seatrain Lines Inc. of New York; and a $250,000 fine on American Export Lines Inc., which has since merged into Farrell Lines, Inc. of New York.

Bandit-foiling felon may get police award

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 29-year-old man who was awaiting trial for breach of probation when he captured a suspected bank robber April 5 is being considered for a commendation from city police.

The man was waiting in line at a Royal Bank branch when a knife-wielding bandit pushed his way to a teller and ordered a brown paper bag filled with cash.

Angered at the action, the man grabbed the robber's knife hand, wrestled him to the ground and held him until police arrived.

Four days later, the man was fined $50 for breach of probation. His name is being withheld by police pending the outcome of the robbery case. He is scheduled to testify when Kenneth Brian Deyarmond, 27 appears in county court on a robbery charge.

The man who helped police had failed to pay $207.50 restitution after pleading guilty Aug. 21, 1978 to two counts of fraudulently obtaining lodging at a Kitimat hotel.

His assistance in the robbery case will be discussed in July by a police commendation panel.

Mountie guns shock horses

SURREY (CP) — Residents of this municipality are fired up about a recently-opened RCMP marksmanship range, saying the noise has stopped chickens from laying eggs and is frightening horses.

The range opened May 28 in a 30-acre gravel pit.

Fred McKim, a local hobby farmer, said when shooting started recently his neighbor's horses ran through a fence.

"The noise has woken me at 7:30 a couple of times," McKim said.

However, Surrey RCMP Corporal Len Grinnell said police do not understand the residents' opposition.

"This has been a sleepy area for a long time, but we've got to have a place to shoot," he said. "If people complain, there isn't too much we can do."

Officers from the Surrey, Langley and White Rock municipalities practise at the range.

Grinnell said the new range is ringed by trees, which absorb much of the noise, and is one kilometre from the nearest house. The shooting is sporadic, he said, and is scheduled from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

Tom and Carol Taylor-Bullen, who operate a mink farm 1.5 kilometres from the range, say if the shooting continues into the breeding season early next year the nursing mink might attack their young.

However, municipal engineer Bob Poskin says there have been few complaints.

"We did a lot of research — including decibel readings — before we went ahead and approved the site," he said.

3 prison guards acquitted

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Three prison guards charged with assaulting a prisoner at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre in Burnaby have been acquitted in county court.

Gordon House, Marvin Henderson and Dale Meldrum were accused of beating prisoner Rusty Elliott in his cell July 8. Charges against a fourth guard, Hilary Shapard, were dropped early in the trial for lack of evidence.

Judge A. S. McMorran said Thursday that testimony in the eight-day trial was often confused and contradictory, but he pointed out that the Crown's case rested almost solely on the evidence of Elliott, who has since been transferred to the British Columbia Penitentiary.

"There is no question but on the whole of the evidence I do not believe Elliott. Where his evidence is at variance with the testimony of the accused, I believe them."

Clash jails 3 union pickets

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three members of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union were sentenced to jail terms Friday, three others were fined $300 and the union was fined $10,000 following picket line violence at a pharmaceutical laboratory in Surrey.

They were convicted in British Columbia Supreme Court of contempt of court for failing to obey an injunction limiting pickets at Adams Laboratories.

Ron McCann was sentenced to six months while Mary Lynn Wheant and Ildiko Szekely were sentenced to 10 days. Barbara Brooks, Anthony Lau and Peter Hancock chose to pay $300 fines instead of serving seven-day jail terms.

Keith Robinson, co-owner of the company which manufactures and packages vitamins and other health-care products, said tires and convertible tops on employees' cars were slashed and those who crossed picket lines were verbally and physically assaulted.

However, union organizer June Schultheis said union members were also victims of violence. She said guards hired by the company assaulted pickets and charged that McCann was sent to hospital because of a beating he received.

Robinson said no one connected with the company was involved in that incident but admitted that it had occurred.

"That was two days after he cut the oil lines on one of our trucks," he said. "That's what he went to jail for."

The union was certified last Nov. 23 and the workers went on strike Feb. 21 after a mediator failed to help the two sides agree on a first contract.

Robinson said the company laid off 14 employees a week after certification, having received permission from the Labor Relations Board to do so because of high inventories. The union said 12 of those laid off were union members, Robinson said.

He said 42 of the company's 70 employees were members of the bargaining unit but only 12 of them went out on strike.

The rest are still working, he said, "and we've brought in a few of my son's friends, wives of employees, that sort of thing."

Schultheis said there were 52 people in the bargaining unit but only 32 were signed members. Only 13 went on strike because several quit and "he (Robinson) managed to lay off the rest."

Feelings on the picket line grew more bitter, she said, as the company hired security guards, moved trucks through pickets and hired non-union workers to replace those on strike.

Tot's death probed

DELTA (CP) — Police are investigating the circumstances surrounding the death of a three-year-old boy May 22, one month after he and a younger brother were found wandering outside an apartment block.

No charges have been laid and police are awaiting reports from several doctors.

The day after Jamie's funeral, his two brothers were taken into custody by human resources ministry workers. They are staying with their father's sister.

The father, who is separated from the children's mother, was babysitting the night Jamie and his brother were found outside. He reported to police that the children were missing after he woke up and discovered them gone.

A social worker and a police constable who returned the boys to their father said the apartment was a mess.

"The place reeked," said the constable. "It just stank. There was little furniture and the beige carpet was almost black."

He said there was excrement on the walls of the children's bedroom and the only furniture was a mattress on the floor.

Terry Pollard, human resources ministry regional director, confirmed that the North Delta office had been contacted before Jamie's death to deal with the family.

Boy, 5, found asleep in yard of neighbor

MAPLE RIDGE (CP) — While five-year-old Jamie Clubbe slept peacefully under a neighbor's tree, dozens of RCMP officers, neighbors and members of a search and rescue team combed the wooded trails near the boy's home in this municipality east of Vancouver.

Constable Bruce Lindsay said the boy went missing Thursday afternoon and was found at 6:45 a.m. Friday sleeping under a tree.

The boy's father, Kenneth Clubbe, said at least 40 persons had taken part in the overnight search for Jamie.

Negotiations turn to cash

VANCOUVER (CP) — Contract talks between British Columbia pulp and paper companies and their 12,800 union employees are expected to get down to basics early next week when the two parties begin talking in earnest about pay raises.

Spokesmen for the two sides say that preliminary talks, which began May 28, have been positive. The hard bargaining, however, has yet to begin and the unions have served notice they want a slice of the prosperity that has befallen the 15 companies in recent months.

The workers are represented by two Canadian unions, the Canadian Paperworkers' Union, which split several years ago from the U.S.-based United Paperworkers' International Union, and the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, a B.C.-based outfit.

Bargaining is separate, although the unions keep close touch during contract talks, and the two groups are going after different goals as they try to renew agreements expiring June 30.

The Canadian Paperworkers Union wants pay raises of 15 per cent in each year of a two-year agreement while the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada is after a one-year contract with a $1.50-an-hour across-the-board increase.

The companies have made no specific counter-offer.

The base pay rate for the workers now is $8.16 an hour.

Lingering in the background as the pulp and paper talks warm up are current negotiations between the International Woodworkers of America and 120 logging, sawmilling and plywood firms. Contracts for 28,000 coastal woodworkers end June 14.

Devaluation of the Canadian dollar has meant a boom in pulp and paper ex ports to the U.S.

Strikes in the forest industry, B.C.'s largest, could add more woes to the province's economy.

But an industry spokesman expressed optimism that an agreement can be reached without a strike or lockout.

"This year there seems to be a desire to get on with the process," he said.

Saanich drifting - Couvelier

Effective long-term planning in Saanich will continue to be hampered until the municipality draws up some clear-cut population objectives for the next 20 years, Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said Friday.

Couvelier said he is handing the task to council's policy and management committee, which meets Monday for the first time in two months.

He had suspended meetings of the six-month-old committee because, he said, it was not doing the job he had envisaged and this stemmed largely from his own failure to define its role.

Couvelier said population projections are the cornerstone in planning the municipality's long-term servicing needs and financial obligations.

"I don't think we are ever going to be able to plan a damn thing until we can agree on what population levels we are going to be serving,'' he told the Times.

"That's why I have sensed we are drifting . . . just answering the phone and punching the clock."

Couvelier explained the present confusion results from three conflicting sets of figures on what Saanich's population is likely to be by the year 1996.

The original assumption was that it would be around 143,000, but last year council agreed that was unrealistic and scaled the figure down to 108,000.

Now, however, the planning department has come up with yet a third estimate — 90,000 to 100,000.

This would be based on two assumptions: that the present urban containment boundary is kept intact, and that no concerted effort is made to locate townhouses and apartments in Saanich.

In a discussion paper circulated to members of the policy and management committee in advance of Monday's meeting, the mayor says the disparity between the upper and lower figures must be reconciled before any effective financial planning can take place.

Among the questions Couvelier wants the committee to examine is whether the urban containment boundary, marking the outer limits of sewer expansion, should remain sacrosanct.

"If that is our serious desire, can we initiate more firm policies to preserve it? If the containment boundary cannot be maintained, is it possible to formulate guidelines so as to direct its change?"

He also notes that the construction of the Helmcken Road hospital is already generating applications for intensive residential development in View Royal, and that Saanich's representatives on the regional board have voiced concern about the impact of such development on the municipality's greenbelt concept.

Couvelier asks: "Will we be able to resist similar development pressures in that area? Is it realistic for us to try?" And he adds that municipal staff will require council direction on such points.

Crombie appointment 'will aid the disabled'

The appointment of David Crombie as the new federal health and welfare minister will help raise the status of physiotherapists and centre more attention on the disabled, says Marion Leslie, executive director of the Canadian Physiotherapy Association.

Here from Toronto to attend the association's 59th annual congress, which starts today in the Empress Hotel and continues all next week, Leslie says Crombie showed immense interest in the handicapped when he was mayor of Toronto.

He set up a mayor's task force to study the problem of the disabled and Leslie says Crombie's attention will remain focussed on the problems of the disabled, particularly as 1981 will be the International Year of the Disabled.

With increased attention being given the handicapped, physiotherapists and their role will become better understood by governments and communities, she adds.

Association president Antoine Helewa, also of Toronto, agrees with Leslie that, because of the great scarcity of physiotherapists in the 1960s which meant most physiotherapists were confined to clinic and hospital work, governments and the general public are barely becoming aware of the role physiotherapists can play.

"We have no image at all. People connect us with sickness but we must assume leadership roles, concentrating on health rather than illness,'' he asys.

With governments trying to grapple with rising costs for hospital care, Helewa says it has become even more essential that good programs be developed to help people remain healthy and reduce the loads on hospitals and clinics.

Helewac, apart from heading the association's 4,500 members, is director of professional services for The Arthritic Society of Ontario.

He says one of the ways in which Ontario is increasing awareness of the role pysiotherapists can play is Physio Tips, a column which appears regularly in daily newspapers.

Helewa tells of a new program, designed to help arthritic patients, that began this week. About 100 patients are involved.

Physiotherapist Mary Jane Stepinac, who is also a landscape artist, is using horticulture as a means of treatment.

Individual programs have been set up for each person, based on what form of gardening they prefer. Participants keep daily diaries, that will be examined weekly. In the diaries, patients will record any problems, the degree of pain involved and functional levels.

Alert Bay death probe set

ALERT BAY (UPC) — A provincial government inquiry into the circumstances of the Jan. 22 death of an 11 year-old Indian girl was ordered Friday by British Columbia Health Minister Bob McCelland.

The move followed a coroner's jury finding Thursday that Renee Smith died of severe general peritonitis, ruptured appendix and gangrenous appendicitis due to the failure of Dr. Jack Pickup of Alert Bay to apply adequate medical care and procedures.

However, McClelland said the case involving Pickup was an isolated incident and not indicative of the state of health care in small communities throughout the province.

The girl's death had aroused strong feelings in the community of 1,800 on Cormorant Island, at the northern tip of Vancouver Island. The girl was a native Indian and some persons said natives have received inadequate health care.

McClelland said Dr. Charles Balham, a senior provincial ministry of health official, will chair the seven-person inquiry made up of members of the ministry of health, the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons, the B.C. Medical Asssociation and the B.C. Health Association.

The jury, returning a verdict of accidental death, found that Pickup's negligence was a contributing factor in the girl's death. It recommended that Pickup, the only doctor in the area, should be replaced immediately.

Several of the 36 witnesses who appeared told the inquest that Pickup had a drinking problem.

The jury recommended that medical charts on the girl, who died in the town hospital five days after being given pain-killing pills by a nurse, should be sent to the investigating body for its consideration.

Federal public health nurse Vera Robinson, whose comments earlier this year about health care in Alert Bay sparked a request for a public inquiry, said "evidence at the inquest clearly showed incompetence on the part of the nursing staff as well as the doctor."

She said Friday the professional people surrounding Pickup "let him down."

B.C. eyes political tax break

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe today introduced a bill in the legislature to permit a portion of contributions to provincial political parties to be deducted from B.C. income tax.

Wolfe said the proposal provides a tax credit of 75 per cent on the first $100 of contributions, 50 per cent on the next $450 and one-third on contributions in excess of $550 in any one year up to a maximum credit of $500 in that year.

He said the proposal is the same as the tax credit allowed by the federal and Alberta governments.

Appeal court confirms NDP squeaker in Atlin

The British Columbia Court of Appeal confirmed Friday the election of New Democrat Al Passarell in the northern provincial riding of Atlin.

Passarell had won the seat by nine votes over incumbent Frank Calder in the May 10 election but a judicial recount cut the margin to one vote. Calder then appealed the recount.

Calder, a chief of the Nishga nation, was first elected to the B.C. house in 1949 and was absent for one term when he was defeated in 1956. He held the seat for 26 years first with the NDP and its predecessor the CCF, then for Social Credit, which he joined in 1975.

He was the first native Indian elected to a Canadian parliament and the first native Indian appointed to a cabinet serving as minister without portfolio responsible for Indian affairs in 1972 and 1973.

Premier Bill Bennett said Calder will be sorely missed.

"If Frank hasn't made it — then it will be a tremendous loss for the people of Atlin," Bennett said.

Passarell said he was relieved that the battle is over.

BCGEU plans strategy

those who remain at work during the stoppage should be assessed on a regular basis to ensure that all union members bear the same burden.

The paper adds that those not participating in the strike should also be expected to do picket duty, attend rallies and demonstrations and meetings in support of the target group.

And in the event of a strike, all local chairmen and provincial executive members would be placed on union leave without pay, expected to take part in strike activities and receive the same strike benefits paid to those who have left their jobs.

The paper also promotes the idea of the graduated strike, saying that the union should consider short withdrawals of services in a variety of groups rather than an immediate, total shutdown.

The proposal could come to grips with the possibility that the government would use its Essential Services Disputes Act, the report says.

"If the government, as employer, attempted to impose the act because of a disruption in one particular service, the union could reinstate that service and shift its strike action to another area."

Refugee racket earns billions

By JAY MATHEWS

HONG KONG (WP) — A top Hong Kong government official has estimated Vietnam will earn $3 billion in foreign exchange through continued massive expulsion of refugees to Southeast Asia and the United States.

A trial here is revealing details of the organized Vietnamese effort to profit from the refugee trade, which Southeast Asian leaders are beginning to denounce as a deliberate effort to strain their resources and improve Hanoi's finances.

"We know that the Vietnamese government regards this trade in human lives as a major source of foreign exchange," said Information Secretary David Ford in a speech here Thursday. "Indeed it is now said to have overtaken their largest export earner, their coal industry."

Ford provided no figures to back up his estimate, but it appeared to be based on estimates that so far 300,000 Vietnamese residents have left the country on boats after paying fees of about $350 to $3,000 apiece. A spokesman for Ford's office said he was also calculating the number of people who would leave Vietnam in the future and the amount of remittances they could be expected to send back to relatives in Vietnam.

A government prosecutor has presented evidence at the trial of the crew of a freighter that brought in 3,318 refugees that shows each adult paid about $4,000 in gold and each child under 16 about $350. The prosecutor, Peter Duncan, said the freighter Huey Fong picked up people brought by Vietnamese authorities to Tau Tun harbor, south of Saigon. The ship telegraphed Hong Kong saying the refugees had been rescued off boats foundering far off shore.

Ford accepted estimates made by refugees arriving here that at least half of the people setting out from Vietnam, usually on boats much smaller than the Huey Fong, have been lost at sea. Only about 150,000 have reached Malaysia, Hong Kong or other scattered shores.

At least 80 per cent of the 46,000 boat refugees now jammed into Hong Kong docks and barracks are ethnic Chinese, victims of official persecution caused by their relative wealth in Vietnamese society and their potential ties to Peking, Hanoi's arch foe. Ford said Hanoi was deliberately "condemning to death by drowning over half a million of its own citizens simply because they happen to be Chinese."

Vietnam was estimated to have about 1.4 million to 1.8 million ethnic Chinese in 1977, when Hanoi began to expel refugees in large numbers by boat and across the land border with China.

Four Huey Fong passengers and three officers are being tried for conspiracy to defraud the Hong Kong government. Four other officers have already pleaded guilty to creating a Christmas season drama, in which the freighter full of children was kept outside Hong Kong waters for a month

The crew and the refugees, allegedly carefully rehearsed during the voyage, said at first they had been picked up at sea. This story began to unravel when investigators found more than $1 million in gold hidden in the ship's hold. Duncan said the ship spent two days loading the refugees at Tau Tun after each person had registered with Vietnamese officials and paid a fee. The money in the hold, only a small portion of what was collected from the refugees, was allegedly to pay for the hire of the ship and payment of the crew.

SECOND FRONT PAGE

Max Low

The Catholic priest who wanted to send hundreds of Vietnamese refugees off to what many called "the ends of the earth", is being sent there himself.

Tears filled the eyes of parishioners as they gave a standing ovation to Father Guy Merveille after his final mass at Victoria's Sacred Heart Church last Sunday.

Then moments later, members of the parish council began their campaign to keep the popular priest here.

Father Guy hit the headlines last November when he talked about his dream of buying the former fishing village of Butedale on remote Princess Royal Island near Kitimat and relocating about 60 Vietnamese families there.

But the scheme received a lot of bad publicity when many people familiar with the north coastal area said it was so rugged and unsuitable that the Vietnamese wouldn't be able to survive. Acting Premier Grace McCarthy called it a pipedream.

Now it seems that the priest, much loved by his congregation because of his work with people, must pay for his "pipedream." He is being "relocated" himself — plucked from his flock in Victoria and assigned to Gold River.

"Father Guy has been unjustly sent to Gold River — of all places — there isn't even a church there!" parish council member Lore Ingram said angrilly.

Ms. Ingram inferred that there were "a lot of Satanical things going on in the higher elements."

"Don't make it a big flashy, splashy thing," was her suggestion for my column. "Keep it low key. We don't want to reprimand anyone — the church or the Bishop — we just want to make people aware of what's happening."

And quite a bit is happening, she said.

"There is a lot of jealousy toward Father Guy because he is a rising star," she explained. "He is a radical in many ways because he insists on doing rather than talking.

"Father Guy brought the Vietnamese families to Vancouver Island," Lore Ingram said. "Now whom will they trust? No one! He started a number of things here because he thought he was going to be with us for five years and possibly longer, but now he has literally been banished."

Actually Father Guy, vacationing in the States before taking up his new post, has been with the parish less than three years.

"Routine" was the word used by Victoria's Bishop Remi de Roo to describe the transfer of Father Guy.

"His is one of several moves which are rather routine," the bishop said. "A bishop does this every so often.

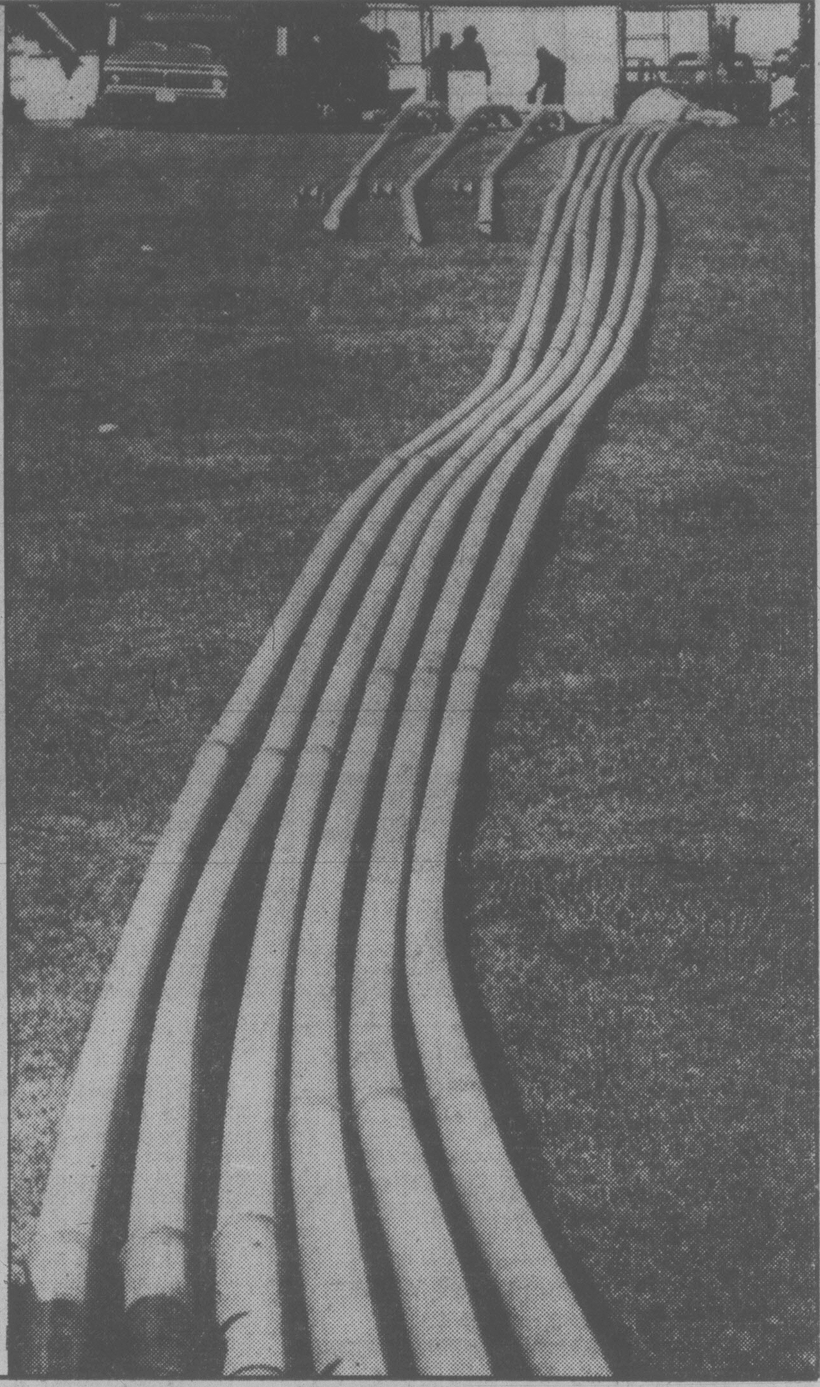
"There is a bit of a furore being kicked up by a group of people who are emotional and may not have had all the facts explained to them," Bishop de Roo said, adding that these facts would be outlined at a meeting soon.

"I'm sure Father Guy has touched the hearts of many people and I understand they're sorry to see him go," the Bishop said. "But he has made it clear he wants to be a missionary and enjoys missionary work, and that's what he's going to Gold River to do."

Lore Ingram stressed that she and the other council members want only what is best for Father Guy. But, obviously, they also don't want to lose him.

"He has done fantastic work here," she said emotionally. "Children who would never go to church now look forward to attending the children's mass he introduced. Instead of watching TV on a Sunday morning, they wake us up and say 'Mommy, we have to go to church.'

"We're not Father Guy followers," Ms. Ingram said. "But he has tripled the congegation since he has been here . . . and he has brought us all closer to God."



Pipes keep water out

Like long stalks of bamboo, fibreglass tubing is being readied for underwater section of B.C. Hydro's new 250,000-volt feeder power line that will connect Horsey substation behind the Ingraham with the Esquimalt substation off Craigflower. Above, cable splicer Dudley Page applies epoxy resin to bind the six-inch ducts that will carry the three single-phase transmission lines under the Gorge waterway from the foot of Washington to Bamfield Park. It is the first time fibreglass has been used in underwater conduits and is regarded as something of an experiment. Land portions of the three-kilometre line will all be underground. The project, being carried out by Comstock, is expected to take about five months. (Photos by John McKay).

Hunters hot line to enforce rules

In a move to counter increasing violations of fish and game laws, federal officials have set up a 24-hour clearing house in Vancouver that will handle toll-free calls from around the province.

Enforcement officials from Fisheries and Environment Canada, working in conjunction with the Fish and Wildlife Branch, have set up the report office. It is manned around the clock, and was established largely due to requests from the B.C. Wildlife Federation.

The Wildlife Federation, which encourages hunters and fishermen to patrol their own ranks, has been calling for such an operation because both federal and provincial enforcement officers are spread so thinly in B.C.

Chief enforcement officer Tom Moojalsky said the office will make it easier for people to report violations and other problems involving fish or wildlife.

The office can be reached by dialing the operator and asking for Zenith 666-2235.

Fisheries officers taking the calls will alert the appropriate official in the region where a violation has occurred. That could entail calling Fish and Wildlife Branch representatives, the RCMP or fisheries personnel.

Moojalsky encouraged anyone coming across an incident where fish or game laws are being broken, to be observant and take down the licence number of any vehicles involved as well as getting a description of the people.

Inventor sues over patent

Saanich inventor Ted Tilby launched a damage action in Federal Court Friday to reclaim from a Crown corporation rights to a revolutionary sugar cane processor.

He said a writ filed in Vancouver seeks to confirm cancellation of an agreement made 3½ years ago with Canadian Patents and Development Ltd. which was to have put into production the machine he designed with Englishman Robert Miller.

Nothing has happened.

Tilby alleges CPDL has hindered rather than encouraged development of the process capable of converting sugar cane to sugar or alcohol, with byproducts in the form of animal feed and building materials.

"The rest of the world is clamoring for this," he said. Third world countries can take particular advantage of the process to produce a source of foreign revenue while meeting demand for local food and construction products.

Last year he took the matter up directly with former Industry and Commerce Minister Jack Horner, who made a personal investigation and assigned consultants Peat Marwick and Partners to inquire into the CPDL licensing arrangements with Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd. and Arvid Machine and Tool Co.

Their report recommended both firms be given licences to develop the full potential of Tilby's invention, rather than assigning parts to each as CPDL had done.

Hawker Siddeley, which has done the least in development work, was given the sugar-making licence; Arvid, which completed a working prototype, got the animal feed rights. Neither company was allowed to develop the machine for its full potential to make all three products.

Tilby said splitting the technology made the sugar output only a marginal operation and renders the animal feed wholly impractical.

Potential overseas buyers are being told to purchase something from Hawker Siddeley which doesn't work and is not available, and that they cannot buy what has been recommended by international experts and demonstrated by Arvid to work well, Tilby said.

"Canada is being made to look ridiculous, particularly when at the same time trade missions are trying to persuade these same people to buy Canadian exports."

Bonnie and Clyde do it again

Bonnie and Clyde have done it again.

The unnamed male baby was born Thursday exactly a year to the day after the birth of his elder brother, Sinbad, the first California sea lion born in captivity in B.C.

Sealand trainer Case Schrage said today the pup, which weighed in at between 14 to 15 pounds, appears hale and hearty with its mother providing sufficient milk for her new offspring.

Last year Bonnie was unable to produce enough milk for Sinbad and the Schrage's were forced to take the pup to their home where they placed it in the family bathtub and fed it for eight weeks on a diet of formula milk and ground herring.

"We hope this time everything goes fine and the pup gains weight," Schrage said.

Another danger is the pup being trampled on by its parents as happened when Sealand's two Stellar sea lions accidentally killed their offspring in the frenzy of mating.

Varied programs seek youth jobs

Private enterprise will have to play a larger role in helping to solve the serious unemployment problem for Victoria youth, according to local Canada Employment Centre manager Wally Pickering.

"We have a number of active programs operating in this area but there is only so much government can do.

"We have not yet solved the unemployment problem for young people. Fully 50 per cent of the unemployed in the Victoria area are under 24," he said in an interview.

"Ironically, before the end of the 1980s we may have a shortage of young workers. But that doesn't solve the present problem."

He said Ottawa has five programs operating in the Victoria area, providing jobs for 888 young people in the under-24 category. In addition, the Canada Employment Centre for Students expects to locate jobs for 1,850 more this summer.

"It is clear we must rely upon the private sector if we are going to find enough jobs for all the young people who want them. We have found local business people very co-operative but we hope more jobs can be created."

The five federal programs for local young people are:

Job Experience and Training (JET):

This program has created jobs for 494 young Victorians with Ottawa providing a wage subsidy of up to $1.50 an hour. They get unskilled jobs, many working for the first time, for a maximum of 26 weeks before the wage subsidy expires. Many companies continue to employ the young workers after the subsidy period has ended.

Job Experience for Students (JES):

Similar to JET, this program is aimed at high school dropouts with the hope many will be encouraged to return to school in September after a brief brush with the working world. Co-ordinated jointly by the CEC and the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, it employs 70 young people until the end of August. Workers are selected on the recommendation of school counsellors.

Canada Employment Centre for Students:

Ottawa has hired six university students in Victoria to run this job-finding program at the CEC Youth Employment Centre, 2653 Douglas. Program manager Holly Weidner has set of goal of 1,850 jobs for local students this summer. Many of these jobs have yet to be located.

Young Canada Works:

Ottawa has provided funding of $461,350 to employ 212 local young people on a total of 44 projects. The employers in this program are municipalities, service clubs or other well-established organizations. Most of the jobs are service or recreation-oriented and are particularly suited to university students taking courses in physical education or recreation. The employment concludes at the end of summer.

Youth Job Corps:

This program provides direct employment over the summer in federal departments. In most cases the work provides practical experience as part of a university course. For example, two law students will spend the summer working for the RCMP. A total of 106 Victoria-area jobs have been created under the Youth Job Corps program.

All of the direct hiring positions have been filled. The job-seeking functions of the Canada Employment Centre for Students, however, is just getting under way and jobs will become available through that office.

Past is a mystery to the adopted

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Clare Marcus was 16 when she found out she was adopted. No birth certificate, no records of any kind — it was unnerving.

"My whole frame of reference went wacky."

Travelling on buses she wondered if other passengers could be relatives.

When she walked down the street she scrutinized faces for family resemblences.

Her past was a mystery that she tried sporadically over the years to solve, at one point hiring private detectives.

Three years ago, after following many false leads, she found her mother. Last year she talked to her father for the first time.

The reunions were not joyful, but they were polite and Marcus is happy she can put the pieces together at last.

Both parents are quite old now and live in different parts of England.

Her mother was at first suspicious of her motives and then af[illegible] in the villiage would hear about the indiscretion.

Her father had a wife and family and wasn't anxious for them to find out either.

Marcus said she isn't bitter about being abandoned.

"My parents grew up in the Victorian era. Things were different then.

"My mother sat down and explained it all to me and I understand. My father wrote me a very nice letter."

But she is angry about the prejudice she encountered during her search and the lack of support from government agencies.

From her personal records she has just written a Canadian guide for adopted adults looking for their origins.

Blockage of birth information by social service agencies is the biggest difficulty they will encounter.

In Canada it is still illegal for adopted adults to obtain their birth records, a holdover from the days when adoption was a shameful thing never discussed.

"People didn't talk about things like that. My adopted parents didn't talk about it because they were trying to protect me."

Marcus' adopted father was hurt when as a teenager she started looking for her natural parents, because he felt it reflected badly on his performance as a father. Others thought she was ungrateful to be seeking her natural parents.

But public attitudes must change, Marcus believes, now that thousands of adopted adults in this country are looking for their identities.

Adopting parents give love and support, but natural parents are the repository of family history and connections.

"When people bring somebody into the world there is a responsibility in that — otherwise you go through life with hundreds of unanswered questions and you never adjust."

Parent Finders has a list of 8,000 names of people trying to find out who they are.

In the U.S. there are dozens of organizations like Parent Finders, she says.

Rewriting provincial legislation to allow adopted adults access to birth records is not a high priority in B.C. and the organization is hoping public awareness program will help change the government's attitude.

Marcus said she feels good about knowing who she is.

"I've met some weird relatives and some normal relatives. My brother phoned long distance from Europe and said he was pleased to know he had a sister."

Her brother is coming out for a visit in September and in July she is travelling to England to meet two halfsisters.

Adopted children should be told their origins when they are about six years-old and when they grow up have the right to know who their natural parents are.

TRAVEL

ON THE GO
with Jerry Hulse

MONTEGO BAY, Jamaica - Here where Ian Fleming knocked off his novels and Errol Flynn knocked over the ladies, a remarkable change is taking place.

You will recall how islanders panicked several years ago, when vacationers began making a wide detour around Jamaica.

For awhile it looked as if everybody would end up on a streetcorner holding a tin cup. Beggars all.

* * *

The gain in tourism was zero. Make that minus zero.

That's when the government put out the word to stop bugging foreigners. It was either that or go to jail.

The minister of tourism spoke not only of racial abuses but of a growing indifference on the part of hotel employees, cabbies and others.

Shape up, he said.

And lo and behold, they did.

With the exception of political violence in Kingston (one chap took 51 slugs not long ago), the island is as casual as a cruise to Catalina.

* * *

Besides, Kingston's on the other side of the island and there is no reason to go there in the first place. It holds nothing for the vacationer.

This side of the island is where the action is. The sybarite's side.

Off in Mobay and beyond, the disco crowd bumps and grinds at the Cave, Club Guava, the Carousel, Jamburu, Humming Bird and Ipso Facto.

Shadows play against the walls of the Witches Hideaway and the Hellfire Club at Rose Hall Inter-Continental.

* * *

Negril is a 7-mile slice of sand the likes of which posters are painted. It is also inexpensive. Cindy Clay, a 33-year-old vacationer from California, found shelter for $8 a night. And later when she ran short of cash a Jamaican couple put her up free in their hillside cottage.

At Negril Beach village vacationers sunbathe in the buff. Others merely go topless. By high noon the sands take on the appearance of a West Indies version of the Folies Bergere.

* * *

The vacationers jog, ride, play tennis, shuffleboard, volleyball and run offon picnics to Bloody Cay.

Only a small wardrobe is required at Negril. No coats or ties or cocktail dresses. Just shorts or a swimsuit. Or nothing at all. You decide.

It takes only a few hours to learn all about the new Jamaican philosophy.

"Sheer pleasure" is preached at Mallard's Beach-Hyatt in Ocho Rios. This is a high-rise with 397 guest rooms. Vacationers snorkel, water ski and sail off to Dunn's Riverfalls.

In a survey of the island's best resort hotels, Jamaicans came up with this list: Jamaica Inn, Sans Souci, Royal Caribbean, Round Hill, Plantation Inn, Bay Rock, The Trident and Half Moon.

Half Moon? Well, perhaps, although I found it necessary to rummage for towels the first night. Next morning there was another aggravation: no hot water.

* * *

"Ah," said the manager, "you got up too early. There was plenty of hot water by 9."

That's fine for sleepyheads but what about us insomniacs? At $69 a day (the off-season single rate), should one expect to shave with cold water?

Still, I have friends who swear by Half Moon. They come for a month or more at a time, soaking up sun and rum and all the other good Jamaican things. So maybe this was just an off day.

Jamaicans as well as visitors sing praises of the snug Trident Hotel. This is in Port Antonio where Errol Flynn had his fling (he tried but failed to consume all the island's rum).

* * *

At the Trident guests dine by candlelight, surrounded by antique china, crystal and white-gloved waiters. Peacocks strut among the villas and the Blue Mountains form a spectacular backdrop.

Its 19 rooms are available for $60 to $210 a day plus $25 per person for breakfast and dinner.

You get to the Trident via a winding blossom-lined road that skirts the sea. Once arrived, there are courts for tennis, a beach for swimming and snorkeling and another for sunbathing. In the buff? Just ask the management.

* * *

Five Jamaica resorts have put together honeymoon packages for the off-season: Rose Hall Inter-Continental, the Royal Caribbean, the Ocho Rios Inter-Continental, Mallards Beach-Hyatt and the Runaway Bay Hotel and Golf Course.

At Rose Hall a three-night package will cost the newlyweds $190 or they can stay the week for $374. The price includes a basket of fruit, a glass-bottom boat trip, souvenirs, a tour and beach bag.

What it doesn't include are the meals. Lunch and dinner will cost the pair an extra $38 a day.

At the Turtle Beach Apartment Hotel in Ocho Rios, fully equipped kitchen apartments are up for grabs for $206 a week (that's per couple). Cocktails and a trip to Dunn's Riverfalls are part of the package.

Free rum parties are held at dozens of hotels one night a week. So are barbecues (which aren't free).

* * *

In case there's a reader with an urge to run off a loan, exquisite villas and homes are available in Jamaica. There's a peach in Ocho Rios that will accommodate as many as a dozen guests. The main house is a four-bedroom, four-bath castle. Next door is a cottage containing another two bedrooms.

The entire compound faces the sea from a terraced garden. Among the extras are a yacht anchorage, dock, private tennis court and a reef for snorkelers. All needs are cared for by a staff of two cooks, a housekeeper and gardener.

To live like Errol Flynn did in his salad days comes to $990 a week in summer and $2,200 in winter.

* * *

And then there's the four-bedroom, four-bath bungalow at Discovery Bay. Built in the style of Jamaica's one-time Great Homes, it features a wraparound veranda, four-poster beds, antiques and a smashing view of Discovery Bay.

It comes with private swimming pool and a staff of seven: a cook, two maids, a pantry helper, a laundress, a gardener and chauffeur.

Guests may dine either inside or outdoors on the veranda with its sweeping view of sugar cane fields and the sea.

For eight guests the weekly rate comes to $900 in summertime and $1,600 in winter.

* * *

Finally, there's a three-bath, three-bedroom in Montego Bay that goes for a thrifty $560 a week in summertime. This is a hefty $255 off the winter rate. Included are the services of a cook, maid and gardener.

With six persons sharing the cottage, it figures out to a trifle over $13 per person a day. You can't do that even in a Holiday Inn back home. Besides, the Jamaica villa comes with its own private swimming school.

(For details about villa properties, contact Carribbean Home Rentals, 5600 N. Dixie Highway, West Palm Beach, Fla. 33407. If you're in a hurry, telephone (305) 845-0454.)

* * *

A word of wisdom for visitors: don't exchange your U.S. cash (or travelers checks) for Jamaican money. Hotels demand payment in U.S. dollars.

Lying only 90 miles south of Cuba and 500 miles south of Florida, Jamaica is perhaps the loveliest of all Caribbean Islands. Verdant peaks reach more than 7,000 feet into freshly laundered skies. Paths are scarlet with poinsettias and bougainvillea, and the sea washes against a pure blue horizon.

* * *

Nesting in the surrounding hills are mangrove hens, mountain witches, flycatchers and Jamaican nightingales. It is a land of rain forests, sandy beaches, rivers and waterfalls.

Insomnia only problem here

INUVIK, NWT — Summer visitors to this bustling community inside the Arctic Circle find going to bed difficult. It is not that they are having too much fun to sleep; it's because the sun doesn't set in June and July.

Imagine vacationing here in the Mackenzie Delta. At any hour you can charter a small float plane and take off for hours of angling with light tackle, fighting Arctic char along the Arctic Ocean coastline. Or wing inland to test your skill against grayling and lake trout.

Inuvik, built in the mid 1950's, is a home to 2,500 Inuit and other Canadians. It is also the commercial and transportation hub for delta communities such as Aklavik, Tuktoyaktuk and Fort McPherson.

It's easy to get to Inuvik. You can jet here from the south by Pacific Western Airlines or you can fly in from Whitehorse via Northward Airlines.

Modern accommodation and gourmet meals are available and you'll find a wide selection of top-quality handicrafts, clothing and art-work made by master Inuit craftsmen.

Rent-a-car or take a conducted tour around town. Note how pastel-coloured homes sprout up on stilts driven into the permafrost. Drop down to the waterfront and chat with crews on the barges. They brought supplies down the Mackenzie River from the southern terminal of Hay River, a thousand miles up Canada's greatest river.

This part of the western Northwest Territories is a photographer's dream. Out on the land the pingos — earth mounds with ice cores — mix with delicate flowers that carpet the endless barrens. A herd of a thousand domesticated reindeer graze near here. Friendly Inuit children will tag along as you stroll around the communities.

A side trip by chartered aircraft will take you north to the home of the seal, walrus and white whale. Farther north on Victoria Island are herds of small white Perry caribou and spottings of prowling polar bears.

Inuvik, with its campground and modern hotels, is an excellent jumping-off spot for chartered or scheduled flights to:

- Aklavik — "the place of the barrenland grizzly bear". This is also the burial place of the notorious Albert Johnson — the Mad Trapper of Rat River — on the west bank of the Mackenzie River overlooking the delta;
- Tuktoyaktuk — an Inuit community of 700 where you can fly out over the Beaufort Sea and watch the drilling ships in action, then swing south and see the reindeer ranch at Reindeer Depot;
- Sachs Harbour — home of some of the best white fox trappers in the north.

Two side trips by road are available from Inuvik, second only after the capital of Yellowknife as the largest community in the western NWT. These are to Arctic Red River, a short distance farther west. Both are small settlements surrounded by beautiful scenery.

More information on the Western Arctic from the Northwest Territories government tourism section: TravelArctic, Dept. WA, Yellowknife, NWT, Canada, X1A 2L9.

CAPITAL TOURS
All fares quoted are on a per person basis.

RENO TOURS
We have very limited space on our Reno departure June 17th. This is your last opportunity to be with CAPITAL TOURS at the hospitable International Dunes and the Deluxe "ONSLOW" in Reno for the Spring Season. So many have expressed the opinion that "Capital is the Best" that we're beginning to believe it. Our Escorts are "Tops", our coaches and Drivers first rate and we do have great people travelling with us. We'll be able to say "yes" to the first few people who give us a call.
Our Fall program begins Aug. 26th and every Sunday thereafter and we're hoping to 'hold the line' at $165 Dbl.

DOMINION DAY WEEKEND
June 29. Sail the "Marguerite" to Seattle. $135 Dbl: $145 Tw.
Only a few spaces left on this enjoyable and picturesque four day tour to Seattle, with an opportunity to shop, then over Stevens Pass to the colorful "Bavarian Village" and lovely "Ohme Gardens", returning via Lake Chelan and the beautiful North Cascades Highway to Seattle for the night and cruising back to Victoria on the "Marguerite".

ALASKA BUS/CRUISE
July 23 & 26: 2 Scenic 12 Day Tours From $740 (Standard Cabin)
This may be your last opportunity to sail the Inside Passage with Capital Tours on the Princess Patricia, take the Whitepass & Yukon narrow gauge Railway to Whitehorse and view the rugged beauty of the Yukon, Northern and Central B.C. along the Alaska Highway. We're currently negotiating with the Cruise Ship Companies to allow continuation of this popular Tour in 1980. One thing is quite apparent — the price will definitely be increased considerably.
If you have the desire to enjoy the beauty of the Inside Passage, the Gold Rush Trail of '98, the Yukon Territory and Northern & Central Beautiful B.C., give us a call.

HURRICANE RIDGE & OLYMPICS
Aug. 4: 4 Days of Scenic Beauty $130 Dbl: $140 Twin.
Hurricane Ridge is always a thrill, as is the beauty of the Olympic National Park, Quinault Lodge and Mount Rainier. We also allow shopping time in Seattle prior to returning to Victoria. A fine trip, not too far from home.

CRATER LAKE/YOSEMITE PARK
Aug. 11: Eleven Scenic Days $330 Dbl: $340 Twin.
To Portland the first day, then on to the rugged beauty of the Oregon Coast for a Mail Boat trip on the Rogue River. We then proceed through the Redwood Forests, East to Mount Lassen Volcanic Park, Yosemite National Park with its interesting and beautiful Rock Formations, North to unbelievably scenic Crater Lake, then home with time for shopping in Tax-Free Portland, Oregon. A delightful tour into California, avoiding the areas of extreme heat farther South.

MARITIMES COLORAMA TOUR
Sept. 22, 24 & 26. Three Departures $990 Dbl. $1020 Twin.
This has not been advertised in the paper but those who have our brochure and their friends, have already filled the first two departures and there are only 10 seats left on the 26th. We think it's only fair that everybody should know about it and have an opportunity to fly to Toronto, Bus Tour through Ontario and the Maritime Provinces and New England States at this colorful time of year. Phone for a descriptive brochure.

By JOHN McPEEK

LYON, France — Want to see Gallic charm vanish? Mention to a Frenchman here that "Fielding's Guide to Europe" refers to his city as a "way station" for travelers.

Reaction:

"Your Mr. Fielding is, as you North Americans put it, ze beeg bag of wind."

The speaker, hotelier Andre Coudour, apparently reflects the attitudes of most Lyonites — an attitude of fierce pride in their Lyons (the French add an S).

And seemingly the pride has justification. As the articulate Coudour, a former French army officer who specialized in languages, explains:

"Lyons is remarkable. It is more than 2,000 years old and yet it is as modern as any metropolis in the world. We take a back seat to no one in terms of being progressive. But we also dearly love our past — the fact that we were once the Gaulish cornerstone of the Roman Empire . . . and we have magnificent ruins as proof of this."

All this passion was displayed by Coudour while he was pouring the first glasses of wine for our small group. Several glasses later, his fervor unabated, he insisted that we be his guests on a private tour of the city he loves so much.

While he went to get his car from the garage on the lower level of his small and very old hotel, the Celtic, located on Place St. Paul in the old quarter of Lyon, the conversational slack was taken up by Terry Regan, guide for the Cosmos of London tour that brought our busload of 38 travelers here during a swing through Euurope.

"We kind of look on Lyon as a secret treat, sort of a unexpected bonus for our tour groups," Regan said. "With it located nearly midway between Paris and the Riviera, almost all of our Cosmos tours pass through here, and, without fail, everyone who takes the time to explore the city is surprised and delighted as what a fascinating place it is."

Regan, a history buff, delivered a quick refresher course on Lyon, pointed out that it was founded in 43 B.C. and quickly grew into a fervent centre of Christiaity, later to become a leading city of France during the Renaissance.

"Thanks to its industry, its trade fairs, its financial power, its arts and literature, it rose to a position of one of the great cities of Europe," he said.

"It's a magical place, a city of startling contrasts. It has scads of magnificent ruins from 20 centuries ago and yet the new commercial and art centre of the city is so modern in scope and design it almost takes your breath away," said Regan, a man who is familiar with most of the world's great cities.

"No city can better reflect the past and more graphically display the future than does Lyon. The ruins include a great many unusual buildings and structures, including a theatre built by order of Augustus Caesar in 15 B.C. that seated nearly 11,000 people.

"But what truly grabs you is that almost within walking distance are acres and acres of skyscrapers and ultramodern buildings, not the least of which is the Palais des Sports. You've got to see this arena to believe it. It has 60 different sport rooms. It's immense."

More wine was poured.

"And all of this is in a beautiful natural setting in picturesque Southern France," Rega said, describing how the city is centred where two rivers, the Rhone and Soane converge.

"The people seem to take as much pride in having 32 bridges as they do in having 24 museums."

Coudour returned and ushered us to his car at the hotel's main entrance which fronts on a street that appears almost medieval with its cobblestones and surrounding centuries-old homes and small shops.

"Lyon is very proud of this old section," Coudour said. "Property owners cannot make any changes without special permission, and it usually is given . . . only for work to maintain the originality of the buildings."

Six of us, including the host, squeezed into Coudour's sedan and within minutes rolled smoothly across a bridge and slalomed through thickening traffic as we entered the city's modern section.

Coudour soon pulled the sedan into a vast sublevel parking area and we stepped out into what appeared to be the 21st century.

Some place! A startling effect was achieved by an imaginative marriage of glass, steel, stone and mortar.

Level after level of sparkling black and mirrored glass, stone, textured mortar and bright metal create a wonderland of beckoning shops. And everywhere there is beauty in design — fountains and sculpture — a French masterpiece of modern art.

And Coudour hastened to assure us that it was a shopping centre for everybody.

"There are all kinds of stores, offering everything the shoppers could desire at all price ranges," he said.

After a walk of nearly an hour through the centre, our private tour continued by auto.

Bridge after bridge was crossed as Coudour pointed out the city's many historic and artistic attractions. It was a heady excursion. And the glow continued for many hours, perhaps heightened by the wine we continued to consume after our return to the hotel.

Nothing like it in Middle East

By MARVINE HOWE

BAGHDAD, — Zawra Park in central Baghdad offers astonishing flights of fantasy along with the down-to-earth pleasures of eating ahnd drinking.

Visitors can stroll through a reproduction of ancient Babylon with fountains, hanging gardens and lions. Or they can sit in an airy Bedouin tent and drink sharp Arab coffee on the house. Or visit the opulent Museum of Royal Cars and see the 1936 Blue and yellow Mercedes given by Hitler to King Ghazi, the father of Iraq's last king, Faisal II.

Among the other delights of Zawra are artificial lakes with ducks, a Japanese garden, an open-air movie, a summer theater, miniature golf, an amusement park, a zoo and a large swimming pool.

Eating places are all around, from modest sandwich kiosks to the most elaborate restaurant and bars. Al Lulua, which means The Pearl, is crowned by a dome of what appears to be mother of pearl. Inside, families and couples sit on one side of the room to eat, and single men crowd the other, drinking beer for hours.

They are Iraq's newly rich class, the plumbers, mechanics and skilled construction workers who are so much in demand they can ask almost any price for their services and can afford French wine with their meals.

But most families bring their own picnics to the park. They spread their meals on the lawn or on the steps of statues and invite passing foreigners to share what they have: tasty lettuce leaves, chicken, kebab or tea, which they heat on large bottled-gas stoves.

Baghdad's city planners are trying to enlarge the city's green areas to keep pace with its growing population, which has doubled in six years to more than 3 million. They have created green Zones in the northwest and along the banks of the Tigris to cut off the winds from the desert. They have also landscaped the east bank of the river, which cuts the city down the middle. Couples stroll along the shady riverbank, children romp in playgrounds, men play chess and dominos in cafes and people come to eat the popular mazgouf, or riverfish grilled on stakes around an open wood fire.

Heavy industry has moved out of the city proper to the southern district of Daura, which has been separated by a shield of plants and trees.

A little over 1,200 years ago Baghdad was built on a circular plan that was considered a model of city planning. It has since grown into what is said is one of the most expansive cities in the world, covering am area of 330 square miles.

Fouad Radhi, the city planning service's chief engineer, says that limits to Baghdad's expansion have now been established in a master plan that sets a population ceiling of 4.5 million in the year 2000. The city should keep its present size but with greater density of built-up areas, he says.

"Baghdad will keep its circle shape and will look like a giant tent," Radhi says. There will be no limit to the height of buildings in the central area, with structures getting progressively lower toward the outer rim. The city skyline now is marked by only an occasional high-rise, such as the nearly completed 400-room Hotel al-Mansour and the ruling Baath Socialist Party's new headquarters. There are others on the way. The Sheraton ahd Meridien hotels are to be completed in less than two years.

Traditionally all Iraqi roads lead not only to, but into Baghdad. The planners are now tackling the traffic problems brought on by this tradition. Work is under way on an inner-ring road to keep cars out of the city's center, and there are plans for an outer ring. The most daring innovation had been traffic lights, introduced to the city this year. Drivers, however, are inclined to ignore the lights since they tend to blend into the decorative colored lights that abound in Baghdad.

The fashionable Mansour quarter has the largest shopping center in the Middle East. Named after the caliph who founded Baghdad in 762 A.D. the el-Mansour shopping center looks more like a palace with its thick yellow brick walls and turrets. The first shop opened a year ago and offers Iraqi-made polyester shirts for two Iraqi dinars, or $6. Shoe shops sell sturdy Iraqi-made shoes for $13 to $15. There is also a booking and information bureau for the local bus company, a bank, snackbars and a playground outside to occupy children while mothers are shopping.

The upper floors are still under construction, but the supermarket opened last month and has become one of the most popular places in town. Guards stand at the door to keep crowds of curious children outside while inside there are endless lines at the cashiers

The new supermarket offers an array of Iraqi-made products — soaps, detergents, toothpaste, ketchup, steak sauce, rice, banana concentrate fruit juices. It also offers Bulgarian jams, cheese and peas; Dutch vegetable oil and cocoa; Danish luncheon meat, English cornflakes and Jordanian gin, vodka and Scotch whisky.

While Iraqis flock to the shopping center, foreign visitors generally prefer the old, arcaded souks downtown. There is the copper souk, where pots and pithers are beaten into shape amid a deafening din, or the rug souk, with its splendid hand-woven carpets in violent oranges, pinks and reds. But even the ancient bazaars are getting modern wares and are full of plastic shoes and jeans.

Tequila is drunk straight!

By ALAN RIDING

Farmers cutting agave plant, source of tequila

AMATITAN, MEXICO — Most visitors to Mexico toast their arrival here with perhaps the only Spanish words they know: "Una margarita por favor." But at nearby tables, Mexicans turn up their noses. Margaritas are for gringos, tequila is for hombres.

Folklore demands that all national drinks be drunk straight, or so claim the Scots with their Scotch and the Russians with their vodka. And so it is with tequila — straight or, at most, followed by a dab of salt and lemon on the tongue.

* * *

But for the final word on tradition, who better than the owners of Tequila Herradura, makers of the oldest tequila? It was in this tiny village 30 miles north of Guadalajara that tequila was reputedly first distilled centuries ago, while the Herradura brand name has been on the market since 1870.

* * *

So after a hot morning touring fields of agave plants, from which the drink is made, three bottles of variously aged tequila were brought to the shaded gardens of the San Jose del Refugio hacienda. A visitor dutifully took his potion straight, but not so the guardians of tradition. Pablo Romo, whose famly owns the company, mixed his with lemon soda and ice, while his cousin, Carlos Ugarte, poured Coco-Cola into his tequila.

"You can drink it as you like," argued Ugarte, who manages the hacienda. "Some people find it too strong straight, so you can mix it like any other drink. I guess that's the American influence."

Most Mexicans, though, still prefer their national drink straight, sometimes adding a few drops of lemon and salt to it or, in more ritualistic style, taking a sip of tequila followed by a taste of salt licked from the back of the hand and then a squeeze of lemon directly into the mouth. "That's the way we drink it," tourist guides tell visitors, who feel safer with their less potent margaritas.

Mexicans also often drink tequila accompanied by a chaser known as "sangrita," consisting of orange juice, tomatoes, salt, sugar and chili. A more explosive chaser, however, is beer.

Tequila originates in the state of Jalisco and, more specifically, in the Valley of Tequila north of Guadalajara. The two largest producers, Sauza and Cuervo, who between them account for 70 per cent of production, have their main distilling plants in the town of Tequila, eight miles from this village.

The entire region is semi-arid, capable of sustaining little more than the blue agave plant, a form of cactus that requires seven or eight years of slow growth before it is ready for harvesting. This itself is a problem. Most peasant farmers cannot wait that long for their revenue, so many have switched crops. Just as demand for tequila has begun to skyrocket, the shortage of agave has forced some makers to mix in other natural sugars.

* * *

The production process is simple. The tall leaves of the plant are cut away to reveal a round "head" or "heart," which normally weighs between 100 and 200 pounds. The "head" is of a fibrous consistency, but it contains juices that turn to sugar when baked in a large oven. The head is then crushed, separating the fiber from the juices, which are carried to a vat for fermentation.

* * *

Two stages of distillation follow before the tequila, now as clear as water, is left to mature in wooden barrels. The so-called "white" tequila is kept for between 30 and 45 days, and the more expensive anejo tequila, which turns a golden color, may be aged for as long as three years before bottling.

A rougher variant of tequila — made from a different agave plant — is mezcal, perhaps memorable to foreigners only because each bottle carries an obligatory cactus worm at the bottom.

* * *

Yet another species of agave, known as the maguey, produces pulque, a syrupy kind of beer that is widely consumed by poor Mexicans in the countryside and in urban cantinas or bars.

The drinking tradition of pulque is also no secret: You drink as much as you can.

Alberta budget cuts income tax

EDMONTON (CP) — Treasurer Lou Hyndman offered tax breaks for the least-heavily taxed population in Canada and a variety of programs for the aged and handicapped in the $5.63-billion budget he presented to the Alberta legislature Friday.

The 1979-80 budget, Hyndman's first, also contained more than $1 billion in grants for municipalities and transportation as the province begins what Hyndman called its march towards a decade of promise.

Opposition Leader Bob Clark claimed a $1-billion debt-reduction grant to muncipalities included in the budget was an idea originated by his Social Credit party. "It's hard to fight against Santa Claus," he said.

He added he is concerned at what he estimated to be an 80-per-cent increase in the province's capital construction budget in the last two years, saying it indicates Alberta's economy needs a large component of construction each year to stay healthy.

New Democratic Party Leader Grant Notley said the budget contained both good and bad, but failed especially in not providing a "clear-cut economic development program for the province."

The budget fulfilled the most spectacular of Premier Peter Lougheed's promises leading up to the March 14 election in which his Progressive Conservatives won 74 of 79 seats.

Hyndman said that surpluses left in the province's general revenue fund from previous years will leave Alberta with an accumulated net surplus next spring of about $2 billion.

And estimated revenue from resources — accounting for 52.6 per cent of estimated revenues of $5.255 billion for the year — did not include revenue which might derive from increases in the price of natural gas.

The Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund, recipient of 30 per cent of Alberta's nonrenewable resource revneues, is expected to total about $6.2 billion by the end of fiscal 1979-80.

The tax breaks announced by Hyndman included expansion of an existing personal income-tax reduction which will leave about 114,000 Albertans paying no provincial income tax.

The corporate tax rate for about 17,000 small businesses falls to five per cent from 11 per cent, leaving an estimated $40 million extra in owners' hands.

Chairman of CHMC resigns

Teron submitted his resignation as chairman of Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., and policy adviser to the government on Monday, the day that Conservative Joe Clark because prime minister.

Clark accepted the resignation Friday.

Teron was the object of strong criticism by Conservatives since 1973 as he headed the mortgage corporation and as he headed the now defunct urban affairs department.

He was known to be a friend of Liberal prime minister Trudeau. His name was mentioned among those who collected donations to build Trudeau a swimming pool at the prime minister's residence at 24 Sussex Drive.

The opposition in the last Parliament often accused the millionaire of conflict of interest because he was a developer before joining the Crown mortgage agency and the urban affairs department. The charges became louder when he took leave of absence last year to settle some personal financial affairs.

In his letter to Clark he said that he had told Trudeau more than a year ago that he wanted to leave and was asked to stay until the end of the parliamentary session. Now he was resigning.

Clark accepted the resignation, saying "I want to acknowledge and congratulate you on the significant contribution you have made to the public service of Canada during the past five years."

He noted that Teron has agreed to remain as chairman and director of the corporation on an interim basis while Elmer MacKay, minister for economic development who has the responsibility for the agency, gets to know his new work.

Teron became the second top public servant to depart in the wake of Clark's federal election victory.

Maverick Cossitt quarrels with Clark's no-fire policy

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Just because the Conservatives have finally made it into power isn't any reason to expect Conservative MP Tom Cossitt (Leeds-Grenville) to change his maverick ways.

"If I shut up I wouldn't be myself anymore," Cossitt said Friday, while levelling criticism at Prime Minister Joe Clark for his announcement that he wasn't going to fire any deputy ministers or other senior officials in the near future, even those with compromising Liberal connections.

Cossitt said he was "puzzled" by Clark's statement, made following a meeting this week with 32 deputy ministers at which he asked them to work in partnership with his government.

The MP said it was his understanding, based on a conversation with Clark in February 1978, that a review of all top officials would be made by a Conservative government to consider asking for their resignations, with reinstatement only of those who met criteria established by the new government.

Cossitt's sentiments are echoed by at least two Clark ministers who say the hands-off policy isn't going to apply to their departments, where changes in top level officials are definitely going to be made.

They have no intention of going easy on Grit-tinged officials. Cossitt said the "people voted for change and new policies."

"How can you get change if the same top officials that advised Trudeau are now advising Clark?," he asked.

He claimed that when John Diefenbaker took power in 1957 he failed to replace senior officials with his own people.

"The result was that some of them undercut him because they were pipelines to the Liberal opposition on what was going on in the government."

Cossitt said he was afraid "history will repeat itself."

The Leeds MP said a group of Eastern Ontario businessmen asked him a number of questions in February 1978 on the Conservative policy towards Liberal appointees like former cabinet ministers C.M. Drury, Mitchell Sharp and Bryce Mackasey, who now hold federal jobs as heads of the National Capital Commission, the Northern Pipeline Agency and Air Canada.

After his talk with Clark, Cossitt wrote the spokesman for the group to tell him that "I discussed with him (Clark) the problem of the number of persons who are friends of the prime minister who had been shoved into senior positions and I was left with no doubt that this problem would be speedily handled if a Progressive Conservative government is elected."

Cossitt said he wasn't trying to start a witch hunt. He was sure many of the current deputy ministers would be as loyal to Clark as they were to the previous government.

U.S. Senate okays beefed up bumper

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of investigation, a Senate study has determined that automobile owners are better off in the long run with bumpers that withstand an eight-kilometre-an-hour crash than those that allow damage at half that speed.

Life in the low minors just baloney and beer

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

What's life really like in baseball's low minor leagues?

- It's eating nothing but baloney sandwiches for five days to save money for beer on the next road trip.
- It's living in a three-room apartment with six other guys to make ends meet on a salary of $300 a month.
- It's being beaten to the bathroom in the morning by a scorpion.

Jack Hays, Victoria Mussels' new coach, has lived through it all in his three years bouncing around independent clubs at professional baseball's class "A" level. Now he's writing a book about it.

He hasn't found a publisher but he has nearly 700 pages roughed out and he's got a title: TUB.

TUB?

"Totally Unorganized Baseball," the 25-year-old native of Chicago chuckled Friday as he prepared to run about 30 candidates through their first tryouts for the approaching class "A" Northwest League season.

The Portland area high school-college graduate, who now lives in Dallas, obviously has a great outlook on the adversities and frustrations of the bush leagues.

"I'm not going anywhere as a player," he explained, "but I've got aspirations as a coach or manager, maybe in college baseball."

He coached at Portland University for two seasons after he graduated and has coached all of his pro career, including last year under Bill Bryk with the Northwest League champion Grays Harbor Loggers.

Bryk, expected in town today or Sunday, is Mussels' new field manager this season.

It was at Grays Harbor that Hays lived cheek-by-jowel with six team-mates.

"We had one bath, one shower and no shower curtain," he related. "Two of us shared the living room floor. I slept for three months in a sleeping bag. My dresser drawer was an empty case of Red Man chewing tobacco.

"One guy had the bedroom. He must have been the first one to move in."

There were no shower facilities at the ball park in Grays Harbor so Hays and his roommates stayed in shape racing each other home before the hot water ran out.

"I remember eating baloney sandwiches five straight days — two meals a day — because we were trying to save enough money for beer on a road trip to Boise," he continued.

"The next year I played for Beeville (Class "A" Lone Star League) and I got a raise from $300 to $400 a month. Three of us got a little house — it was really just a shack — for $105 a month. I got up one morning and found a scorpion sitting on the toilet seat."

"I had a terrible year, nothing but hits off me, and I only threw 19 or 20 innings. But there we were, ahead 5-3 in the ninth when Eugene got runners on second and third.

"I hadn't pitched in two or three weeks but for some reason they put me in. I got to a 3-0 count on the batter but eventually I struck him out.

"I got back to the locker room and a reporter from Eugene wanted to know how I felt out there, was I reaching back for more?

"I didn't have any more, I told him. I never had any more in my whole life."

With no fast ball, then, does he rely on a curve and a changeup?

"A curve, yes," he laughed. "But a changeup? My fast ball already is a changeup."

SHORT HOPS — About 30 candidates ran through batting practice Friday at the far end of Royal Athletic Park because the main diamond is being used for fastball this weekend . . .Mussels GM Lynn Chapman wasn't sure where workouts today and Sunday will take place . . . Three of last year's Mussels, outfielder Bob Potts, infielder Doug Morganti and hometown pitcher Roy Moretti, were among the first in camp . . . Holdovers still to report are pitcher Scott Harding and outfielder Steve Kasunic . . . Infielder Dan Gans isn't expected back . . . He's working the nightclub circuit as a comedian-impressionist with an engagement at the Golden Nugget in Sparks, Nev. . . Another early candidate Friday was outfielder Pete Rabassa, a regular with Grays Harbor last year who comes to the Mussels courtesy of Van Schley, the Californian who is working with owners Jim and Lynn Chapman putting together this year's roster . . . Mussels have great expectations from righthander Cal Beal, a Baton Rouge, La., product who was 4-4 last season at Pompano Beach in the Class "A" Florida State League . . . Another top mound prospect could be Mario Avallone, who was 3-4 at Pompano Beach but had a sparkling 1.89 earned run average with 45 strikeouts and 13 walks in 53 innings.

LaCoss still unbeaten

Times News Services

Montreal Expos manager Dick Williams scoffed at the idea that unbeaten Mike LaCoss of Cincinnati Reds is practicing some sort of wizardry over National League batters.

"We execute right, we beat him tonight," Williams said tersely. "We didn't execute right. We beat ourselves.

"We deserved to lose. You don't like to, but maybe you learn from it."

The Reds have not lost a game LaCoss has started this season. He's 7-0 after beating the Expos 3-2 Friday on a seven-hitter in Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium.

It was his 12th start and second complete game. The one earned run he allowed lowered his earned-run average to 2.36, best among National League starters.

Cincinnati manager John McNamara said the maturity and composure LaCoss has gained since being called up from Indianapolis last year are "things he had to learn" to be an effective big league pitcher.

Elsewhere, Pittsburgh Pirates were only playing dead until they resurrected Willie Stargell.

The Pirates were trailing San Francisco 2-0 in the bottom of the eighth inning and, with two outs, managed only their third hit off John Curtis when Omar Moreno singled. Our came Stargell and he got the Pirates going with a two-run homer.

His 11th home run of the season tied it 2-2 and Dave Parker followed with his 12th, also off Curtis, and the Pirates pulled out a 3-2 victory.

Los Angeles Dodgers ripped Chicago Cubs 11-4 in a rain-shortened 6½-inning game, Atlanta Braves beat Philadelphia Phillies 11-5 in 10 innings, San Diego Padres edged St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 also in 10 innings, Cincinnati Reds shaded Montreal Expos 3-2.

Wanna fight? Well, uh...

The name of the game is "So You Wanna Fight" but Vancouver Island's heavyweights don't.

Or, more properly, the big boys aren't rushing into the boxing ring with the same enthusiasm as lighter battlers interested in entering Victoria's second challenge program.

The first challenge card, promoted by Mussels' baseball team owners Lynn and Jim Chapman, attracted almost 2,000 fans to Memorial Arena.

Sandor Kovacs, former wrestling promotor, is arranging next Friday's card at Memorial Arena (7:30 p.m.) and is pleased with the response of both fans and participants . . . with one minor exception.

Boxers in the 175-and-under division and in the 176-200-pound category have shown great interest but Kovacs said he would "like to hear from more heavyweights."

"We'll have eight to start," he said, "but we would like to hear from the big guys who think they can fight."

Kovacs added that he would have no difficulty in attracting heavyweights from the mainland but "would very much prefer" to keep the Victoria program for Island brawlers.

Nicer guys get thumped

NEW WESTMINSTER — Esquimalt Legion players improved their manners Friday in the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League and were promptly victimized by New Westminster goaltender Leo Parolini.

Hampered by numerous penalties in recent outings, the Legion lads spent a mere eight minutes in the penalty box Friday. But improved deportment was not appreciated by Parolini, who blocked 36 Esquimalt shots to guide the Salmonbellies to a 17-8 victory that left New Westminster, Esquimalt and Richmond in a deadlock for second place.

Salmonbellies were whistled for 20 minutes in penalties, but Legion nanaged only three goals in power-play situations.

Gordie Christiansen and Brian Bell each notched two tallies for Legion, which received single-goal efforts from Terry Jay, Paul Michael, Tarey Pollock and Kelly Bryant.

'Intimidating' Budgets also helped by hurlers

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Dave Ruthowsky and Andy Konopacki, the pitchers, did their thing but a softball visitor from Edmonton also figures reputation worked to Victoria Budgets' advantage Friday.

Ruthowsky and Konopacki strung out goose-eggs and strikeouts as Budgets swept the first half of their "Super Series" exhibition set with Edmonton Crown Well Oilers by identical 6-0 scores at Royal Athletic Park.

Both Victoria pitchers, showing mid-season sharpness, checked in with two hitters. Ruthowsky, in the opener, struck out 11 and the Packer, in the second, put the "K" on 14.

Neither Ruthowsky nor Konpacki walked a man.

But Dave Dorey, Edmonton's manager and, incidentally, president of the Edmonton Major Men's Fastball League, figures "my guys were a little intimidated by Victoria's reputation" as defending Canadian champions.

"We're a better hitting team than we showed," said Dorey. "It's been two years since anybody has handcuffed us like this, and we've faced good pitching like (Gene) McWillie and (Rob) Guenter (of Saskatoon). Yes, I think we were intimidated.

"Also, it is the first time that they've played before a crowd this big (an estimated 800)," he continued, "but we're a young club, with an average age around 24, and the only way we're going to get better is to play clubs like Budgets."

The Oilers will play Budgets again tonight. If they were impressed with Friday's fan turnout, they should be forewarned about tonight. It's Stan Kern Night and a better crowd is expected to help pay honor to the big guy from Leduc, who retired after last season and helping Victoria rise to the highest level of softball respectability.

Friday, Ruthowsky, Konopacki and the Budgets didn't tarnish any of that respectability. The decisions were clear-cut over a youthful team that is considered a leading contender for the Alberta senior men's title this season.

At the plate, the bats of playing-manager Harvey Stevenson, captain Bob Holness and catcher Sonny Phillips provided Ruthowsky with his big working margin. Stevenson started it with a three-run homer, Holness added a two-run double and Phillips went two-for-three and also drove in one run.

In the second game, Carl Walker's two-run single and two-hit contributions by Bob Walton, Reg Underwood and rookie Warren Campbell made it easy for the Packer.

SKI COACH QUITS

OTTAWA (CP) — Bruce Henry, 32, of Banff has resigned as national ski team coach, citing personal reasons for leaving.

Entry deadline Monday for Y-Times track meet

The entry deadline is creeping up for anyone wishing to enter the 26th annual Victoria "Y"-Times track and field meet scheduled June 23-24 at Centennial Stadium.

Monday is the entry deadline.

The meet is sanctioned by the B.C. Track and Field Association, so competitors in most of the age-class events must hold a current amateur card.

Further information on entry details and fees may be obtained by telephoning Norine Tobacco at 477-1773.

The growth of the meet over the years is noteworthy.

Started as a competition for Vancouver Island senior athletes by Stuart Keate, then publisher of the Victoria Times, Art Stott, a former Olympic diver who retired as a Times' editorial writer a few years ago, and Archie McKinnon of the "Y", the meet was first held in one afternoon on the Gyro Track at Victoria High School and attracted approximately 50 athletes.

Today the scope has expanded considerably.

The competition extends over two days and includes classes ranging from eight to over 40 years of age. It now attracts over 1,000 athletes from as far away as Calgary and Portland.

Since competition breeds better performances, care has been taken to invite top-notch talent.

Some of the outstanding performers who have taken part in the meet and gone on to represent Canada in international competition include Irene Pietrowski, Harry Jerome, Jenny Meldrum, Debbie Brill and Phil Olsen.

This year the hammer-throw trials for Western Canada to help choose a team for the Pan-American Games at Puerto Rico will be part of the "Y"-Times meet.

Hawks have their man but Habs still waiting

Times News Services

Chicago Black Hawks have a new coach, Montreal Canadiens should know by Monday if they have one and, as summer heads for its longest day, this is a time for an unusual amount of activity in National Hockey League circles.

The Black Hawks said Friday minor league coach Eddie Johnston, 43, a former netminder, will pilot the Hawks, and that one of his players may be former star winger Bobby Hull.

Johnston spent most of his NHL career tending goal for Boston Bruins and ended it two seasons ago with the Black Hawks. Last season he coached New Brunswick Hawks, Chicago's affiliate in the American League.

He succeeds Bob Pulford, coach and general manager the last two seasons. Pulford is to continue as general manager.

At the same time, the Black Hawks said they had moved to reclaim Hull, 40, from Winnipeg Jets, under the terms of the merger of the NHL and the World Hockey Association.

NHL teams had a 1 p.m. PDT Friday deadline to name the players they want to reclaim. The others named by the Black Hawks were Terry Ruskowski of Winnipeg and goaltender John Garrett of New England Whalers.

Scotty Bowman now has until late Monday to let Montreal know if he will remain as coach of the Stanley Cup champions or accept an executive, non-coaching position with another NHL club.

And centre Jacques Lemaire, 33 and a 12-year veteran with the Habs, also is expected to declare whether he will return to the Canadiens or accept a lucrative offer to become player-coach of Sierres, a club team in Switzerland. Lemaire has one year remaining in his contract with the team. But no deadline was set for Lemaire's decision.

Bowman and Lemaire both met with managing director Irving Grundman of the Canadiens Friday, the deadline set for Bowman to reveal plans for his future.

BRIEFLY: The NHL annual meetings begin Monday . . . Philadelphia Flyers laid claim to centre-left winger Dennis Sobchuk from the Edmonton Oilers . . . Sobchuk was not on the list of players protected by the Oilers of the now-defunct WHA.

Ansel Kelman leads cyclists

Covering the 26-kilometre circuit around Shawnigan Lake in 36 minutes, 50 seconds, Kelman nipped second-place Wayne Simons of the Gulf Islands and Dean Johnston of Shawnigan.

Kelman and Johnston helped Shawnigan retain the team title. Gulf Islands was second, followed by Wellington of Nanaimo, Colquitz of Victoria and Parksville.

Bettors miss big payoffs

It wasn't a super evening at Sandown Park Friday for driver Keith Linton and for a while it appeared that the bettors who go searching for big exactor payoffs were headed for a series of disappointments.

Linton, who has been handling the reins with sizzling succes during the harness racing meet at the Sidney strip, twice finished out of the money. He did manage to bag win and place money in his four drives, but that was not enough to keep his spectacular average from slipping.

Among Friday's winners were an even-money choice and four odds-on favorites and for a while it seemed that rich payoffs would have to wait for another day.

The first-race exactor was a modest $7.10, things improved a bit in the second when Sir Bob got up for the place position and the exactor return was $43.70, but in the third race the payoff dropped back to $18.80.

Then came the fourth. Mac Page hustled home in front for a $12.90 win price and Auburn Tiger followed to return $14.90 for place ticket. The result was a bonanza of $124.80, the only three-figure exactor of the program.

Able Majesty provided the biggest win payoff — $19.60. Somewhat overlooked despite good credentials, Able Majesty finished ahead of El Jay Lassie in the 10th race and the pair combined for a $71.60 exactor, the evening's second best.

Cave, Petrie Sparkle

Petrie fashioned a three-hitter as he pitched Jack Mears Realty to a 1-0 triumph over Sidney Hotel and Cave collected three hits in four trips to the plate to pace Birch Builders to a 5-3 win over Mayfair Insurance.

The Realtors and Builders both bagged their winning runs in the seventh inning, Cave striking the big blow for the Birch crew and the Mearns squad wrecking the shutout bid of Sidney pitcher Dick Michaud, who tossed a five-hitter.

The tournament continues today and Sunday.

In the Heywood Men's League, Brentwood Merchants turned on the home-run power to subdue Remco Office Systems 9-4.

Bob Lougheed, Don Frampton and Ron Grant blasted homers as Marchants nailed down the victory for pitcher Stan Pritchard, who walked five batters, struck out five and gave up four hits in a route-going effort.

RAU OUT FOR SEASON

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Doug Rau will be out of action with a shoulder injury for the rest of the season.

Paraguayan upsets Connors

Times News Services

The French Open tennis championship men's draw was unfolding according to form until Victor Pecci came along.

The six-foot-four Paraguayan with the sledge-hammer serve defied his unseeded status Friday and stunned spectators at the $485,000 tournament in Paris with a 7-5, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3 defeat of Jimmy Connors in a semi-final match.

The upset before a capacity crowd followed a masterful performance by three-time French Open champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden, who whipped Vitas Gerulaitis 6-2, 6-1, 6-0 and sent the New Yorker running out of the stadium without so much as a shower.

The 23-year-old Borg will seek his fourth men's crown in six years here in the finals against Pecci on Sunday.

In today's contest for the women's title, Chris Evert Lloyd of the United States patiently mowed down Australian Wendy Turnbull, 6-2, 6-0 in the most one-sided French final in more than 30 years.

In just over an hour in hot sunshine on the centre court of the Roland Garros Stadium, Lloyd gave another lesson in playing on slow clay as she earned $30,080.

Pecci, with his thick mane of black hair and diamond ear pin, had been impressive in earlier victories on the slow red clay and then became a star Wednesday when he completely overpowered No. 3-seed and former French champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina.

As impressive as that 6-0, 6-2, 7-5 conquest was, almost no one was prepared for what Pecci did to Connors, least of all Connors.

The Belleville, Ill., belter, with his tricky lefthanded power game, had been getting steadily stronger and confident on the clay, dispatching clay masters Manuel Orantes of Spain and then Eddie Dibbs of the United States.

But the 23-year-old son of a physician in Asuncion, Paraguay, combined eight service aces with gazelle-like speed at the net to convincingly beat Connors, breaking his serve on the first and last game of the match.

The 26-year-old Connors was gracious in defeat. He said that if Pecci "serves like he did today, and plays like he did against Vilas and myself, the final will be quite a good match."

Pecci said there is little tennis in his native country and only a few players. "But perhaps because of my success it will start now," he said.

In Beckenham, England, top-seeded Americans Roscoe Tanner and Peter Fleming advanced to the men's final of the Beckenham grass court championship.

The women's final will also be a battle between the top seeds. Defending champion Evonne Goolagong Cawley crushed Yvonne Vermaak of South Africa 6-1, 6-2 and will meet second-seeded American teen-ager Pam Shriver, who defeated another South African, Tanya Harford, 6-3, 6-4 .

The King is back

Ed Feigner, the legendary pitcher who has entertained softball audiences across North American for the past three decades, is scheduled to lead his Court into Royal Athletic Park Tuesday for an exhibition game against the Heywood Men's League all-stars.

Feigner has always been the headliner but this year the King is sharing some of the spotlight with John Bateman, a former major league catcher with Houston Astros, Philadelphia Phillies and Montreal Expos.

After ending his eight-year major league baseball career, the big catcher turned to softball and has become the valued new member of the King's Court.

Tuesday's game will start at 7:30 p.m.

Ontario junior loses in semi

PARIS (AP) — Ben Testerman of the United States advanced to the final of the French Open junior tennis championships Saturday, defeating 16-year-old Glenn Michibata of Ontario 4-6, 6-4, 6-1.

India's Ramesh Krishman also gained Sunday's final with an easy 6-3, 6-2 victory over Dennis Pills of South Africa.

Fishing Fathers Will Love It!
Electric HookSharp

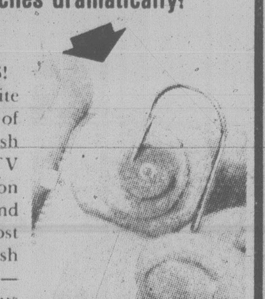
UNDERWATER TV PRODUCES STARTLING FINDINGS!
Fishing Author Charlie White has been studying the habits of Salmon and other game fish with and underwater TV camera, looking for clues on how and why fish attack and strike a lure. One of his most startling findings was that fish ARE striking at our lures — more often than any of us dream! They bit at our lures, but the hooks usually bounce off! By sharpening his hooks until "sticky-Sharp," Charlie was able to more than DOUBLE his usual catch.



IT'S EASY TO USE!
HookSharp, the electric hook sharpener, can put a sticky-sharp point on your hooks in a few seconds. A tiny electric motor, battery driven, spins a special grinding wheel to touch up the points of single or treble hooks. And it sharpens knives, too!

NEW HOOKS NOT SHARP ENOUGH!
Most fish hooks are stamped out in quantity, and are not sharp enough — even when brand new! You should sharpen all hooks — new and old — just before you put them in the water.

ATLANTA (AP) — Joe Inman vaulted over 34 players with what he called "the ugliest 64 ever shot" and assumed a one-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $300,000 Atlanta golf tournament.

Inman started the humid day eight strokes off the pace, but went by everybody with his eight-under-par effort that, he said, was built entirely on his putting.

His two-round total is 135, nine shots under par. But he wasn't making any predictions it would stand up.

"I've got to start playing better," he said and headed for the practice area. "You can't expect to do this every day. I just had a fantastic putting round. I could have shot 73. But," he said, straight-faced as could be, "I do not feel guilty at all."

The skinny Inman, whose only PGA tour victory came in the 1976 Kemper Open, one-putted 11 times and holed three times from 25-30 feet.

Dave Barr of Kelowna made the cut of 145 or better with a 71—144, but Dan Halldorson of Brandon missed with 76—147.

Nervous Jerilyn holds on

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Jerilyn Britz overcame an early case of her nerves to shoot a steady par 72 Friday and withstand the second-round charges of JoAnne Carner and Donna Caponi Young in the Ladies Professional Golfers Association championship.

Britz, 36, a non-winner in six years on the tour, saw her lead dwindle to three shots from four with 36-hole total of 136, eight under par.

"I looked at my hands on the first tee and they were shaking," said Britz, unaccustomed to being a tournament leader. "After I hit a few solid shots, I calmed down quickly."

Carner, 40, still searching for her first LPGA championship despite 23 other tour victories, fought off a swollen wrist to register a two-under-par 70 for 139. Young also had 70-139.

Sandra Post was the top Canadian, scoring a 70 to finishe in a tie for seventh at 142. Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., shot a second consecutive 74 for a 148 total. Dale Shaw of Victoria soared to a 77 for a 149 total but made the cut of 152.

Wright an alternate

COQUITLAM — It was something of a frustrating Friday for Perry Kirkpatrick, but the Richmond Golf Club member still wound up with the big prize.

Kirkpatrick struggled to final-round 79, barely managing to finish one stroke ahead of three other golfers and take the British Columbia senior men's golf championship.

Kirkpatrick, who shot 73 and 74 in the first two rounds, had a total of 226 for 54 holes over the Vancouver Golf Club course.

Percy Barradell of Mission, Ernie Brown of Pitt Meadows and Bus Lawrence of the Vancouver Golf Club tied for second place at 227 and will join Kirkpatrick on the four-man B.C. team at the Canadian seniors' championship at St. Andrews, N.B., in July.

Barradell and Brown both shot 78 Friday, matching each other for the third consecutive day, while Lawrence moved up with a 75.

The best round of the day was the 71 shot by former champion Hank Mitchell of Langara who finished at 228, tied with Eric Wright of Victoria's Royal Colwood.

Wright fired a final-round 74 as Colwood clubmate Gordon Millin, the first-round leader with a 70, closed with an 80 for 230. That left Millin in deadlock with Bill McGhee of Vancouver and Archie Ross of Surrey, one stroke behind Ralph Bartlett of Pitt Meadows.

Colwood keeps lead

Victoria and Cedar Hill teams were unable to change the picture Friday in their struggle for first place in the Vancouver Island Seniors' Golf League.

Roxburgh crushed

SOUTHPORT, England (Reuter) — Scott Hoch and Jay Sigel, both graduates of Wake Forest University, cruised into an all-America final today for the British Amateur golf championship.

The U.S. Walker Cup stars scored convincing wins in semi-finals on Friday. Sigel, 34, crushed Canadian Doug Roxburgh, 6 and 5, while Hoch, 23, ousted Australian Tony Gresham, 3 and 2.

Roxburgh, from Marine Drive Golf Club in Vancouver, expended most of his good shots in the morning when he beat Indian champion Lakshman Singh on the 19th hole.

Singh produced the shot of the tournament in their quarter-final when he exploded a 165-yard six-iron bunker shot to within 12 feet of the pin on the 18th and holed the birdie putt to prolong the match.

Roxburgh, a recently-married Vancouver accountant, had nothing left against Sigel, who went out in a two-under par 34 to be up four after nine holes in the afternoon.

When the American sank a 10-footer for two at he 10th, only the final margin remained in doubt.

The Hoch-Gresham match started the same way, but the 38-year-old Australian cut the deficit to one hole with birdies on the fourth and fifth holes. Gresham missed three puts of around 10 feet on the outgoing nine to fall from contention.

Today's final was being played over 36 holes.

Olsen places second

TURIN, Italy (CP) — Heavy rains resulted in modest performances on the first day of a four-country men's track and field meet Friday.

The Canadian team, which spent 16 hours travelling from England where it competed in a tri-country meet, failed to win an event and Kenya, competing without stars Henry Rono and Mike Boit, won only the 800 metres.

James Maina of Kenya won in one minute, 48.6 seconds. Rob Reindl of Montreal was sixth in 1:49.9.

Among other Canadians:

— Desai Williams, Toronto, third in the 100 metres in 10.53 seconds.

— Peter Butler, Calgary, fifth in the 5,000 metres in 13 minutes, 55.4 seconds.

Bird's offering not chicken-feed

Times News Services

Larry Bird, hailed as one of the greatest college players of the generation, signed a $3.25 million, five-year contract with Boston Celtics Friday to become the highest-paid rookie in National Basketball Association history.

The 6-foot-9 Indiana State grad, billed as a savior of the once-powerful pro franchise, agreed to a pact worth $650,000 a year, including salary and fringe benefits.

And in Portland, the Trail Blazers said they have been unable to reach agreement with San Diego Clippers on compensation for free agent Bill Walton. The matter is being turned over to the NBA commissioner Larry O'Brien for a ruling.

Last month, Walton signed a seven-year contract with San Diego for a salary in excess of $800,000 a year.

Also making NBA news Friday was the transfer of New Orleans franchise to Salt Lake City. The franchise would be placed in the Midwest Division.

New bid to end Nicaragua fight

MANAGUA (WP) — Fierce battles continues between Sandinista guerrillas and National Guard troops as five South American nations announced a diplomatic effort to try to resolve the Nicaraguan civil strife and keep it from spreading to other countries in the hemisphere.

Meanwhile, the Sandinistas appeared to remain in control of Leon, Nicaragua's second largest city, although government troops moved to clear a roadblock the guerrillas placed on the main road leading into the city.

Reporters travelling to Masaya, 32 kilometres south of Managua, said most of that city was in guerrilla hands, with heavy fighting around the National Guard garrison in the centre of town.

By late afternoon, however, a Guard contingent of approximately 250 troops, with at least one Sherman tank and several armored vehicles, arrived within a kilometre of Masaya in preparation for a counterattack.

Members of the Andean Pact, a five-nation economic group including Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia, announced Friday that they will send emissaries to Costa Rica and Nicaragua during the weekend.

It is the first diplomatic attempt to bring peace to Nicaragua since the United States, Guatamela and the Dominican Republic failed in a mediation effort last fall after an outbreak of civil war in September.

In simultaneous news conferences in their respective countries, the Andean Pact foreign ministers indicated they were prepared to lend military assistance to Costa Rica, should it request aid for self-defence. The Sandinista guerrillas launched their attack last week from Costa Rica, and there is some fear there that Nicaragua will launch reprisals.

In Panama, former head of state Gen. Omar Torrijos accused Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza of trying to "blackmail" his country into withholding support for the guerrillas by threatening passage of Panama Canal treaty legislation in the U.S. House of Representatives.

He said that on a number of recent occasions Somoza sent emissaries to tell him to stay out of Nicaraguan affairs or Somoza's friends in Congress would kill the treaties.

Gunshots sound in truck wildcat

United Press International

Striking independent truckers blockaded truck stops for the third straight day today, with trucks ignoring the independents' demands for a shipping shutdown becoming the targets of sniper fire.

The wildcat strike, designed to halt commerce on United States' highways, lacked the immediate crippling effect anticipated by organizers, but the truckers' action began to take effect in the marketplace and with politicians.

Strikers blockaded truck stops and slowed or stalled highway traffic in a move to press demands for greater diesel fuel allocations, lower fuel prices and higher speed and load limits.

Friday, shots were fired at a truck coming into Rapid City, S.D., but no one was injured.

Two grain trucks were hit by gunfire along U.S. 12 near Lolo Hot Springs, Mont., police said. Neither driver was injured.

Livestock industry officials in Nebraska blamed the strike for a decline in cattle prices, saying packing houses had become hesitant to make large purchases.

Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm agreed to meet today with independent truckers attempting to gain support in their protest.

Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh proposed that truckers be allowed to compensate for rising diesel fuel costs by charging higher freight rates.

About 20 independent truckers, with horns blaring, drove to the Capitol at Salem, Ore., Friday and got in a shouting match with Gov. Vic Atiyeh. Atiyeh promised them, however, that he would investigate their grievances.

Iowa Gov. Robert D. Ray Friday endorsed a proposal that the state temporarily increase load limits on Iowa highways to alleviate "an emergency" fuel situation facing truckers.

Truckers also won the support of one farm group and gained at least one concession to their demands. A spokesman for the Nebraska chapter of the American Agriculture Movement called on members to withhold farm products from the market to show support of the truckers' demands.

Alaska has gas

JUNEAU (AP) — Alaska, which has escaped the gasoline shortage, hopes to increase tourism this summer as gasoline lines continue in the continental United States.

Lt.-Gov. Terry Miller said Friday the state plans a publicity campaign to spread the word that gasoline is plentiful here. He also hopes that Canadians, who also have sufficient gasoline, will head to Alaska instead of other states.

Miller said reports have been circulating in other states and Canada that gasoline shortages make it difficult to drive or take the ferry to Alaska.

Grain-for-oil deal close

WASHINGTON (WP) — Representatives of U.S. farm cooperatives said Friday that they are close to an agreement with Libya to sell it wheat and corn in return for oil for their shortage-ridden diesel fuel refineries.

"I do feel it's going to be finalized," said Allan Grant, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Grant stressed that the commodities would be priced at prevailing prices but that savings on oil would be realized by eliminating middlemen. The six major refineries owned by farmer cooperatives have a capacity of half a million barrels a day and Grant said purchases up to this amount were being considered.

Grain requirements are small in Libya, a North African country with only 2.8 million people.

However, Grant said, these are expected to increase as Libya switches to more poultry and meat production.

In talks with the Farm Bureau officials, Libyan officials also indicated an interest in access to more U.S. grain for the purposes of supplying food aid to other Arab and Moslem countries that lack oil revenues.

Library had H-blast info for 3 years

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government acknowledged Friday that the three "essential" concepts which are the "secret of the H-bomb" sat on the public shelves of the Los Alamos Scientific Library for nearly three years.

In a stipulation signed by government attorney Thomas S. Martin and lawyers for the American Civil Liberties Union, Progressive magazine and writer Howard Morland, the government said the document, UCRL 5280, was declassified in December, 1973.

Morland has written for Progressive an article on the H-bomb and the government secrecy surrounding nuclear weapons, and the government is trying in court to prohibit the magazine from publishing it because it allegedly reveals classified H-bomb data.

"The declassification marking on the Los Alamos copy of UCRL 5280 is dated July 30, 1975," the stipulation said. In May, 1978, the document was removed from the public stacks at the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory and placed in area reserved for classified documents.

"UCRL 5280 reveals in a thermonuclear weapons context the three concepts which the government has described as the essential secret of the H-bomb.

"If a competent scientist read UCRL 5280, he or she would derive no significant additional information or benefit from reading the Morland article and diagrams."

On March 26, Judge Robert Warren issued a restraining order prohibiting publication of the Morland article and making Progressive, founded in 1909 by Robert LaFollette Sr., the first publication in the nation's history to operate under a prior restraint order.

Latches on cars probed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government announced Friday it suspects safety defects in hatchback and tailgate latches on 2.6 million cars including some models and years of Mazda, Subaru, Renault, Toyota, Pinto, Bobcat and Mustang II.

The Transportation Department said it become concerned when it learned that a child in Spokane, Wash., had been ejected through a hatchback door.

"Some manufacturers are apparently not using proper locking mechanisms and thus people are being needlessly killed and injured," department officialJoan Claybrook said.

— 1974-78 Ford Mustang II hatchbacks.

— 1975-1978 Toyota Corolla station wagons.

— 1975 Mazda RX 3 station wagons.

Papal sermon on mount rakes abortion

Before hundreds of thousands of Tatra Mountain highlanders — their numbers boosted by Roman Catholic worshippers from nearby Czechoslovakia, North America and elsewhere — the Pope said he prays that the Polish family "may be faithful to the sacred right to life . . .

"If man's right to life is violated at the moment in which he is first conceived in his mother's womb, an indirect blow is struck also at the whole of the moral order which serves to ensure the inviolable goods of man," the pontiff said.

The former Krakow archibishop, returning to the mountainous region of southwest Poland where he skied and hiked for years, gave a special greeting to Czechoslovakians among a crowd that appeared to be the largest of his homecoming pilgrimage, estimated by organizers to number at least 500,000.

He offered, too, a prayer for Poles around the world, as he spoke of the hardships of mountain life.

"This beautiful and sometimes difficult land, rocky and mountainous, not as fertile as the River Vistula," he said, has been forced to send its sons around the world "for lack of material benefits."

To Poles "scattered throughout the world, wherever they may be, 'Szczesc Boze' — 'May God give you his help,' " he said. "Let them not forget their country of origin, family, church, prayer and everything they took from here."

The pontiff asked a special prayer for highlanders.

"We have to pray for them so that even if they become Americans they can't stop being highlanders," he said.

Over the years, thousands of highland Poles have emigrated to North America and thousands more continue to go there to earn money for houses and other goods, returning to Poland after a year or two.

The pontiff was accompanied to Nowy Targ, which is 64 kilometres from his birthplace at Wadowice, by John Cardinal Krol of Philadelphia whose home village is nearby.

The pontiff's nine-day visit home, his first since being elected last October, is billed as a homecoming pilgrimage.

On Sunday, he will lead ceremonies marking the 900th anniversary of the martyrdom of St. Stanislaw, Poland's patron saint and a figure honored as an opponent of unjust government.

Cardinal honored

CAMBRIDGE, England (Reuter) — Basil Cardinal Hume, Roman Catholic primate of England and Wales, was made an honorary doctor of divinity at Cambridge University Friday.

Mozart concert

An all-Mozart program is to be presented Tuesday by the Victoria Conservatory of Music at Craigdarroch Castle. The artists will be members of the faculty — soprano Selena James, pianist Kathleen Solose, and flutist James Kennedy.

Instrumental numbers to be performed are the A Major piano concerto and G Major flute concerto. In addition Mozart's brief chamber opera, The Impresario, is to be presented accompanied by the Conservatory Orchestra conducted by Kennedy.

The performance begins at 8 p.m. Admission is $2.50 for adults, $1 for senior citizens and students.

* * *

Ezra Schabas, clarinetist and conductor, visited Victoria this week in his role as principal of the Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto. The New York-born musician is a consultant, auditioner, juror and examiner for numerous Canadian national organizations, including the Canada Council and Ontario Arts Council.

Schabas spoke to a luncheon hosted by the Victoria Branch of B.C. Registered Music Teachers Association and Royal Conservatory Alumni. He spoke of plans which include the renewed development of special courses for the musically gifted child, an orchestral training program at all levels of advancement and post-graduate training courses.

Regarding the RCM's examination system, he discussed his aim to clarify its purpose and maintain its high standards. Approximately 57,000 students were examined last year across Canada, he said.

Starting this week and continuing through June 28, examinations will be in progress in Victoria. The examiners are John Coveart and Mrs.Tkacchenko, piano and singing, Miss C. Schranz, violin and wind instruments, and Mrs. F. Aymong, speech art.

New role for actress at grand age of 93

A long theatrical career that began in the last century is putting out fresh bud and branch.

Alicia Ammon, who was said by Variety, (June 10, 1973) to be 87, probably the oldest active actress on the continent, is now aged 93 and this week became one of the leading players in the newest Canadian television situation comedy entitled Nellie, Daniel, Emma and Ben.

With the Vancouver actress in the show will be her 70-year-old son, Jack, who plays Ben. Jack Ammon will be remembered by Victorians who followed the fortunes in the early '50s, of the York Theatre Company and subsequently the Totem at what is now the McPherson Playhouse.

The CBC will film part of the sit-com in Victoria at the Royal Theatre during the coming week, but these episodes will involve actors representing the leads as young persons. There will be 12 episodes in the series.

The story line deals with four elderly people who escape from a formidable rest-home and set up a commune, living together in a house and sharing various adventures. Besides the Ammons, leads are Roy Brinson and Barbara Tremaine.

Alicia Ammon plays a charming, vague and wispy golden-ager. The comic talents which have been notable since her early induction into the London theatre world find a new challenge in the series.

For Alicia it all began at the age of 12 when, as one of a child troupe she toured Victorian England singing and dancing. She continued to act until her marriage in 1906. She had five children, all of whom now live in North America. She and her son, Jack, have acted together most of their lives.

In the early '30s they wrote, produced and acted in a comedy series for radio which was intensely popular. In the next decade they performed in eastern Canada, both becoming members of the prestigious Canadian Repertory Theatre in Ottawa. This theatre was the early training centre for stars such as Christopher Plummer and Bill Shatner.

Despite this professionalism, the CBC in Vancouver did not avail themselves of the Ammons' ability until American-born producer Steven Hickok, creator of Nellie, Daniel, Emma and Ben, auditioned them and engaged them for two title roles.

Plans for a visit to eastern Canada to publicize the show and a tour of England are set for the Ammons this fall.

Alicia Ammon is hopeful there will be further episodes of the sit-com. Failing that, she hopes somebody will cast her in a role in a feature film. Her last film was Russian Roulette, a cameo bit as a little old lady to whose house George Segal and Christina Raines come in West Vancouver.

Concerning the scene, the London Times critic commented: "The show was stolen by a little Old Lady not even mentioned in the credits, who watched a murder on her lawn with as much aplomb as if she was giving a recipe for apple-plum pudding."

Market Square becomes a stage

The lower courtyard of Market Square is hosting a number of events this month.

A daily attraction is the half-hour performance at high noon by Pepper, the clown who has made an enviable reputation across Canada with his vibrantly original and amusing creations.

The Intercultural Folkfest preview which begins Sunday at 12 noon and continues through 4 p.m., will present the Victoria Filipino Dancers, Victoria Black People's Society, Sons of Norway Dancers, Folkloric Fashion Show, Japanese Cultural Association, Victoria Balalaika Orchestra, Ukrainian Folk Ensemble and Victoria China Town Lions' Children's Band.

On Saturday, June 16, the Richmond Concert Band, a young people's community band from Richmond, B.C., will give a concert starting at 12. Other events coming to Market Square include Pepsi Challenge, June 23, and a children's cat show sponsored by the Cat Fanciers' Association, June 24.

AROUND THE GALLERIES

An exhibition opening of major interest will take place at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria next Friday. That's the date when the Ann and Joseph Pearson collection of 18th century English porcelain goes on view for the first time.

The collection, together with three fine pieces of display furniture, is worth upwards of $90,000.

The porcelain pieces are all early examples of English porcelain, dating from the mid 1740s. At this period the English china-makers had not discovered the secret of the Chinese-European "hard-paste" process. However, the "soft-paste" type is said to be distinguished by a warmth that the later hard-paste does not possess.

In the Pearson collection there are 55 pieces of Worcester blue and white from the "Dr. Wall period". Wall was first owner of the Worcester factory from 1752 to 1783.

Sixteen beautifully painted figures (King Lear, exotic gardeners, Neptune, personifications of Air, Winter, Autumn) as well as a very rare Longton Hall harlequin candlestick are other highlights; also 75 polychrome Worcester pieces comprising chocoloate cups, tea caddies, teapots, cups and saucers and more.

Caughley miniature dolls' tea services are to be shown; they were originally thought to be salesmen's samples but have proved to be in fact manufactured for children and as curiosities.

In making the bequest of certain early and massive cabinets, Mrs. Pearson commented that they might not be suitable and indicated that the gallery should come to its own decisions regarding them. The pieces the gallery could not accommodate were subsequently auctioned and the proceeds used to purchase additional items for the decorative arts collection. These items will also be on view.

Included also are pieces from the Gallery's permanent collection of decorative arts.

One of British Columbia's pioneer modern artists, organizer of Victoria's first group exhibition of "modern" painting, co-exhibitor with Emily Carr and first mentor of painter Jack Shadbolt, Max Maynard has returned to B.C. to write and paint after an absence of nearly 40 years.

An exhibition of his recent paintings will open Sunday at Kyle's Gallery, 1545 Fort. Hours will be 12 noon to 10 p.m.

Born in India, Maynard has lived in Canada and the United States since 1912 and has been painting for over 50 years.

On display at Kyle's will be oil paintings primarily of the landscape of Victoria and vicinity, executed with his characteristic broad brush strokes.

His work is represented in the collections of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, B.C. House in London, Burnaby Art Gallery and the permanent collection and Library Special Collections division at the University of B.C., as well as in numerous private collections.

The Maynard exhibition is to continue through July 8. Hours are Tuesday through Sunday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.and Wednesday through Friday evenings, 7:30 to 10.

Sandra Millott of Victoria has been awarded the 1979 C.C.Thomas Scholarship presented annually by the Saanich Peninsula Arts and Crafts Society. The promising young artist is a second-year student at the Victoria College of Art.

The award, in the amount of $250, is named in memory of the late husband of Daisy Thomas, a life member of the Society.

Selection of the recipient for 1979 was made by Joseph Kyle, principal of the Victoria College of Art. Consideration in choosing the winner is given to creativity, motivation and need.

Paintings in oil, gouache, pastel, and creations in jewelry, batik and collage comprise an exhibition currently on view at the Media Gallery, 716 Yates.

Top-rank violist coming

Charming and superbly gifted, Nabuko Imai will add her graceful presence to the Victoria International Festival scene this summer. The young violist has glided to international stardom on the beauty of her "honeyed tone" (New York Times) and exquisite sensitivity in all phases of performance.

She will join a distinguished group of artists who will be resident in Victoria for six weeks, teaching master classes for the Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts and performing in the series of 26 International Festival events that begin July 15.

The famed Toho School in Japan and New York's Juilliard were the training grounds that launched Tokyo-born Imai. She is thought to be the only violist ever to have won the first prizes of both the Munich and Geneva International Viola Competitions.

La Orchestre de la Suisse Romande, the London Symphony Orchestra, L'Orchestre de Paris and the New Japan Philharmonic have chosen her as guest soloist. With the last-named she accompanied its first tour of Europe and the United States under the baton of Seiji Ozawa.

Concerning her recording of Berlioz' Harold in Italy with Colin Davis and the London Symphony, Stereo Review's commentator said: "Colin Davis' second recording of Harold in Italy, like the first made with Yehudi Menuhin, is an outstanding realization of Berlioz' unique masterpiece. The highly gifted Nobuko Imai's richer-toned playing makes for a more overtly dramatic view of Byron's hero and for the first time in my experience, the final brigands' orgy comes off with all the brilliance and panache that I believe Berlioz intended."

Imai has been heard in recital and orchestral appearances throughout South America, Italy, Germany and the United States. She is a member of the Vermeer Quartet and as such also a member of the faculty and an artist in residence at Northern Illinois University.

The Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Centre, the Casals Festival, the Marlboro Festival and The Festival of Two Worlds, Spoleto, have all been delighted hosts to this outstanding artist.

Now it is the turn of the Victoria International Festival. Imai will be a featured soloist in the July 17, 24 and 30 concerts and in an ensemble on Aug.5.

Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday concerts take place at McPherson Playhouse, Thursday concerts at St.Michaels-University School, and three Saturday concerts at University Centre Auditorium.

Drama variety at the Phoenix

A classic Edwardian comedy and a mid-Victorian tragedy played in repertory will occupy University of Victoria's Phoenix Theatre for the four weeks from June 27 to July 28.

Opening the season will be Oscar Wilde's superb social satire, The Importance of Being Earnest, written and first produced during the heyday of Edward, Prince of Wales, whose era overlapped that of the aging Victoria. The verbal wit and high style, the exaggerated social mannerisms of Wilde's play have endowed it with immortality. It will be under the direction of Victor Bohlmann, a master of fine arts student in the UVic theatre department.

The second production in the Phoenix will be The Heiress, a dramatic and poignant play set in New York in the 1840s. Based on the novel, Washington Square, by Henry James, The Heiress has enjoyed phenomenal success in London and New York and in the film version which starred Olivia de Haviland and Montgomery Clift.

The play deals with a fortune-hunting but personable young man, a love-hungry girl who has lived in the shadow of her dead mother's personality and a domineering and disapproving father.

Following the close of the Phoenix Summer Theatre season, the seventh annual Senior Secondary Summer Theatre Workshop will move into the spotlight at the Phoenix to present Story Theatre, adapted and directed by Jim Leard. The SSSTW is composed of high school students from all areas of B.C. who spend six weeks on campus taking intensive instruction in all areas of the theatre.

Performances will be given nightly except Sundays, with curtain time 8 p.m.

REFLECTIONS ON LONE PINE

(Although men have played chess on glaciers and deserts, still the town of Lone Pine in the Southern California Sierra seems a strange place for an annual gathering of cosmopolitan chess players from all over the world. Here one of the players reflects on the most recent Statham Tournament there.)

By U.S. Master
John Peters

When 73 high-rated players converge on this quiet town of 1800 people, everybody contracts chess fever. One can't walk down a street without seeing famous players talking excitedly in foreign languages. The only respite from chess is when they try to hustle each other at backgammon.

Naturally, this year, Soviet defector Viktor Korchnoi was the centre of attention. The world's second-best player ("behind Fischer", he jokes) looked unhealthy and played below his usual high standard. That didn't keep the crowds from his table. Away from the board, he regaled the younger players with stories of his recent match with Karpov and of the Soviet boycott directed against him. He said that he wasn't allowd to play in the big tournaments in Bugojno and Montreal because the Soviets threatened to withdraw their players in protest.

One night, Korchnoi approached a group of players, searching for a fourth at bridge. Instead, he got Walter Browne's challenge to a blitz match at high noon in the town hall. The next day, the spectators were treated to a 3-hour speed chess shootout. Korchnoi won, 14-6.

Another favorite pastime between games was complaining about bad luck in the pairings. This year, the race for hardest schedule was between New York's Sammy Reshevsky, at 68 the oldest player, and Seattle's Yasser Seirawan, at 18 one of the youngest. Round after round, they faced topnotch Grandmasters. Appropriately, they played each other in the last round and drew. Seirawan's performance earned him the International Master title.

Homesickness can be a problem for a travelling chess pro. Dashing Argentine GM Miguel Quinteros solved it by bringing his whole family. When they learned that it was New Zealander Murray Chandler's 19th birthday, they invited him to dinner and surprised him with a homemade birthday cake.

Czech GM Vlastimil Hort, inspired by seeing the western landscape and a real Indian, compared the Lone Pine tournament to a movie. It wasn't too far-fetched an idea. For two weeks, the chess actors played their roles. Then the cast departed until next year, when the director will have them do it all again. Though the actors change and new stars are born, the show goes on. This bit player hopes the Lone Pine show will continue for many years.

The solution to the problem above is: 1. B-N5, RxQch; 2. PxR = N mate; or 1. B-N5, NxB; 2. QxR mate; or 1. B-N5, RxB; 2. PxP mate, etc.

Western rail change soon

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's two western transcontinental passenger trains will switch their eastern endpoints starting June 17, Via Rail Canada has announced.

The Super Continental, which travels from Vancouver through Jasper, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Winnipeg and Capreol, Ont., will end its eastbound run at Toronto instead of Montreal.

The Canadian, which goes from Vancouver to Banff, Calgary, Regina, Winnipeg, Thunder Bay and Sudbury, will continue east to North Bay, Ottawa and Montreal instead of going south to Toronto.

The same applies westbound.

Both trains will continue to connect at Winnipeg's CN Station to allow the exchange of coach passengers and sleeping-cars.

Biculturalism old hat to him

QUEBEC (CP) — "We consider bilingualism to be an asset," said Jacques Hodoul, minister of education and culture for the Indian Ocean republic of Seychelles (pop. 65,000), a group of about 100 islands off the east coast of Africa.

Hodoul, who was here mainly for a conference of education ministers from French-speaking countries, was paying his first visit back to Quebec since he graduated in 1968 from Loyola College, an English-language Montreal institution that now forms part of Concordia University.

"We do not have the same linguistic problems as you do," he said in an interview conducted in French.

"Here you have English unilingualism and French unilingualism."

Seychelles, which achieved independence from Britain in 1976, has three official languages — French, English and Creole — and, it seems, no language barrier.

"Everybody speaks Creole," he said of the population of the islands which, by origin, is about 40 per cent African, six per cent French, three per cent Asiatic, and the rest, mixed.

Students wishing to go to university — there is none in Seychelles — go to France or England, he said.

Hodoul came to Canada because he got a Canadian government scholarship. But he also studied law in England before returning to practise in his country in 1972.

Like Quebec, to some extent, Seychelles has a mixture of French civil law and English criminal law.

CALGARY (CP) — A new computer-telephone network to be installed in 120 Calgary homes this fall offers one of the most advanced home security and information retrieval systems in the world.

The communications package has computerized medical and police assistance monitors, automatic fire and burglar monitors, remote utility reading devices, energy consumption monitors and cold detectors.

Officials say similar systems have been set up in Texas, Florida and other parts of the United States, but this is the first time such a comprehensive system has been tried in Canada.

"Our aim is to make fuller use of the telephone lines which already exist," explains Darlington.

"In most homes, these phones are not used most of the day when people are out at work."

Each of the 120 test homes will be connected to a emergency computer control centre through the telephone network and an in-house push-button panel.

When a message is relayed to the centre, the computer will analyse the information automatically and dispatch the proper assistance — ambulance, fire crews or police. The system is activated when the homeowner pushes the button for the appropriate emergency service.

The computer will tell authorities the type of home, the address and other vital information such as the number of residents and any special medical histories.

A similar system will provide burglary protection.

"A resident leaving the home can activate the alarm system, which will allow him 45 seconds to leave before the circuit is set. After that, any doors or windows being opened will signal the computer to alert the authorities."

Returning residents would have 45 seconds in which to de-activate the alarm once they enter the home.

Other circuits would monitor temperatures and warn residents when temperatures might be cold enough to freeze pipes or cause other damage.

Each home will have a two-way information retrieval system that will operate through the family television.

Sask. grant program 'failure'

MOOSE JAW (CP) — A $26-million Saskatchewan capital projects grant program has failed to produce facilities needed for cultural arts, a senior culture and youth department official said.

Lou Jule, executive director of the department's cultural activities branch, told the annual Organization of Saskatchewan Arts Council convention that the department, while developing a provincial cultural policy, will have to consider closely the four-year program.

Under the program, the province pays 50 per cent of capital costs for new buildings and renovations for cultural and recreational purposes. Muncipalities pay the rest.

The scheme expires March, 1981. Jule said the definitiion of recreation and culture is "almost anything you want it to be.

"You are telling us there is no response to the culture and needs of your community — without a question there is little municipal government response — they have other priorities."

He said local governments are using the grants to build skating rinks, curling arenas and other sporting facilities.

"If we're going to get involved in buildings, the needs are going to have to be assessed."

He said his department lacks control over funds to force the municipalities to add other cultural facilities to sports buildings.

He urged arts councils to find ways of dovetailing their activities with recreation boards which have many community leaders sitting on them.

Who will fix the pump?

RIMBEY, Alta. (CP) — This central Alberta town is having trouble finding someone to replace a defective water pump that caused a critical water shortage during the weekend.

A drilling rig firm from Millet refused to do the job Wednesday when it heard the well site was muddy, a town official said Thursday.

Mayor Don Green said the town was virtually without water Sunday after one of the town's three wells broke down Saturday.

New rent guidlines set

WINNIPEG (CP) — New guidelines have been announced for rent limits on about 55,000 residential units in Brandon and Winnipeg still in the rent stabilization program.

The limits, announced by Consumer Affairs Minister Warner Jorgenson as part of the controls program, are effective from Oct. 1, 1979 to Sept. 30, 1980.

The allowable rent increase is 5½ per cent in cases where the landlord pays for both heat and power, or five per cent where the tenant pays for either heat or power. Where a tenant pays for both heat and power, the limit is 4½ per cent.

Two candidates pull out

WINNIPEG (UPC) — The number of candidates running for mayor in the June 20 by-eleetion has shrunk slightly — it's down to 12 from 14 who filed registration papers by deadline time this week.

The City of Winnipeg Act provides a 48-hour cooling-off period during which candidates can withdraw, and businessmen Allen Stern and Percy Brown dropped out of the race Wednesday.

Those still in the running are acting mayor Bill Norrie, councilors Joe Zuken, Don Gerrie, Alf Skowron, and Phil Rizzuto, former councilors Ray Brunka and Harry Lazarenko, accountant William Hawryluk, music teacher William Gidzak, Democratic Reform Party founder Joe Smith, J. Frank Syms, an NDP candidate in the May 22 federal election, and Alex Mitchell.

The election was called following the May 10 death of Mayor Bob Steen, who died of cancer at the age of 45.

Red Deer permits escalate

RED DEER (CP) — The value of building permits issued in May by the City of Red Deer jumped 280 per cent over the same period last year, according to figures released by the city.

Permits valued at about $27.5 million were issued last month, compared to $9.3 million issued in May, 1978.

The increase is attributed to the authorization of institutional construction — about $8 million in contracts for the Red Deer regional hospital and $1.5 million for a city swimming pool.

Alberta to open energy office

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government will establish an energy office in Ottawa July 1, Energy Minister Merv Leitch has announced.

He said Jim Seymour, now director of Premier Peter Lougheed's Calgary office, will head the Ottawa operation for his department.

Alberta already has a general office in Ottawa but Leitch said time has come have an "Alberta energy presence" in the capital.

Roman 'cage' cup sold

LONDON (AP) — An 11.5-per-centimetre-tall glass cup, one of four fourth-century Roman "cage" cups known to be still in existence, has been sold at auction to London art dealer Robin Symes for $1.4 million. It was a record price for a piece of antique glass. Sotheby's sold the cup at the start of a two-day auction of the glass collection of Scottish industrialist collector Andrew Constable-Maxwell.

Baby boom now older: crime drops

Canadian Press

The aging of the baby boom is being credited with lowering crime rates in many parts of the country.

A survey by The Canadian Press shows that over-all crime rates across the country are declining or growing much slower than in the past. Rick Linden, sociologist at the University of Manitoba, suggests the biggest single factor may be the shrinking size of society's most violent and crime-prone age group, 15-24.

The relative size of this group is declining as members of the baby boom grow older and this shift is helping cut crime rates.

Deputy Chief Dennis Chisholm of the Regina police department agreed with Linden's suggestion and said the trend seems to be common throughout North America.

The number of sex crimes decreased in Metropolitan Toronto last year, but increased in some areas, notably British Columbia and Nova Scotia.

Toronto reported 249 rapes, down from 262 in 1977. Police Chief Harold Adamson said it was the first time in five or six years, perhaps longer, that the number of reported rapes decreased.

While the number of rapes did not increase in Edmonton certain cases received much public attention.

The city also showed an increase in violent crimes. Statistics up until the mid-year indicated an 81 per cent increase in the number of robberies.

A police department spokesman said an increased number of transients looking for work in the city may explain part of the rise.

Inflation may be partly to blame for the increase since many items now cost more than $200, a police spokesman suggested.

Police in Toronto say the number of race-related crimes decreased in 1978. A special squad with 12 constables was established five years ago as part of the community services bureau to help the police deal with speicial problems arising in the multicultural city.

GWG sales are still humming

EDMONTON (CP) — Tremors hit clothiers sales offices with the news that last year's jeans sales by San Francisco-based Levi Strauss and Co. had fallen after years of growth.

But at GWG Ltd., the Edmonton-based subsidiary of Levi Strauss — whose television ads have Canadians humming about "bums" in blue denim — only a pause in the market was noted.

Marketing manager Art Hartman says that instead of the 20 to 30 per cent gains common over the last eight years, this year's sales will be only up about 10 per cent.

Total projected sales for the year are about $70 million, two-thirds from jeans, the rest from jeans-related fashion clothes.

Already there has been a turn-around in the United States, and denim and corduroy suppliers are scrambling to keep pace with the demand for material.

Al Boyd, president of the White Stag of Canada division of Warnaco of Canada, says:

"They've been talking about denim peaking for many years and it just doesn't seem to stop.

"The large denim producers are running full tilt and are sold up more than a year ahead, and they tell us there is no sign of a let-up in the future of denim."

White Stag uses denim of many hues in blazers, vests, skirts and jackets. The firm puts together designer jeans intended to be part of a co-ordinated package.

Hartman says response to GWG's "bum, bum" advertising campaign created by Edmonton's Baker, Lovick Ltd. advertising agency has been fantastic.

While he cannot point to a definite change attributable to the ads, there has been a "tremendous public relations feedback."

While GWG's parent company has diversified widely with the Levi name now on belts, shoes and athletic clothing as well as jeans, GWG's focus will be narrower.

"There would be some diversification into active wear, ski wear and running apparel," Hartman says.

"But we have determined a broad strategy that will keep us in jeans or jeans-related clothes. We just feel GWG is better off staying in market we know."

After keeping consumers born during the post-war baby boom in jeans through high school and university, GWG is not about to let them go now.

Jeans will be adapted for the more mature 25-35 year age group who are spreading out in the middle and need a better fit.

But Hartman says the Canadian clothing industry could not survive without high tariff walls for protection.

Variety Club completes gift

TORONTO (CP) — The youth branch of the Variety Club of Ontario has given a $100,000 grant to Young People's Theatre, completing the theatre's building fund drive of $513,000. In return for the gift, Young Variety will have use of the theatre for its twice-yearly productions, proceeds of which are distributed to children's charities in Ontario.

Tell the dentist, if you're afraid

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — If you fear a trip to the dentist's office, a faculty member at Meharry dental school here has advice for you: Tell the dentist you're afraid.

Dr. Joy Wigfall says some patients, referred to in the business as dental phobics, are so terrified that they can't carry on a conversation when even thinking about going to the dentist.

But, she adds, there aren't many of those.

"There are lots of people who have mild, moderate fear, but the true dental phobic doesn't come along too often."

Dr. Wigfall has worked with dental students since 1972 and spends some of her time training the students in ways to deal with patients.

"You have to understand that many patients come to the dentist in fear. If a dentist can understand what that person is going through and talk to them about that fear, then maybe that person will start coming back regularly."

A nervous patient is locked in a vicious cycle involving tension, anxiety, pain and pain perception, she says.

She advises students to gather the patient's dental history. This should include the patient's perception of dentistry and an overview of his or her past experiences with dentists.

The dentist may then begin developing the patient's trust. The approach may vary with different persons, but Dr. Wigfall suggests an arrangement in which the patient can stop the dentist when feeling too much pain.

Now it's chimney clean time

By A. J. HAND

Spring, the traditional time for cleaning up your home and yard, is also the ideal time for all us wood-burners, to clean chimneys and stovepipes.

If you neglect the job now, you probably won't think of it again until fall. Then you might not have enough time to do the work right, or to have any repairs done before the heating season starts.

There are two ways to clean chimneys. You can do it yourself, or you can hire a professional.

Both approaches have certain advantages, but having the job done by a pro is the easiest way to go, so let's examine that possibility first.

The wood-burning revival has resulted in a rapid growth of the chimney sweeping business.

You shop for the best job because having the job done right can save you money in future repairs. It can even save your home and life.

A bad job will give you a false sense of security. It won't protect you against chimney fires or warn you of impending troubles. It may damage your chimney.

To locate a good sweep, the first step is to check for ads in your local paper, look in the telephone book Yellow Pages under Chimney Services, check with friends or consult your fire inspector.

Once you have a list of prospects, give each a call. Ask him for his rates, and find out what is included in the job and how he works.

Some sweeps will show up at your home, shove a wire brush up your flue using flexible fibreglass push poles, clean up the mess and call it a job.

Others will climb up on the roof, inspect your chimney inside and out from top to bottom, examine damper and smokeshelf, as well as clean your flue.

You are looking for the latter sweep.

One such worker in my area gives you a check list describing the condition of your chimney after he finishes a job. After finishing a friend's flue he told him that water was getting into the flue in winter, freezing and chipping away at the tile lining. He recommended installation of a chimney cap to keep out the rain and end the problem.

When you ask for a price be sure to describe your installation. A simple fireplace is usually easier and cheaper to clean than a woodstove setup that requires disassembly and cleaning of stovepipes.

After you have picked a sweep, watch him while he works.

Things to watch for:

— The sweep must go onto the roof. Cleaning from the bottom with push poles is okay, but he has to go onto the roof to inspect the chimney.

— A good sweep will use lights (and not just a plain flashlight) to check the flue lining from above and below.

— He will remove the damper, clean the smokeshelf and replace the damper.

— He will clean stovepipes, grates and irons, and fireplace as well as the chimney.

— He will be neat and leave your home as clean as he found it.

Choose a chimney sweep with care. He does the most important cleaning job in your home.

Runners urged to step out

NEW YORK (AP). — Bob Glover, author of books on the subject of running, recommends that "hobby" runners who do three to five miles a week should consider making one longer run. "Throw in a run of six to 10 miles once a week," he advises. "Go easy and follow it with just two or three miles a day or two later. Alternating long and short runs will build strength and fitness."

Timothy tree crab shucks his shells

Wonderful World of Animals

DEAR DR. MILLER: Timothy, my tree crab, isn't sick, thank goodness. I've just got a curious question about him. I am wondering how he picks out a new shell? How much time should it take him? — G.T.

DEAR G.T.: Ideally, his hermit home will be just large enough for him to draw his entire body inside so that his large claw can seal off the entrance.

Examination of a prospective new home includes examination of interior and exterior with antenna and claw and twirling the shell around with his feet.

The ultimate test for fit, of course, is to try it on for size. That might take him a matter of minutes. But as with most of us looking for a home, if he has several shells to choose from, the selection could take some time.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: When a dog with a bad skin has something call Cushings syndrome, what does he have, really? How bad is it? Can it be cured? — R.B.

DEAR R.B.: A dog with Cushing's syndrome has canine hyperadrenocorticism. As that may not completely clarify the question, let's go one step further. The condition results in a long-term surplus of cortisone hormones in the body. This hormone surplus is produced by the adrenal glands which are either over-developed (often as a result of pituitary gland over-stimulation) or producing a surplus of cortisone hormones as a result of adrenal gland tumors.

Drug treatment and surgery, where tumors are involved, may produce good long-term results if the condition is not too far advanced or if damage to other organs has not occured. As with many other diseases when not treated in the early stages, other vital organs may become involved and damaged. The Cushing's syndrome patient who responds is rarely cured and will require long-term drug therapy.

Of course, the more complications present when treating a disease such as Cushing's syndrome, the less can be expected from treatment

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Snowflake, my cat, had dandruff on the tips of her ears. She is white so it looks pretty scruffy.

What's the best treatment? — H.H.

DEAR H.H.: Snowflake's scaly ears should be checked by her doctor since white cats are particularly susceptible to serious problems in this area. Chronic sunburn is a common complaint. This in turn often stimulates malignant cell growth.

Squamous cell carcinoma is an all-too-common cancer in white cats and it frequently starts on the ears. As scaling of the ear flaps may be an early sign of a sunburn/squamous syndrome, it shouldn't be ignored. Ideally, Snowflake and other white cats should spend very little time in direct sunshine. Using a sun screen lotion on their ear tips is advisable to protect them if sunshine's inevitable. The problem with that approach is that few cats would leave that potentially life-saving lotion on.

DEAR ABBY: During our company's recent sales conference, a number of wives sat in on some of the workshops. While the speakers were delivering their talks I noticed several women doing needlepoint as though they were comfortably sitting in their own sewing rooms.

Shouldn't those wives have shown more respect for the speakers by leaving their needlework at home?

ANNOYED.

DEAR ANNOYED: For many, needlework is therapy. It calms the nerves and provides an occupation for restless fingers that otherwise might be holding a cigarette, for example.

DEAR ABBY: I would appreciate your help about a matter that has puzzled me for years.

When ordering flowers for a funeral, what kind of message should be written on the card? Most important of all, to whom should the message be addressed? For example, "Rest in Peace, Mary," or "Sweet Dreams, John"?

Or should the flowers be sent to the nearest of kin? If that's the proper way, have you any ideas about what to put on the card?

WANTS TO KNOW

DEAR WANTS: Flowers should be addressed to the family of the deceased. An appropriate message would, "With loving thoughts," Or, "My heartfelt condolences." Or simply, "With love," followed by the signature of the sender.

DEAR ABBY: How does a mother thank her 23-year-old son for a most inappropriate Mother's Day gift? He sent me a T-shirt with a very vulgar message printed across the front. (It did have the word "Mother" in it, but it's so obscene I can't write it and, if I could, you couldn't print it.) I can't understand a gift like this. I've never worn a T-shirt in my life.

My son is married and lives in another state. At first I thought maybe his wife picked it out because she has a coarse and somewhat twisted sense of humor. However, my son's signature was on the card that came with it, so apparently he knew what was being sent.

What should I do?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Thank your son for remembering you on Mother's Day, And the next time you see him, ask him who selected that gift.

Smog hazard serious

By L. L. Coleman, MD

Isn't pollution in the air just as much of a hazard as smoking? It seems to me that with all the filth that is poured out of chimneys we ought to stop worrying about tobacco! — Miss R.J.O.

Dear Miss O.:

Despite all the apparent concentrated effort to reduce pollution, cities like Denver, Los Angeles, Chicago, New York and many other smaller cities around the country are blanketed by layers of smog and polluted air. One must wonder how factories are permitted to pour out their filth without firm governmental restriction.

It dumbfounds me sometimes to read that regulations will go into effect in "several years" to reduce the pollution by trucks, cars, diesel engines and factories. My question must be, "Why not now?" For, during these delayed years too many people will have implanted in them the beginnings of bronchitis, emphysema, asthma and other debilitating respiratory diseases.

It is known that the respiratory function of non-smokers and smokers is adversely affected by air pollutants. It is very definite that smokers pay an added penalty when exposed to the same degree of air pollution as non-smokers.

Pollution is something to worry about. Smoking is something to worry about, too. And the combination of both adds a severe threat to health.

Is it true that hair can turn white after a severe fright? — Mrs. G.C.B., Ore.

Dear Mrs. B.:

All of us, physicians and laymen, have heard about someone suddenly turning gray after an emotional upset, unusual fright or calamity. Even though there is no scientific validity to this, some people will not be convinced that it is not true.

A severe illness and some drugs may, perhaps, hurry the process of graying and give the impression of "suddenness." People who have lost a great deal of weight and who look haggard and tired after an illness seem to increase the "grayness" of their appearance. When they are revitalized and the color comes back to their faces, their hair somehow doesn't look so gray.

Prince's coat like new again

By MAY E. MacLEAN

While in England a few months ago, I asked Miss Bartlett, the lady in charge of the workrooms at the Royal School of Needlework, what she considered her most challenging task. Without much hesitation she said it was the restoration and repair of a 14th-century coat which had originally belonged to the Black Prince.

To do this, very fine, specially made, nylon net was used and very carefully sewn all over the coat to hold the original fabric and embroidery in place. I'm told that when it was finished, unless you knew the net was there, it was almost impossible to detect, so painstakingly had the work been done.

Many of the ladies of the school expressed to me their deep sense of achievement and satisfaction in restoring the old embroideries and tapestries, which can include wall hangings, bedspreads, clerical and civil robes, regimental colors or chair seats.

I was told that a number of customers bring in christening robes which have been handed down through several generations with the names of the babies embroidered on, and the school embroiders on new names and dates.

This week's pattern has a bit of tradition, too, as the maple leaf has become to be regarded as Canadas emblem.

Why not crochet a set of four for a favorite friend as a gift?

Over the course of the next few months, thousands of people will be leaving on weekend and cross-country camping trips. Camping offers the vacationer plenty of fresh air without paying a lot for accommodation.

Being in the fresh air, coupled with activities such as hiking or swimming, can have a very stimulating effect on appetites. Therefore, the family cook will have the responsibility of feeding a hungrier-than-ever group.

Help is on the way for beleaguered camp cooks. The Cooking Camper is a 22-page pamphlet that contains a host of recipes which are tailor-made for famished campers.

In addition, the pamphlet offers suggestions with regard to the type of cooking equipment and utensils that should be part of any camping trip.

STOCK LIQUIDATION

SALE

NOW ON!

As You May Have Noticed

Auctions are no longer bringing container loads of furniture from Great Britain. Many of the local shops handling containers have discontinued doing so or have closed down. The reasons for this are varied. The main one's being:

1. Decline in the value of the $.
2. Escalating freight costs.
3. Increasing cost of goods in Great Britain combined with a growing scarcity.

We are therefore going out of the antiques and Olde English Furniture line and must liquidate our stock to convert over to new and used furniture and appliances. We will no longer be shipping containers but will occasionally accept consignment shipments. Most goods are priced at cost or below cost. GARDENING jack beastall

Some rather unusual questions have been posed by several gardeners over the past weeks. In a way it is a little difficult to understand why it should be asked, because the answer obviously lies with the gardener.

Basically the questions are these:

● Why are dealers allowed to advertise as "specials" commodities that are not needed in the average garden?

● To what department of government can the purchaser complain after discovering they have no use for the product and the dealer refuses to take it back and make a refund?

It would appear these gardeners have purchased advertised specials with no knowledge of the product or the purpose for which it is used.

One gardener has purchased four bags of lime for a garden that contains no plants that require, or could possibly benefit from, the use of lime.

The dealer has been requested to pick up the sacks and make a refund, but, as should be expected, is showing no inclination to comply with the request.

A few of the other callers have purchased large quantities of peat moss, spread it over the garden and mixed it with the soil. The few vegetable seeds that have germinated have produced stunted plants, green-black in color, and failing to make any headway.

The stunting and the color indicate a soil that is now far too acid and is likely to remain that way for several years.

When the cause of the problem is explained, the gardener considers the vendor at fault for offering the product for sale and not warning each purchaser of the limited uses for peat moss in the garden and the harmful effects if used wrongly.

This attitude seems unreasonable. There are thousands of products offered for sale, some extremely dangerous to use, but none of us is compelled to buy them, nor can we hold the dealer responsible for offering them for sale.

There are hundreds of gadgets and products for which the average gardener has no use whatever and, therefore, has no reason to buy.

If the gardener cannot resist the pressure of advertising, it is not the fault of the dealer.

Fertilizer is a product gardeners buy in quantity without any knowledge of its make-up or how it should be used.

Those who have the facts and figures have reported it to be the wasted fertilizer that keeps the fertilizer factory working, not the small amount that is actually beneficial to plants.

The fault lies squarely on the shoulders of the gardener who first makes a purchase and asks question later. This is the perfect way to waste hard-earned dollars; and it can also lead to a lot of gardening problems which can be difficult, or even impossible, to correct.

What help can we offer these questioners?

Only this: Before making a purchase ask all pertinent questions and obtain answers satisfactory to you. If the seller cannot answer, look for free pamphlets on the product, or borrow a book from the library which will reveal its uses and shortcomings.

Don't buy gardening products just because they are offered at a so-called special. Be sure your plants need the product and will benefit from its use.

When you come to think about it, those are the basic rules for making any purchase.

* * *

BUYING AND GROWING CABBAGE PLANTS: When buying plants of Head Cabbage or Brussels Sprouts always ask for assorted sizes or choose a pack in which all plants have not made the same amount of growth.

There is a good reason for this; if all plants are the same size they will all mature within a week to ten days, and few families can consume a dozen cabbages in a week or five pounds of sprouts.

Also, check carefully the stems of the plants, which should be young and pliable.

Any of the cabbage family (including Wallflowers) left too long in a seed flat or pack will develop woody stems which will not expand as the plants grow, thereby limiting the ultimate size.

To be on the safe side, buy small plants rather than the largest you see in the display.

Tight cabbage heads and tight buttons on the sprouts result from roots in a tight soil. To have a soil sufficiently compacted, mark where the cabbages are to go and walk along the row every time you go to the vegetable patch. Rake out footprints and walk on it some more.

After two weeks the soil should be suitable for planting. Make a hole in the tight soil with a hand trowel, drop in a small handful of hydrated lime and mix well with the soil in the hole.

Set the plant, then pound the loose soil firm with the handle of the trowel. Follow with a good watering at the roots.

Next, place the cabbage mat around the stem of each plant and fill the hole around the stem with a soft polythene vegetable bag. (A cabbage mat is an eight-inch square of roll roofing, heavy sheathing paper or asphalt shingles, with a slit cut from the centre of one side to a one-inch hole cut in the centre of the mat to facilitate slipping around the plant stem.)

The cabbage mat prevents the fly of the cabbage root maggot from laying eggs just under the soil against the plant stem. The polythene filler allows the stem to expand without binding.

The lime in the hole, and also in any seed mixture for Brassicas, lessens chances of the club-root disease. This is a slime mould thriving in acid soil and carried from garden to garden in soil moisture.

Cauliflower and Broccoli need the same firm soil but not as tight as for cabbage, and containing more compost. All flowering plants belonging to the Crucifer family require the same tight soil and a sprinkling of lime in the soil.

Once any of the cabbage family has been planted there should be no digging, or loosening of the soil nearby, nor any form of deep cultivation. Weeds are hand pulled or cut off with a push hoe, not a chop hoe that loosens the soil.

Forcing growth with fertilizers is another cause of loose heads or sprout buttons, owing to the production of large, soft leaves which fail to wrap and form the tight heads or buttons.

*

Work for week

Peonies are blooming: remove tiny side buds for more perfect show blooms. Water deeply at 10-day intervals.

Dianthus and all pinks and carnations like a well-drained soil and, in June, a light dressing of wood ash.

Narcissus and tulip foliage is limp now and becoming yellowed. It may safely be cut off at soil level and removed. Bulbs may be left in if not watered frequently through summer.

If nights warm by weekend, certain types of plants grown indoors may go out for summer. Put them where they are not forgotten.

Anti-Mao politics makes strange bedfellows

By JAY MATHEWS

HONG KONG (WP) — Of all the ghosts that have haunted the history of Chinese Communism and its most recent troubles, none is more curious than an 82-year-old apparition named Luo Zhanglong, who this week suddenly came back to life.

A party founder purged in disgrace in 1931, Luo was supposed to have died in 1949. Yet he appeared with other phantoms such as Mao Tse-tung's second wife on a list of new members in an official United Front group.

Judge Crater and Amelia Earhart would have created no less a stir if they had turned up on the guest list for a White House banquet next week.

The event appeared to be the work of a minor master of surprises, party Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping (Teng Hsiao-ping).

Along with other top officials in their 70s and 80s, he is letting a few walking ghosts help prepare the way for his own passing.

Recent events have given Deng some cause to worry that soothing old hurts may not be as smooth a process as he had hoped. In Thursday's edition of the Workers Daily, a Peking publication, senior party vice-president Feng Wenbin suggested that senior officials are again being attacked as "capitalist roaders," a favorite slogan of the youthful Red Guards who pushed Deng and many of his colleagues into temporary retirement a decade ago.

At 74, Deng should appreciate he has only a few years to stifle such sentiments and ensure a lasting respect for experience, expertise and plain talk at the highest levels of the party.

In the view of Deng and his colleagues, this would both keep their memories alive and guarantee China's position as a world power in the 21st century.

In this way he can stealthily diminish the role of the late Chairman Mao, whose legend as an advocate of regular upheaval is so dangerous to the kind of China Deng wants to leave behind.

Luo was a scholar and labor organizer, one of the only Chinese leaders able to read Marx in the original German.

He helped start the party in 1921, whom Mao later denounced him as a "rightist opportunist."

Named along with Luo on the list of political consultative conference members were several other past purge victims, symbolizing Deng's insistence that contrary views and experience must have their place in party affairs.

They included Mao's second wife, He Zizhen (Ho Tzuchen), who disappeared from sight after their divorce in 1937. Also on the list was Ding Ling, a well-known female writer penalized for her insistence on artistic and, it is rumored, sexual freedom.

Several other victims of Red Guard attacks in the 1960s, some rehabilitiated for the first time, also appeared.

Canada-made brew hot seller in Calif.

By CATHY McKERCHER

LOS ANGELES (CP) — In pubs and bars throughout California, the Molson brand of beer is quenching thirsts by the thousands.

About 75,000 gallons of the Canadian-made brew go down the gullets of California beer buyers every month and sales are expected to double in the next few years.

"We think we'll be the No. 2 imported beer in California in a year," John Winter, general manager of the Martlet Importing Co. Inc., said in an interview. "We're already No. 2 nationally."

The most popular imported beer in California — and across the U.S. — is Heineken, produced in the Netherlands. Winter believes Heineken sales reached a million barrels, or 25 million gallons, in the U.S. last year.

Martlet, owned ultimately by The Molson Companies Ltd. of Montreal, expects Molson imports to reach the million-barrel milestone in the 1979-80 fiscal year.

Molson U.S. sales in 1978-79 were 19 million gallons, up from 13 million gallons the previous year.

Molson products sold in California are Golden Ale and the brand known in Canada as Export Ale. But since the Export is an imported ale here, it is sold in the U.S. under the name Molson Ale.

Both varieties are sold in long-necked, non-returnable green bottles rather than the squat, brown deposit bottles in Canada. A six-pack costs about $3.50, less than some other imported beers but more than the domestic ones.

Martlet, which began importing the Molson beer to nine states in 1971, now sells in 24 states and expects to expand to 40 states in two years, Winter says.

The California branch is expected to turn its first profit this year, its third in operation. By the end of five years, Winter hopes to record an over-all profit.

Winter, whose family lives in St. John's, Nfld., says taste is a key factor in the rapid growth of the imported-beer market in this country.

"I find the American product tends to be getting lighter," he explains. "Imports such as the Canadian beer offer more flavor and body."

He adds there also is a certain kind of snob appeal involved in buying an imported beer rather thana domestic one.

Molson's Ex a beer with snob appeal?

"In some places, apparently, yes. It's very popular in some eastern college towns, for example. In some, we even outsell Schlitz."

Winter says that selling beer in California and other U.S. markets is "a sheer delight" compared with Canada.

The beer is sold here in grocery and convenience stores. In addition, Americans are much more relaxed in their attitude toward the brew:

"They don't seem to have that 'booze is evil' thing you find in Canada."

'You are acting worse than the shah'

By WILLIAM BRANIGIN

TEHRAN (WP) - A crowd of about 100 Iranians was waiting passively outside Tehran's Qasr prison to see relatives inside when an altercation suddenly broke out at the visitor's entrance.

A young man, denied entry at the last minute, began shouting at a burly prison official, who shoved the young man away from the door and ceremoniously tore up his admission pass as rifle-toting guards looked on.

Less than four months after the followers of the Ayatollah Khomeini overthrew the regime of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi there are at least as many, probably more, political prisoners in Iranian jails than were independently estimated two years ago. Now, as then, there are serious violations of human rights, according to Iranian and foreign observers.

In some ways Iran's performance on human rights has improved under the new regime. In other areas it is worse than before. What is clear is that the people who run Khomeini's prisons, courts and militias have no more respect for the concept of human rights than their counterparts under the shah.

Whereas the shah's brutal secret police, Savak, has been dismantled, other institutions that violate human rights have sprung up in its place. The most notable among them are the secret revolutionary courts and the khomitehs, or commmittees, which provide the courts with defendants.

"Under the previous regime, torture and imprisonment were fairly systematically applied to anyone considered dangerous to the security of the regime," said an Iranian journalist whose father is currently a political prisoner. "Nowadays there are no criteria for . . . retribuution, arrest or detention. There are no criteria for punishment, which is purely arbitrary. It's straw-vote justice and straw-vote punishment."

"The biggest plus," he said, "is that one of the most highly organized institutions of physical and mental torture in the world has been destroyed. The minus, which in the long run may be even worse, is that the same totalitarian attitude toward law and justice as before is being applied today, but even more capriciously. Human rights have been victorious in one field and suffered a blistering defeat in another."

According to the director of Qasr prison, Mehdi Araghi, some 1,700 people are currently being held there, all of them for having been connected with the previous regime. Other sources believe there are more prisoners. A guard at the jail estimated the number of inmates at about 3,000.

A prison spokesman said Qasr currently received an average of 10 new inmates a day.

Araghi said that Qasr, the largest prison in Tehran, is the only one in the capital that keeps inmates who were linked with the shah's regime. Araghi had no estimate of how many such prisoners there are in other cities and towns across Iran.

In April, 1977, when the shah was trying to spruce up Iran's human rights image in the wake of international criticism and the election of President Carter, the shah permitted an International Red Cross team to visit Iranian prisons. The team counted 3,087 political prisoners in 18 jails across the country.

That number steadily decreased over the next two years as the shah's government regularly released groups of political prisoners in a vain effort to placate rising opposition sentiment. When the monarchy was overthrown in February, only a few dozen political prisoners were still in jail.

A request by this reporter to visit prisoners currently held at Qasr was denied. Araghi said Amnesty International and the Red Cross already had visited the prison and referred inquiries to those organizations.

Red Cross officials in Tehran said they toured Qasr prison at the end of March but have not issued a report, because authorities reneged on an agreement to let the delegates interview prisoners privately with no prison officials present - a practice the Red Cross insists upon.

"According to our criteria, we don't call that a visit,"said Harald Schmid de Grueneck, a Red Cross representative in Tehran.

After two months of negotiations the organization received permission to set up a prison visit that meets its criteria and is currently preparing for the visit. In any event, de Grueneck said, Red Cross reports are confidential and are submitted only to the government involved.

According to relatives of Qasr prisoners, conditions in the jail are satisfactory. But in a series of interviews the relatives voiced a number of other complaints.

Every one of a dozen people interviewed said their imprisoned relatives had not been informed of the charges, if any, against them.

They variously complained about arbitrary arrests and confiscation of property, the refusal of authorities to permit the examination of any files against the prisoners or the hiring of lawyers for their defense and demands by prison officials for large bribes to obtain the release of jailed relatives.

None of those interviewed wanted themselves or their imprisoned relatives to be identified for fear of aggravating their cases, and appearing to have "foreign connections" that might be used against them.

However, several Qasr visitors waiting outside the brick, fortress-like prison one recent afternoon seemed eager to voice their grievances. The crowd cut across class lines, its members ranging from the obviously well-to-do to the urban poor.

A youth said his brother, a factory worker, had been arrested after his boss fired him for criticizing the new government. "He's been in for a month and a half, and I haven't been able to see him yet," the youth said.

An agitated middle-aged man said his 72-year-old father, a colonel retired for 20 years, was "arrested by mistake" three months ago. The man claimed his father was found not guilty by a secret revolutionary court, but that the family had nevertheless been asked to pay 5 million rials ($71,000) in "bail" to obtain his release.

"There are no laws, no regulations," the man said. "If they arrest me for talking to you, there's nothing I can do."

Four of the visitors — a man who said he was an army pilot and three women enveloped in traditional ankle-length black veils — admitted that their imprisoned relatives had been employed by the dreaded Savak.

The pilot said his brother-in-law, a "Savak clerk," was arrested just after the February revolution and had yet to be charged.

"I think the trials are based on justice," he said, "but those who are not charged with anything should be released."

Another pilot, a 24-year-old named Fuad, said no one would tell him who his father, an army colonel based in western Iran, was being detained.

Typifying the thin line that seems to exist between those officers and soldiers now in prison and those still serving under the new regime is the case of Reza Abdulbaghi, 25.

He used to be an officer in the shah's Imperial Guard, the elite force that fought to preserve the monarchy against the February insurrectin.

Chinese youth admonished for disrespect

PEKING (UPI) — A leading Peking newspaper is urging that children return to the ancient Chinese tradition of respecting their parents and helping them in old age rather than disdaining them.

Beijing Ribao (Peking Daily), official paper of the Peking municipal government, said China's 1966-76 Cultural Revolution had turned children against their elders.

"In our present society, some young people do not want to take care of their parents," the newspaper complained. "Some people even mistreat their parents."

Like most of China's troubles, the paper blamed the disturbed parent-child relationship on the "Gang of Four," an ousted Communist party faction that dominated the government from 1972-76, but not on late Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

The article argued that even Chairman Mao paid a ceremonial visit to his parents' graves in 1959.

"When the Gang of Four was in power this kind of morality was damaged," the paper said. "People who respected the older generation were accused of being influenced by feudal ideas."

"Taking advantage of the innocence of young people, the Gang of Four threatened them. It urged them to get away from their parents and be separated from the older generation."

Tranquillizer real shot in arm for law enforcement

By J. C. Graham

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — The success of a tranquillizer dart in subduing a deranged man has suggested to New Zealand police that the system may be a valuable new aid in emergencies.

A psychiatric patient on home leave in Auckland failed to take his fortnightly medication — an injection — recently. He became violent and could not be subdued without risk to life.

Doctors say that with medication the man is manageable and cheerful. Without it he can become wild and dangerous.

In a similar incident 18 months ago, eight police were needed to restrain him, and two received stab wounds.

This time he again became violent, hurled furniture out of his house, and threatened to use a carving knife on those who approached him. He held police at bay for four hours.

Police and psychiatric staff could find no way to subdue him, short of using a lethal weapon. When they hit upon the idea of the tranquillizer dart, one doctor said, they probably saved his life.

The idea of using tranquillizers has been considered before in New Zealand, but has been rejected because they do not act instantly. In this case; however, immediate results were not necessary.

Assistance was sought from the curator of Auckland Zoo, who provided a pistol and darts used to sedate animals. A police surgeon calculated dosage of anesthetic needed to sedate the man without endangering his life.

A police sharpshooter, who also had experience of psychiatric nursing, then approached the man. When he failed to calm the man the officer fired at the man's thigh.

Within two minutes the man was asleep.

The incident has resulted in requests that tranquillizer guns be made standard equipment for armed offenders' squads.

Nature builds a better rat trap

By LEE MITGANG

NEW YORK (AP) — Owls love rats and mice. A healthy adult barn owl can eat as many as 35 rodents a day. And owls, unlike rat poisons, don't pollute.

Armed with those simple facts, two small New Jersey cities have decided to tackle an age-old urban health problem: the control of rats and mice.

John Gallagher, chief of the Program Services branch of the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, calls control of rodents with owls instead of poison "a viable alternative."

While owls aren't about to solve the rat problems of big cities, smaller and medium-sized towns around the U.S. are watching the oldest experiment — in Morristown, N.J. — with interest.

The Morristown program may take years to show results because the city has to get the owls accustomed to nesting where it wants them to. "You don't just push a button with wild owls," says Len Sousy, who heads a society interested in owls. The society is helping Morristown.

But whether owls or rat poison are used, Gallagher and almost everyone else agrees that improved sanitation is the essence of controlling rodent infestation.

Morristown began its novel experiment about two years ago, hoping that re-introducing barn owls into their town would provide an answer to its rat-control problems that would be easier on the local environment than heavy doses of rat poison.

This spring, Bloomfield, N.J., also decided to turn to barn owls.

"The program started when we felt that there are natural predators for everything," says Howard Steinberg, Morristown's chief of sanitation and the originator of the idea. "But we never expected it to work in just two or three years. It's going to take awhile."

Making the idea work has been a continuing struggle, and involves turning back damage man has done to owls over the years.

Pitless village refused to die

Written for CP
By NORMAN CRIBBENS

DONCASTER, England (CP) — For more than 20 years, miner Jack Duffy kept guard on a Yorkshire village that refused to die.

In 1959, the nearby village of Moorends became an anachronism — a pit village without a pit. When the last shift of miners came up the sodden coal shaft, many said the pit would never open again.

The miners found jobs at other pits in Yorkshire and Lancashire, but Duffy, now 60, refused to believe the doubters. He stayed behind to guard the silent colliery.

Some said it was the loneliest job in Britain, but Duffy never gave up hoping that one day Moorends would have its pit back. And, sure enough, the colliery is to be re-born. At a cost of £180 million it will be one of Britain's biggest coal producers and among the most modern mines in Europe.

The year chosen for the re-birth of Moorends and its new colliery is 1984 — and no one is happier about it than Jack Duffy.

"I signed on here as a 14-year-old lad when the pit had been open for only six year," he says. "I watched it thrive for more than two decades and I watched it die."

Duffy is the only link between the old days and the future. Other watchmen who were there when the long vigil began have either retired or moved on.

"I knew they wouldn't put a fence around the pit and let me patrol it all these years if it had no future. I just kept hoping and believing and now I want to see the first men go down again before I retire."

When the pit closed 20 years ago, with floodwater threatening its twin shafts, it employed 3,000 men, many of them living in the houses that were built when the pit was first sunk.

The leaking shafts eventually were repaired, but the colliery never reopened because cheap oil and nuclear power had made it uneconomical. The energy crisis changed all that, as coal once again became a vital part of Britain's self-sufficiency program for the future.

When the colliery closed and the miners transferred, it had a devastating effect on the village. Men had to rise hours earlier to catch buses; social life suffered, and pit houses fell empty as families moved away.

But Moorends refused to give in. Miners clung to the hope that one day they would be back in their own pit, and so they will be.

National Coal Board officials forecast a life of up to 70 years for the pit; 140 million tons of coal; 1,500 new jobs, and prosperity for an area of high unemployment.

Already Moorends is bustling with development teams and mining experts planning the new pit.

CHURCH NEWS

Evangelist returning to Island

Canada's own evangelist, Max Solbrekken, is back on Vancouver Island for two crusades, one of them this week in the Duncan area, the other starting Sunday at Esquimalt United Church.

Edmonton-based Solbrekken, widely known for a television and radio series, and for helping people with personal and medical problems, will speak Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the church, 500 Admirals.

Solbrekken

He will be accompanied by associate evangelist Dudley Fairbairn, who is a talented singer.

Solbrekken's Duncan crusade was aimed at helping the native people reduce their suicide and breakdown rate, he said in an interview this week.

Agape puppet show set

The Agape Puppets will share the Word of the Lord in song and story on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Grace Lutheran Church, 1273 Fort.

This group uses some youth from King of Glory Lutheran Church, Boise, Idaho, to help in their presentation.

The audience appeal is for everyone.

The puppets, comparable in size to those of Sesame Street, are under the direction of Lori Moreland.

The stories include Daniel in the Lion's Den, Zacchaeus, Noah, The Prodigal Son and The Good Samaritan. There are song presentations and modern day stories to help us see how to share, be kind, and how to treat our friends and enemies.

High school choir rings in The Lord

The Westminster Handbell Choir will give a concert including compositions for bells, transcriptions, and accompaniment by instruments and voices at Oak Bay United Church on Saturday, June 16, at 7:30 p.m. The 11-member high school age group rings more than three octaves of Schulmerich handbells. They come from First Presbyterian Church, Sandpoint, Idaho. Director is pastor's wife Lois Scott.

New windows ceremony set

On Sunday following the 11 a.m. communion service at Metropolitan United Church, the last two of seven stained glass windows in the Spencer Memorial Chapel will be dedicated.

The first window depicts Christ's birth in the top panels and in the lower panel shows a camping scene with young people. This window is being dedicated to our pioneers in the Faith, and completes the series on incidents in the Life of Christ.

More than 30 people gave donations towards it.

The second window off the choir loft depicts the crest of the United Church of Canada, a red cross on a blue field representing the first letter of the word Christ in Greek, and the symbols of the descending dove, representing Methodism, the open bible, Congregationalism, and the burning bush, Presbyterianism.

These three streams of Protestantism with some local union churches made up the United Church of Canada, formed June 10, 1925.

This window which, will be dedicated to the glory of God, and in memory of William James Rath, and in honor of Mary Ellen Rath, has been presented by their daughter, Mrs. Ferne McConville. Both windows were made by G. Maile & Son, of Canterbury, England, and installed by R. J. de Bourcier.

The chapel is named in honor of the Spencer family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. David Spencer and their descendants who contributed greatly to the life and development of Metropolitan United.

The cornerstone was laid May 1, 1960 by Miss Sara Spencer.

The interior of the chapel was completed as funds became available and it was dedicated March 27, 1970. It provides a beautiful setting useful for many services that do not require the seating of the main sanctuary.

Perspectives

By Rev. J.H. Davidson

To be yourself, to achieve "identity," you need other persons, you need their acceptance and appreciation. You also must be able to accept and to appreciate others. We achieve our personhood only in and through our relations with others.

Acceptance says "yes" to the other person as a person with his or her sacred individuality, even though it may not be able to say "yes" to all that person's actions and opinions and beliefs.

But acceptance is not a simple, easy thing. We all find it difficult at times to accept persons who differ from us in race and language, in culture and economic circumstance, in religious and political affiliation.

It is often difficult to accept fully persons who are very close to us. Parents sometimes find it difficult to accept fully their children when they develop strong views of their own as they struggle toward maturity, a struggle that always has in it a good deal of trial-and-error. And children can find it difficult to continue to accept their parents when they are reluctant to replace their moss-covered views and ideas and principles with the splendid new ones offered them by their newly-wise children.

Even in so intimate a relationship as marriage, full mutual acceptance cannot always be assumed. But happiness and stability in marriage are directly proportional to the degree to which a man and a woman accept one another as persons, each with his or her own special needs, each with his or her own sacred individuality.

An active essential in acceptance is appreciation. The desire to be appreciated is built deeply into our nature. William James, philosopher and psychologist, said that "The deepest principle of human nature is the craving to be appreciated." Some years ago an English physician, Dr. Geoffrey Evans, in his presidential address to the Royal Society of Medicine, made this observation: "Most people require a constant supply of appreciation for their mental health."

You will help a person more by expressing appreciation than by pointing out his or her shortcomings—no matter how kind and well-intentioned you are when you do that, as we all are, of course, when we point out to others their shortcomings. Goethe, the great German poet, put the matter in this way: "If we take people as they are, we make them worse. If we treat them as if they are what they ought to be, we help them to become what they are capable of becoming."

The magic of appreciative acceptance is shown in a little case-study reported by an English psychologist. A group of university students decided to play a rather elaborate joke on one of their fellow students, a dull, drab, unattractive girl. The joke was in treating her as if she were tremendously attractive and popular. The psychologist reports: "Before the year was over, she had developed an easy manner and a confident assumption that she was popular." What had begun as a rather cruel joke worked out as an agency of personal development and fulfilment for the subject of the joke.

It is a fundamental of biblical faith that we must appreciatively accept one another: that is part of the meaning of the biblical notion of "love."

(Dr. Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa.)

Lutheran meeting today

The B.C. district of the Western Canada Synod of the Lutheran Church met today at Grace Lutheran Church and began the day with a worship service which included Holy Communion.

The dean of the district, Pastor Frank Schmidt from Langley, and the president of the synod, (bishop) Donald Sjoberg, led the meeting.

Delegates came from 19 congregations, with guests also invited.

Church Chronicles

Esquimalt Church of the Nazarene has set itself a $6,500 goal for Sunday's 11 a.m. Faith Promise for Others service. The money will go to home and world missions, colleges, the Canadian Bible Society and other needy causes.

Such pledges are in addition to other tithes and offerings. The church hopes some individuals will pledge up to $1,000 each.

•

Cathie (Nikky) Nicholl, known around the world by former students and associates in the Pioneer Camps of Canada, Inter-varsity and Interschool Christian Fellowship, will be guest of honor at a tea and reception in Vancouver in recognition of her 50th year of service. Her friends are invited to renew acquaintances with her in the lounge of the church hall, St. John's Shaughnessy, Granville and Vancouver on Sunday, 3-5 p.m.

•

Sunday at 11 a.m. at First United, Quadra at Balmoral, will see the last day's official work for George Schram, music director. There will be a music recognition service for Schram, who completes a two-year term that day.

Later Sunday, the annual congregational outing for church members and their friends will be held at Sylvan Acres, Lands End Road, at 3 p.m.

Participants bring their own picnic suppers, but tea, coffee, ice cream and cool drinks will be provided. Vespers will be at 6 p.m.

•

Future Survival, a movie that looks at the devastating consequences of ignoring the direction this planet is taking, will be shown at Church of the Way, 195 Bay, at 7:30 p.m. Sunday. The public has been invited by pastor Bill Johns.

•

Canadian Ecumenical Action's single adult network offers two programs tonight. The 30 plus group meets at Sacred Heart church lounge, 4040 Nelthorpe at 8 p.m., while the 50-plus group meets at St. Andrew's Presbyterian lounge, 680 Courtney, at the same time. Information, 479-1611.

•

The Anglican Church Women will hold their annual garden party from 2-4 p.m. Wednesday at the Caroline Macklem Home, 1322 Rockland. Mrs. Blanche Gates, diocesan president, will open the party, which features a variety of stalls.

•

Project North Victoria has sent a letter of congratulation to Justice Thomas Berger, who received an honorary doctorate from Simon Fraser University at the convocation held last weekend in Vancouver.

The group said, "Your determination and courage for the cause of justice in our country, particularly on behalf of native people, have been, and continue to be, the source of inspiration to us and to thousands of Canadians. We feel honored to have known one of the giants of history in this century."

From March, 1974, to November, 1976, Justice Berger inquired into and held hearings on the social, economic and environmental impacts of a proposed gas pipeline and energy corridor in the Mackenzie Valley and Western Arctic. He recommended the building of the pipeline be delayed until native land claims were settled.

•

The Island Christian Village is sponsoring two seminars with Esther Bennett and Sharon Pryor. The first, in two parts, is A Right Standing With God (Freedom from Guilt), on Wednesday and Thursday, 7-9 p.m. The second, on Friday, 7-9 p.m., is entitled Knowing God's Will for our Lives. All meetings are at Queenswood House of Studies, 2494 Arbutus Road. For information on cost and registration, call 598-7372.

•

There will be a celebration of Holy Communion at Christ Church Cathedral at 10 a.m. on Monday to mark the seventh anniversary of the Cathedral Prayer Group. Following the service, members will meet in the lounge and will be addressed by the Rev. Neil Robinson. Tea and coffee will be served and the Prayer Group will welcome all would like to join.

•

Dr. E.M. Smiley of Victoria Truth Centre will talk on Life at the Cross Roads as part of the program of Sunday services at the centre, 1201 Fort Street, 11 a.m. this Sunday. On Wednesday, Dr. Smiley will answer written questions during a congregational meeting at 8 p.m. This will be followed by a friendship hour 9—10 p.m. which will feature a slide showing of the King Tut collection.

Open-air services resume

This summer's open-air gospel services sponsored by Park Services Interdenominational will start Sunday—rain or shine—at the Cameron Band Shell, Beacon Hill Park, at 7 p.m.

Now beginning their 37th successive year, the services will continue each Sunday to the end of August.

These interdenominational Christian services will each be conducted by a different church or group.

They are designed to appeal to those who like worship in the open air during the warm summer evenings, and to persons just enjoying the beauty and peace of the park.

The opening service on Sunday will be in charge of the Free Methodist Church whose pastor, Rev. David Benson, will deliver the gospel message, and Parkdale Evangelical Free Church whose pastor, Rev. Kenneth Strom, will be master of ceremonies.

The musical program will include items by the joint choirs of the two churches, by a singing trio from the Methodist church comprising Doris Betker, Maxine Benson and Helen Smith, and by a trio from Parkdale Church consisting of Russ Vincent, Rod Seginowich and Ginette Sunderberg.

There will be vocal solos by Reuben Peters and Catherine Dash, a violin solo by Kerry Strom and a saxophone solo by Kenneth Strom. Accompanist will be Nova Strom.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, June 10
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (Mar. 21 - Apr. 19): Reach beyond current expectations. What you seek is available. Know it, act accordingly. You gain spiritual insights. You perceive potential and see beneath superficial layers. Pisces, Virgo individuals figure prominently.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 - May 20): You gain fresh view of money, contract, legal commitment to an individual. You emerge from low cycle. You get proverbial second chance. Love, creativity, greater independence, original approach are featured.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Agreement made in past could come back into limelight. Means disputed issues are to be settled. Go slow, be thorough, avoid basing responses strictly on impulse. Take special care in handling sharp objects.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): New job, form or mode of employment could be up for consideration. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Accent on nutrition, basic issues, pets and dependents. Take special care when lifting heavy objects.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Emotions, speculation, variety, children, affairs of heart are featured. Follow through on hunch — you learn by teaching. Family member could confide dilemma. Don't cast first stone. Cancer, Capricorn, Aquarius individuals crowd busy scenario.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): You are "released" from area of confinement. You could have reason to celebrate. Horizons expand — you have greater expectations. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Be versatile, open lines of communication.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): You get response from ideas, suggestions, calls, messages. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo persons figure in scenario. Delay is temporary. Know it, maintain balance, humor — and faith. Relative who feels "restricted" confides in you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Accent on communication, special person, resolving differences with member of opposite sex. You could locate what had been lost, missing or stolen. Income potential is enhanced. A "legal representative" could be a part of scenario.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Cycle is such that judgement is wise and intuition is sharp. You can be at right place at crucial moment. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio figure prominently. Domestic "settlement" indicated — you'll be happier as harmony replaces "war zone."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Look behind the scenes. What seems obvious actually requires further examination. You "fooled" yourself. You took too much for granted. Error can be rectified if you strive to see places and people in realistic light.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Accent on getting what you need — contrasts to wishes, desires. You might not recognize good news when it arrives. Member of opposite sex wants commitment. Northing will remain lukewarm. The heat is on.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - Mar. 20): Emphasis on career, superiors, goals, finishing what you start, determining what is responsibility, what is an imposition. Message will be clarified. Aries, Libra figure prominently. You can be rid of an unnecessary burden.

IF JUNE 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are dynamic, independent, creative, restless, intelligent, affectionate and have original ideas which can be developed into meaningful concepts. You make major domestic adjustment this year, which could include a change of residence. Your most significant months of 1979 could be September and November. If single, you could marry. If married, there could be an addition to family. Married or single, your lifestyle undergoes dramatic transformation. Money situation improves — you add to possessions, you beautify surroundings and you make amends to loved ones for mistake in past. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. You travel in June and make numerous social contacts. You could fall madly in love in August.

For Monday, June 11

ARIES (Mar. 21 - Apr. 19): It is an aura of business, profession, prestige, civic duty, displaying sense of responsibility. Superior makes room for you. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently. Older individual lends benefit of experience.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 - May 20): Good lunar aspect coincides now with special, long-range projects, rare insights, completion of a cycle. Aries, Libra persons are part of scenario. Finish rather than initiate — refuse to be rushed, cajoled, chided into premature move.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Added financial independence likely following frank appraisal of situation with partner or mate. Welcome chance for greater independence, originality and creativity. Leo figures in exciting scenario.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): You regain sense of direction by going slow, checking safety, security measures. Aquarian is in picture. Money, legal rights and permissions figure prominently. Do plenty of listening. Sharpen powers of observation. Patience is a valuable ally.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): What appears a setback will boomerang in your favor. You recently overcame emotional "wound." Healing process is underway and going strong. You'll have reason to celebrate. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons are likely to be in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Accent on excitment of change, travel, variety. Children, affairs of heart, impulse, creativity, definite commitments are also highlighted. Travel, writing, sales, basic communications grab spotlight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Study Virgo message. Get ideas, concepts on paper. Member of opposite sex offers encouragement — and makes demands. Build for security. Demonstrate self-reliance — and commonsense. One who has your best interests at heart insists that you come out of shell.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Relatives, home environment, surroundings, luxury items and art objects dominate scene. Be versatile, not careless. Exchange ideas, don't engage in foolish arguments. Telephone call from family member might mean a short journey.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Steer clear of money schemes. Protect possessions. Pisces, Virgo individuals play key roles. Perceive, see through pretense, avoid self-deception, realize your own worth. Permit no person to denigrate your capabilities!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): This is your power-play day! Know it, take lead, accept responsibility, invest in your own business acumen. Member of opposite sex is not playing games. Stakes are high — and for keeps. Plan accordingly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): You are finished with buden that actually belongs to another. Celebrate! Let go of dubious security blanket. A bad dream is ended. You'll get deserved recognition. Aries, Libra person figure in vital, dramatic scenario.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - Mar. 20): Friendship "heats up." Nothing is lukewarm. Hopes, wishes, special relationships are on the line. Leo, Capricorn, Aquarius natives figure prominently. You make discoveries. You create, originate — and love.

IF JUNE 11 IS YOR BIRTHDAY you are teacher, psychologist, an individual with a conscience, concerned with those who need help. You're no angel, but you do care — and we sense it — we feel good as a result. Leo, Cancer, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. October will mark a time when you rebound from emotional setbacks. You learn many lessons this year — the main one, perhaps, is that you get nothing for nothing — no free lunch. Disillusionment brings strength, greater self-realization. You remodel in August, you could have a family reunion, beautify surroundings, find greater domestic harmony or change residence. You are sensitive, emotional and psychic. You are not everyone's cup of tea. But some people would find it difficult to live without you.

India's jailed see the light

By GRANVILLE WATTS

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Bhola Mato has been in prison in India's eastern Bihar State for nine years without trial.

Six years ago his file was lost, and while he has been waiting in vain for justice, his wife and only son have died.

His case is not an isolated one. At least half of the 240,000 people crammed into India's overcrowded prisons are awaiting trial.

A commission investigating the country's prison system has given examples of women who have been in prison for up to nine years waiting for their cases to be heard, and old men who could no longer remember why they were arrested.

Now, however, there is hope for Bhola and all other "under-trials," as they are called here.

India's Supreme Court, spurred on by a tenacious campaign mounted by the newspaper Indian Express, has ordered five states to deal with all under-trials within six months or to release them.

The ruling followed a petition filed by a lawyer based on a letter written to him by Express editor Arun Ahourie, and it probably was the first time the Supreme Court had taken note of a letter from an editor's desk.

The court found that some prisoners had been awaiting trial for longer than the maximum sentence they would have received.

The under-trials have suffered because the police are either too busy or too lazy to process their cases and the courts have more work than they can handle.

India's legal system, based on British law, is full of delays which can let trials drag on for years.

The public became interested in under-trials during the 1975 emergency rule of former prime minister Indira Gandhi, when about 100,000 of her political opponents were detained.

Amnesty International, the London-based human rights organization, said in a recent report that as many as 1,000 political prisoners are still in jail here in connection with Communist activities.

The report claimed that most were arrested before the emergency, but many are held without having been tried. It also said that prisoners had been found who had been held for as long as six years without trial.

But most of the under-trials have nothing to do with politics, and the way the system works now has been criticized as favoring the rich and hitting the poor.

People who can raise the necessary money can stay out of custody on bail until their case is finally heard.

But most poor people in India — where half of the 650 million people earn less than about $7 a month — are unable to produce the necessary bail.

A committee of five legislators recently was formed to have another look at ways of ensuring quicker justice.

Law Minister Shanti Bhushan told the members that the rate of dealing with cases before the supreme court and the high courts had increased during the last two years, but that there were still more than 444,000 criminal cases before magistrates and 60,000 before judges.

Bhushan said the department of justice was implementing a program to build 538 new courts and appoint more judges and magistrates.

In its latest directive, the supreme court expressed strong displeasure at what it called a chaotic state verging on wholesale breach of human rights.

It described the situation of under-trials being held for more than five years as "too ghastly for a civilized country like ours."

Noise 'doomwatcher' predicting the worst

By NICHOLAS MOORE

NAIROBI (Reuter) — The ancient Romans banned nocturnal chariot races under a law enacted to help the citizen to enjoy a sound night's sleep.

But modern man, says a report by a United Nations body, is in danger of losing the battle against the din which he himself creates.

Noise pollution, at least in developed countries, poses health risks which range from insomnia to heart trouble.

"It affects the rich who sleep in a quiet suburb but travel by plane and cruise by motorboat, just as much as the poor who must live next to a highway or railway or near an airport runway," writes Dr. Mostafa Tolba, director of the UN Environment Program.

The agency, based in Kenya, was set up in 1972 as a "doomwatch" body assigned to monitor environmental threats to mankind. So worried is Tolba about noise that he devotes a chapter of his 1979 annual report to it.

Outside of noisy factories, road traffic is the worst offender. By 1980, Tolba predicts, 300 million vehicles will be crowding the world's roads, three times as many as in 1960.

And the effects of sudden noise?

It produces marked body changes. Blood pressure rises, the heart pounds, digestion stops and muscles contract.

Where noise level is consistently high it can contribute to heart trouble and, of course, deafness.

Regulations in Canada and the United States limit the permitted noise level in factories to 90 decibels over an eight-hour stretch.

Against that level of sound, two people standing one metre apart would find it difficult to converse normally.

Thompson — May

St. Michael and All Angels' Church was the setting for a lovely spring wedding on May 5, 1979, when Shirley Anne, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robin May, and Keith Harrison Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herb Thompson, were united in marriage. Canon W. J. Hill officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an elegant gown of fine matle jersey enhanced with re-embroidered chantilly lace over front of the fitted bodice, bordering the portrait neckline and encircling the waist. Scattered pearls glittered from the lace and the cuffs of the bishop-style sleeves were fashioned of lace over net. The long pleated skirt draped softly to a medium train. Her chapel-length veil of silk illusion with dainty lace trim misted from a mini floral and pearl-trimmed headpiece. She carried a cascading bouquet of red roses and stephanotis. Maid of honor Wendy White and bridesmaids Lyla May, sister of the bride, and Wendy Thompson, sister of the groom, wore identical floor-length jersey gowns of soft yellow, with matching capes and picture hats. They carried bouquets of white daisies with feathered blue carnations and baby's breath. The little flower girl, Vaia Zaganas, cousin of the bride, wore a floor-length gown of pale yellow eyelet and carried a basket of white daisies with feathered blue carnations. The groom was handsomely attired in a white and black versaille tuxedo, accented with a red rose boutonniere. The best man, Ken Anderson, and ushers, Bruce Hodgins, Rick McLeod, and ring-bearer Bradley Moran, nephew of the groom, all wore powder blue and black Prince Edward tuxedos, accented with yellow carnation boutonnieres.

The reception was held at the Princess Mary Restaurant Vessel. Mr. Bill Howes was the master of ceremonies, and Mr. Jack May, the bride's uncle, gave the toast to the bride. After a honeymoon in the Caribbean the newlyweds will be residing in Victoria.

Vincent — Duckers

Mr. and Mrs. P. W. (Don) Duckers are pleased to announce the marriage of their daughter, Gillian Frances, to Mr. Rick Dean Vincent, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Craig.

The wedding took place on April 21, 1979, at St. Paul's Anglican Church with Archdeacon Greenhaugh officiating. The new Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Vincent will be residing in Victoria.

Green — Brown

Holy Trinity Church, Patricia Bay, was the scene of a pretty spring wedding on May 9, 1979, at two o'clock, when Margaret Audrey Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cuthbert M. Brown of Brentwood Bay, became the bride of John Taylor Green, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan E. Green of Victoria. Reverend Robert Sansom officiated. The organist was Mr. Charles Palmer.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in her floor-length gown of champagne delustered satin with lace-trimmed veil and headpiece to match. Her colonial bouquet was of lilies of the valley, stephanotis, baby's breath and ivy, with brown and green ribbons. The matron of honor was the bride's sister, Mrs. Barbara Ellison of Prince George, and the bridesmaids were Miss Helen Green, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Georgina Page, cousin of the bride; and Miss Helen Bradley. Their gowns were of champagne eyelet embroidery with sprigs of brown and green flowers, with capelets of champagne sheer. They carried baskets of white and bronze daisies and fern, with brown and green ribbons. The best man was Mr. Fred Green, brother of the bridegroom, and ushers were Mr. Dan Carrier, cousin of the bride, Dr. Robert Clark and Mr. Murray Lucas.

The reception was held at the Margaret Vaughn-Birch Hall, Sidney, where the toast to the bride was proposed by her uncle, Mr. Kenneth Page of Nanaimo.

Dahle — Macken

In the Nitobe Gardens, U.B.C., on June 4, 1979, Reverend M. Stewart officiated at the double-ring ceremony uniting in marriage Lynda Kathleen, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Macken of Vancouver, and Mr. Peter John Dahle, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Roald P. Dahle of Victoria.

After a honeymoon trip through the interior of B.C. the couple will reside in Burnaby.

McKay — Evans

Shady Creek United Church was the scene of a double-ring ceremony on April 14, 1979, when Katherine Alison, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Evans, Sidney, and Mr. William Donald McKay, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Don McKay, Sidney, were united in marriage. Reverend M. H. Adams officiated.

The bride entered the church on her father's arm in a full-length gown with a high lace neck and lace sleeves, carrying a cascading bouquet of white freesia, coral baby roses, heather and baby's breath. Maid of honor was Joyce Welle; bridesmaids were Pat Evans (sister of the bride) and Brigita Algadzis. Karli-Ann Joinson, niece of the groom, was flower girl. The groom wore a cream three-piece suite. Best man Donald Sparling and the two ushers, David Sparling and Kevin Coney, wore identical jackets to the groom with chocolate brown vests and pants.

The reception was held at the Legion Hall in Sidney. Staff Sergeant Al Tomlins, Colwood RCMP, a friend of the family, was master of ceremonies and also proposed the toast to the bride. Guests included relatives of the bride from England and of the groom from Texada Island and the mainland. Following a ski holiday in Lake Tahoe, Nevada, the new couple are making their home in Sidney.

Barbour — Sproule

Lieut. Commander Aubrey C. Karagianis, RCN (retired) and Mrs. Karagianis are pleased to announce the marriage of their daughter, Harriet Sproule, to Mr. Robert Barbour, son of Mr. and Mrs. Terrence Barbour.

The wedding took place at the Metropolitan United Church, Victoria, on Saturday, May 19, 1979. Reverend E. Laura Butler and Reverend Phillip Ross officiated. After the ceremony a reception was held at the Strawberry Vale and District Community Centre.

Anniversaries

Stevenson — 60th

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Stevenson celebrated their 60th Wedding Anniversary with family and friends, May 16, 1979, at the Racquet Club to which 187 people sat for a lovely plate dinner. The Reverend Harold Wingfield of Youbou gave the introduction, Reverend Dr. Bob McLaren said the Grace and the Reverend John Davidson of Cadboro Bay United Church sang "My Love Is Like a Red Red Rose" and "O Rown Tre". Telegrams were received from Her Majesty the Queen and from friends and relatives in England and Scotland. Scrolls from the Prime Minister, His Honour Lieut. Governor Bell Irving and the Mayor of Esquimalt. Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson also received beautiful flowers from their grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson were married in Scotland, May 16, 1919. They came to the Prairies in 1920, farmed the Peace River Country in 1929 and spent several years with the Provincial Government in the Arctic during the winter months. They came to Victoria in 1939 where Mr. Stevenson joined the forces as a Graduated Psychiatric Nurse until he retired in 1960. Mrs. Stevenson is a life member of the United Church Women. Both are charter members of the Cadboro Bay United Church since coming to Victoria.

Mrs. Stevenson has two sisters in Victoria, Mrs. Christina Gibbs and Katherine Inglis; one brother, David Callander, in Regina. Mr. Stevenson has one brother, John Stevenson, and one sister, Margaret Callander—both of Scotland. They have two daughters, Mrs. Lilias Smale and Katherine Vickers of Burnaby, B.C.; two sons, David Archibald and Gerald Garth; 13 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Burton — 60th

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Burton celebrated their Diamond Anniversary at a tea in the Dingle House. Married June 7, 1919, in New York City, they came to Victoria from California in 1973 to join their daughter and family and became Canadian Citizens. Tom is a retired electrical engineer; Margaret, a retired registered nurse.

Hastings — 65th

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Hastings will be celebrating their 65th Wedding Anniversary on June 17, 1979. Married on June 17, 1914, they came to Victoria in 1924 to make their home. They have three children—Earl and Freida Hastings, Pender Island; Beatrice and Bill Rankin, Sechelt; Grace Hastings, Sidney; grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

♥♥♥

Morris — 50th

Mr. and Mrs. Wes Morris will celebrate their Golden Anniversary on Tuesday, June 26, 1979. They were married in Nanaimo in 1929. In Victoria they operated Mt. Tolmie Grocery for 19 years.

A reception to mark the occasion to which an open invitation is extended to all their relatives and friends will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. on Saturday, June 23, 1979, in the party room of the William Fraser Tolmie Apartments, 1701 Cedar Hill Cross Road, Victoria, B.C. Please, no gifts.

I THINK ITS A CRIME THAT local establishments offer us working class people the services of a bank in able to spend a hard earning dollar. Example: A local establishment said to me that they could cash my cheque if I waited 10 minutes and offered me a 20 advance for my uncashed check. Then made up excuses for not being able to cash my check after one hour. So Please Beware. Dennis Jeanneault.

BONNIE & CLYDE STYLE

What's the hold-up with this retail space? Downtown location, excellent terms, amenable landlord and immediate availability. Take from approx. 2500 square feet to over 5000 at a price you have only dreamt about. This is a steal and very likely irreplaceable in the downtown area.

Queenswood
A serenely beautiful location, .89 acre and total privacy. For delightful living this 2000 sq. ft. home of great charm combines with the beautiful landscaped grounds. A periphery of natural woodland encloses the gorgeous rhododendrons and azaleas that mingle with the many exotic trees and shrubs; a large pool reflects their beauty. In spring a profusion of bulbs and alpine miniatures gladden the eye. There's a sanctuary-like air of peace, quiet and beauty both inside and out. The 28 ft. living in-line dining room has a wall of low windows bringing the pool and garden inside. Indirect lighting and cherry panelling are among many quality constuction details. The study is restful, with ample storage and garden access. Decks overhang the pool for summer living. Kitchen is complete, compact and appealing. Utility and storage adjoin. There are 2 large BRs, 2 spacious 4 pce. bathrooms. A rare find that must be seen to be appreciated. Price is $120,000: there are no driveby's, appointments must be made through:

SANDS — DUNCAN

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

The family of the late Thomas Henry Scarff wish to thank relatives and friends for the many expressions of sympathy received by them during their recent bereavement. The beautiful floral tributes, cards, Mass Offerings, and Contributions to the Queen Alexandra Hospital for Children and the Canadian Cancer Society are very much appreciated. Special thanks to the pallbearers, Father M. Costello, Dr. P.W. Semenchuk, and to the nurses and orderlies of 4A, Victoria General Hospital.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness, messages of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings received from our staff and many friends in Victoria in our sad bereavement in the loss of our beloved wife and mother. We also wish to extend our special thanks to the staff of Victoria General Hospital, Mr. John Jeanes, Rev. L.M. Carlson and McCall Bros. Funeral Directors.
Mr. Bernie Zorn, Peter and Mark

We wish to thank our many truly careing friends and relatives for the many expressions of Love and Sympathy, cards, letters, flowers, and Contributions, in the loss of our loving husband and father. Special thanks to Dr. Heffernan, all the nurses and staff of Victoria General Hospital, Padre Phil Ross for his Ministry in our Sorrow.
Mrs. Gordon Duncan and Family.

THE KOPPLIN FAMILY WISH to thank all those whose kind expressions of sympathy helped sustain us through our recent loss of our beloved son and brother Gordon.

We sincerely wish to thank all our many relatives and friends for their beautiful floral offerings, expressions of sympathy and contributions to the Canadian Cancer Society, in our sudden loss of Norman Jackson, a wonderful and loving husband, dad, papa and grandpa.
Thank you Dr. A.G. Vey and attending doctors and nurses of Royal Jubilee Hospital. A special thank you to Rev. J. Rae Allan for all his kindness. Honary pallbearers were Lyle Ebert, Craig Hemstreet, Walter Popadynec, Felipe Vazquez, Murray and Brian Starling.
Marge Jackson, Jerry, Lynn, Vicki and families.

309 IN MEMORIAM

CURTIS — Richard, accidentially on June 9, 1975. In loving memory of my son.
Your memory is as dear today, as in the hour you passed away.
I often sit and think of you, when I am all alone, for memory is the only friend that grief can call its own.
—Sadly missed and ever remembered. Mom.

LARSON
A wonderful mother, woman and aid;
One who was better God never made,
A wonderful worker, loyal and true,
One in a million, that, mother was you.
Just in your judgment, always right,
Honest and liberal, ever upright;
Loved by your friends and all you knew;
A wonderful mother, that, mother, was you.
The loneliness without you,
The ache deep in our hearts;
We've nothing left but memories,
With them we'll never part.
You are not forgotten, mother
Nor will you ever be,
As long as life and memory lasts,
We will remember thee.
Laurie Larson and Family.

LARSON - In loving memory of Laura, passed away June 9, 1979. Though the door is closed and the smile has gone, her memory will be treasured beyond measure of words.
Irene, George and family, brothers, sisters and families.

Nothing can every take away
The love a heart holds dear
Fond memories linger every day
Remembrance keeps him near
Sadly missed by his wife Hazel and families

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

U.S. orders recall of some sleep pills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government announced the recall Friday of most drugs containing a cancer-causing antihistamine that for years has been the active ingredient in such non-prescription sleeping pills as Sominex, Excedrin P. M. and Compoz.

The recall means the products should quickly disappear from pharmacies and other stores that sell over-the-counter drugs.

Wayne Pines, a spokesman for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, said it will be up to individual companies whether to reimburse consumers who have the drugs in their home medicine cabinets.

The voluntary recall involves drugs using methapyrilene, which for 25 years has been used in over-the-counter sleep aids and other drugs.

The announcement was made jointly by Joseph Califano, secretary of health, education and welfare, and the Proprietary Association, whose members manufacture 80 per cent to 90 per cent of the non-prescription products containing methapyrilene.

"This substance poses a potential risk to humans," Califano said. "People who take sleep aids or cough-cold or allergy remedies should discontinue using those containing methapyrilene. Consumers should consult the ingredient list on medicines in their possession to see whether methapyrilene appears."

The recall will not remove over-the-counter nasal sprays and skin medications that contain relatively small amounts of methapyrilene since the risk associated with those preparations is much lower, the government said.

The National Cancer Institute concluded in April that methapyrilene causes liver cancer in rats and mice and should be presumed to do so in humans.

After evaluating the cancer institute's data, the Food and Drug Administration reached the same conclusion.

It was not immediately clear what would happen if companies that do not belong to the trade association fail to recall their products. Pines said they would be asked to do so and could face seizure of the drugs through further government proceedings if they do not comply.

The Proprietary Association said that most makers of over-the-counter sleep aid products already have stopped manufacturing drugs containing the chemical and some already have begun to ship reformulated products.

Among the brands being reformulated are Sominex, Compoz, Excedrin P.M., Sleep-Eze and Nytol.

Officials said the reformulation involves substituting pyrilamine, a chemically related but less potent antihistamine, for the traditional ingredient.

Sex joins liquor, cigs on cancer danger list

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The spices of life, including sex, are more likely to cause cancer than food additives or air and water pollution, medical experts said Friday at a joint U.S.-West German cancer prevention conference.

Workers employed in such occupations as carpentry or the asbestos industry — but not necessarily the nuclear plant industry — may also face health hazards, the doctors warned at a news conference.

One of the radiologists was Dr. Mildred Scheel, wife of West Germany's President Walter Scheel and founder of Deutsche Krebshilfe, the German Cancer Research fund which co-sponsored the two-day conference with the American Health Foundation, a preventive medicine organization.

Sex was cited as a risk factor in cervical cancer and herpes, a painful sore recurring on the genitals and believed linked to cancer, according to Dr. Ernst Wynder of the AHF.

He recommended better sexual hygiene to help prevent the diseases. The number of cases of genital herpes has increased so drastically in recent years that it is being classified a venereal disease.

"We have talked against smoking, drinking and now sex — soon we will have no friends left at all," Dr Wynder said.

Alcoholism, not just a few drinks daily but heavy alcohol abuse, increased the risk for cancers of the mouth, pharynx, larynx, esophagus and liver, says a study presented by Dr. Kenneth Rothman of Harvard University. A major complicating factor was a generally high smoking level among alcoholics, the study said.

About 30 to 35 per cent of all cancers in U.S. men are related to tobacco use. The figure is lower for women.

The greatest cancer risk in the workplace is caused by smoke, says another paper, written by Dr. John Higginson of the World Health Organization in Lyon, France.

Both organizations sponsoring the conference are particularly keen to make the public aware of lifestyle and its role in preventing cancer. They discounted other possible risks.

Dr. Wynder told reporters that air and water pollution and food additives such as nitrites, used in bacon, or other preservatives, processing agents or packaging materials "do not relate significantly to any increase in the human cancer risk."

Regarding the controversial sugar substitute saccharine, Dr. Wynder said that two extensive bladder cancer studies are being conducted in the U.S. and the findings will be known later this year about the sweetener.

River in Kansas runs wild

AUGUSTA, Kan. (AP) — Hundreds of southeast Kansas residents were evacuated from their homes as the Walnut River roared through the southeast Kansas communities of El Dorado and Augusta, blocking roads and knocking out the city-owned electric plant in Augusta.

With more rain expected today, flood damages were estimated at $3 million in El Dorado alone. Damages for Augusta were not immediately known.

Police in both communities reported no deaths or injuries Friday night. They attributed it to the slow rise of the river, caused by almost five days of solid rain.

"It's over the dike and in the streets," said Steve Shaffer, Augusta police chief. "In some places it's three or four feet deep. I've got emergencies all over the place."

Shaffer said local authorities, with help from National Guard soldiers, were evacuating people from an estimated 1,500 houses in low-lying areas of the city. He did not have an exact figure of the number being evacuated.

Highways to the east and south of Augusta were closed by the Kansas Highway Patrol because of high water, leaving the only access to the city of 6,500 along U.S. 54 from Wichita, to the west.

The police chief said the flooding, which he said covered one-fourth of the town by midnight Friday night, knocked out the city-owned power plant that furnishes power to about 8,000 customers. The police station, using an auxiliary generator, was the only place in town with electricity, he said.

The National Weather Service issued a flood watch for streams in the basins of the Marais des Cygnes, Neosho and Verdigris rivers in addition to the Walnut. Forecasters said additional rain expected today might worsen the flooding.

An apparent record crest of two metres over flood stage was reported on the Walnut in El Dorado, 20 kilometres upstream from Augusta, the National Weather Service said. However, and an exact reading could not be made Friday night because of the high water.

El Dorado, an oil community of 12,000, was surrounded on three sides by the flood waters. Police said about 500 persons were evacuated from low-lying areas.

Stubborn Calif. fire tamed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Tired firefighters claimed victory today over a fast-moving grass fire that charred 57,000-acres in central California, but hot, dry Santa Ana winds sparked dozens of new fires in the southern part.

Two airborne firefighters dropping chemical retardants on a stubborn brush fire were killed Friday when their C-119 tanker plunged to the ground on the Morongo Indian Reservation.

Forest Service pilot Dennis Conner, of Ramona, Calif., and co-pilot Dick Ray, of Chico, Calif., crashed while helping to regain control of a 2,300-acre blaze that had broken outside of fire lines in Millard Canyon.

A huge 57,000-acre blaze near Mendota in western Fresno County required some 340 firefighters on the lines at its peak, but many went home for needed rests Friday afternoon after containment was declared. Full control was expected today.

The California Department of Forestry said more than 62,000 acres had been blackened in two days of high temperatures and strong winds as of late Friday. The figure did not include dozens of smaller fires not requiring state assistance.

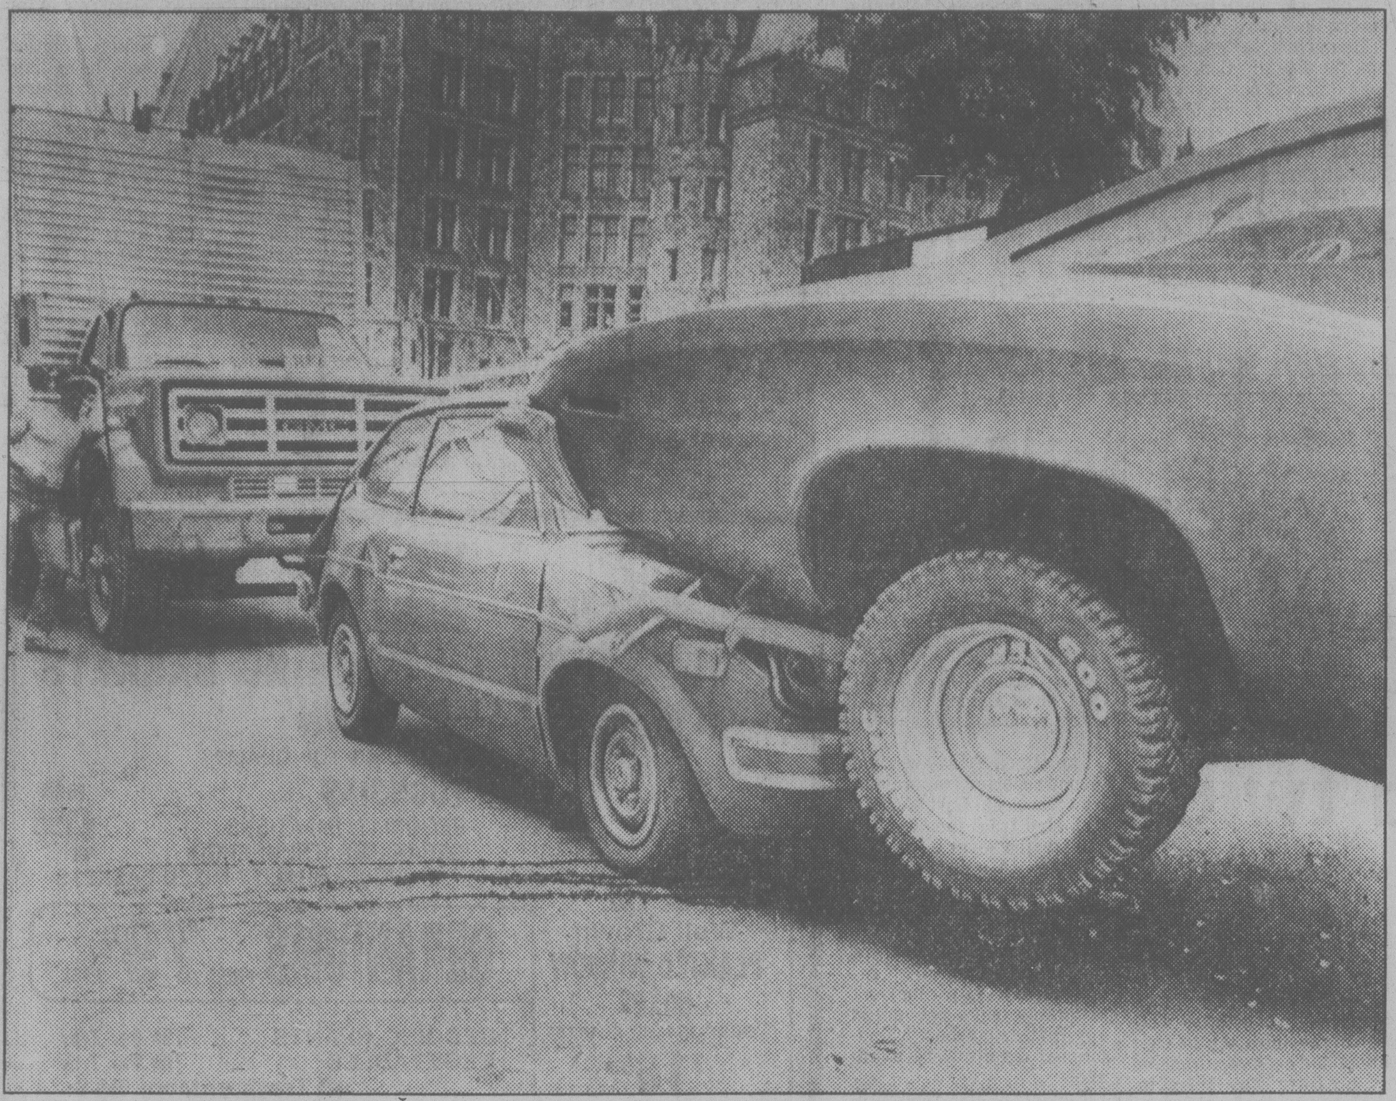
WEEKEND EDITION

96th YEAR, No. 1 ★ ★ ★

VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, SATURDAY, JUNE 9, 1979

20 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY



BIG MEETS SMALL with inevitable result as a two-car, two-truck collision on an Ottawa street forced smaller car into — and under — rear of larger vehicle in front. Though damage seems severe, the driver of the small car escaped serious injury.

Tentative pact ends long press shutdown

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver's two daily newspapers could be back on the streets by late next week if union members ratify a tentative contract which would end a strike-lockout in its eighth month now.

Management and union negotiators shook hands over a tentative agreement early this morning to climax a marathon bargaining session which started Thursday morning.

About 1,400 members of six unions at Pacific Press, which produces the morning Province and evening Sun, will vote on the proposed pact during the next few days.

Pickets are to remain around the Pacific Press building until all votes have been held. If the agreement is ratified, company spokesman Jerry Marr said it will take 72 hours to get the papers back into production.

Harold Dieno, co-chairman of the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions since last week, said the agreement would run 40 months and would be retroactive to last Nov. 1, the day members of two unions walked out and members of four others were locked out.

Neither Dieno nor Marr would give any other details.

Kagel, a high-priced labor lawyer who helped settle the previous contract, was called in in March to try to do it again. He pulled out in May, but both sides say he had drawn them close to a settlement by the time he left.

The final agreement was thrashed out in an almost continuous 40-hour session at the provincial labor ministry's office in Burnaby. Marr and Pacific Press general manager Dave Stinson did the company's talking while Dieno and Bob Jennings represented the council.

Some of the pickets doing their overnight rounds at Pacific Press were happy to hear the news while others remained cautious.

"Let's see what the tentative agreement has to offer," said a member of The Newspaper Guild, the largest of the six unions. "We've been on the street for some time and if they don't come up with something that meets our expectation, I'd be prepared to reject it."

No easing up on helmet law

Greater Victoria police will continue to lay charges against any motorcyclist who doesn't wear a helmet despite a Burnaby court ruling that the regulation covering the requirement is invalid.

"We have received no directive from the attorney-general not to lay charges so we'll carry on as usual and continue to prosecute violators," Victoria police Insp. Scotty Grant said today.

On Friday, Burnaby provincial court Judge Selwyn Romilly ruled that Section 207 of the Motor Vehicle Act which requires motorcyclists to be helmeted is null and void.

Romilly said the section states the superintendent of motor vehicles must specify which helmets meet provincial standards.

However, he noted the superintendent has been using test results in other parts of the world without testing helmets locally. No helmets have been officially approved in B.C., the judge said.

Grant said that regardless of the ruling a motorcyclist would be foolhardy not to wear a helmet, approved or otherwise.

"I've seen too many people injured in accidents not to doubt the helmet requirement is a good one," he said.

New Boeing kickback probe

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Allan McKinnon has asked for an investigation to determine whether Canadian law was broken when Boeing Co. of Seattle sold aircraft to Canada on a dual contract system.

McKinnon said in a telephone interview today that he has discussed the matter with Solicitor-General Allan Lawrence and has drafted a memo asking him formally to launch an investigation.

Boeing officials told a U.S. investigation into possible kickbacks that it sold aircraft to a number of countries, including Canada, on a dual contract system, but former Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais told the Commons in February that an RCMP investigation had found no grounds for laying charges.

The RCMP report was never made public and McKinnon said he would like to review the report to see how far the investigation went.

McKinnon said he was not satisfied that there had been no wrongdoing. The double payments could constitute bribery or evasion of income tax laws, he said.

If an investigation warranted it, the issue would be turned over to a parliamentary committee for further study after the next session opens this fall, he said.

The U.S. Securities and Exchanges Commission is investigating $52 million in Boeing payments to consultants in countries including Canada, Argentina, Greece, India, the Sudan and Venezuela since 1968.

Boeing said in a July 24 submission to the commission that "the company executed two consulting agreements in connection with aircraft sales in a number of countries."

These agreements were negotiated between 1971 and 1975 at the request of consultants, the company said.

A man whose identity has not been made public told the commission he worked as a consultant on Boeing sales in Canada and received payments.

Boeing sold aircraft to Air Canada, the defence department, Eastern Provincial Airways, Nordair and Transair during the period being investigated.

Union reacts bitterly to civil service freeze

OTTAWA (UPC) — The union representing more than 180,000 federal public servants has reacted bitterly to a Treasury Board freeze on new spending and hiring in the public service.

In response to the freeze announcement Friday, Andy Stewart, president of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, called on Stevens to hold immediate discussions with the public service unions to explain the Tory plans to reorganize the civil service.

He said the decision to freeze all hiring will affect the number of women, francophones and native peoples in the public service.

"The turnover rate in the public service is higher for females," Stewart said in an interview. "The turnover in the public service is higher for francophones, which means if they don't fill those positions, the ability of the government of Canada to deliver programs in both official languages is going to seriously suffer."

Meanwhile, The Moncton Times says a moratorium has also been placed on the former federal Liberal government's decentralization program.

According to the New Brunswick newspaper, officials in the federal public works department said late Friday a program to move federal government departments outside the Hull-Ottawa region has also been frozen by Treasury Board President Sinclair Stevens.

Stevens' press-release announcement of the temporary freeze on public service hiring made no mention of putting the decentralization program on hold.

Stevens could not be reached for comment.

Referee mum on port strike

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Federal mediator Bill Kelly remains tight-lipped about his first day of closed-door discussions with B.C. longshoremen's union officials and their employers Friday.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce has added its voice to that of various farm groups urging an end to the strike.

Uganda prison for Astles

KAMPALA (Reuter) — Bob Astles, British-born aide of ousted Ugandan dictator Idi Amin, was flown back to Uganda today from Kenya and taken to Luzira prison, where he will await trial for murder.

The pilot of his aircraft said the former head of Idi Amin's anti-corruption squad said as he arrived at Entebbe Airport: "It's nice to be back."

Ugandan officials said he would be arraigned Monday.

Astles is the first senior official of Idi Amin's toppled regime to be returned from abroad to face criminal charges. Ugandan officials have applied to Kenya for the extradition of 45 other Ugandans held in Kenya.

Astles arrived in Kenya on April 10 after crossing Lake Victoria in a canoe.

By VIC PARSONS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Government Employees' Union, which is expecting a rough round of negotiations with the government, is considering a strategy of escalating strikes directed at key government services.

The plan, to be presented at the union's annual convention this weekend, lacks specifics about which groups would be called out on strike.

But it says immediate and total walkouts by special "target groups" are the most effective way of putting pressure on government negotiators.

The plan also calls for gradually escalating strikes, beginning with withdrawal of services for one or two days initially with the walkouts getting longer or hitting other groups if disputes are unresolved.

The union, which represents 37,000 provincial government employees, is preparing for negotiations for a master contract next week and general secretary John Fryer has predicted the talks will be the toughest the union has yet faced. The current master agreement ends July 31.

Fryer says it will be almost certainly necessary to take a strike vote this round and a walkout may be necessary.

In formulating its strike plan, the union knows it is facing a provincial government that has extended essential service legislation to cover many of its employees. That factor could affect their ability to use strike action effectively.

Although the union sets out a general plan for strike activity, it does not reveal which government services would be hit.

During the last round of talks in 1977, the union had proposed to hit liquor distribution stores. A strike was averted but the government has since moved to blunt the effectiveness of liquor store strikes by excluding managers and assistant managers from bargaining units. That situation has not yet been resolved.

"It is important therefore that, within our over-all strategy, we retain the element of surprise to prevent the employer from having the lead time to introduce contingency plans to weaken a strike," the paper says.

The report says that because calling out target groups would put undue financial strains on only one portion of the membership,

Quebec bus crash kills 11

ST. HYACINTHE, Que. (CP) — Eleven members of a senior citizens' club, on their way home after a night at the racetrack, died early today when their chartered bus slid off the rain-soaked Trans-Canada Highway near this town 50 kilometres east of Montreal.

Thirty-nine persons, including the driver, survived the crash. Most were treated and released from hospital, but four remain in serious condition.

Police who spoke to driver Jacques Sauvageau said he told them he was trying to pass a car on a long, curving stretch of highway about 1 a.m. Quebec time when the vehicle began hydroplaning on the slippery pavement and he lost control. It was raining heavily.

The bus fishtailed, with the rear end smashing into three pylons supporting an overpass. The rear third of the vehicle was crushed almost completely on the driver's side and severed from the rest of the bus.

Police said it was one of the few curves on a mostly straight segment of highway.

It appeared the driver was observing the speed limit, they added.

All the passengers were members of the a Victoriaville, Que., senior citizens' club, who had spent the night on an outing to Blue Bonnets Raceway in Montreal.

Victoriaville is east of St. Hyacinthe.

Twenty were treated at Honore Mercier hospital here, but only the four seriously injured remained in hospital.

The tragedy marked the third major bus accident in the province in less than a year.

Last August, 40 persons, most of them mentally or physically disabled members of a club for the handicapped, died at Eastman, Que., in Canada's worst-ever highway accident.

Just days later, another bus crash in St. Sauveur, north of Montreal, killed three schoolchildren on their way home from an outing.

Those two accidents prompted an outcry across the province and led the Quebec government to commission a report on bus safety.

Clark firm on embassy move

OTTAWA (UPC) — Despite opposition from the Arab world, Prime Minister Joe Clark has not changed his decision to move Canada's embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to the disputed city of Jerusalem, a Clark spokesman says.

"Our only comment is that Mr. Clark stands by the comments he made on Tuesday and there is no change in the commitment," Clark's information director Jodi White said Friday.

Clark had told a Tuesday news conference that he "would not want anyone to think that there has been any slackening in our determination" to enact his election promise to move the embassy.

Late Thursday, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald sought to defuse the issue by assuring nine ambassadors of infuriated Arab nations that no move was imminent and Canada would not take sides.

Arab states have threatened to retaliate by cutting all diplomatic and economic ties, a move that could cost Canada $885 million in exports, 55,700 jobs and half its oil imports. The Palestine Liberation Organization hinted at violent reprisals.

Canada "has indicated its support in rhetoric for the State of Israel and we now have an opportunity ... to take an action that will back up what we have been saying," Clark said. "We intend to do it."

The statement appeared to differ from that of Miss MacDonald, who said after her meeting with the Arab ambassadors, "We have made it clear that we would not wish any move we make in this matter to be construed as taking sides in the on-going negotiations ..."

The status of Jerusalem is one of the most bitterly disputed items in the Middle East conflict. Only the Netherlands and 12 Latin American nations locate their embassies in Jerusalem, and none has been added since the 1967 war when Israel occupied the entire city.

Meanwhile in Saudi Arabia, the Islamic Conference today urged the canadian government to reconsider plans for moving the Israel to Jerusalem, the official Saudi news agency said.

A statement issued by the conference's secretariat here said the Clark government's plan hostile to Moslem countries, the agency reported.

In Vancouver, Pierre C. Fortier, president of the Association of Consulting Engineers of Canada, said Canadian consulting engineers could lose millions of dollars worth of business if Canada moves its Israeli embassy.

"There's no doubt that an Arab boycott on doing business with Canada would have a serious effect on consulting engineering businesses," Fortier said in an interview.

"There are at least two dozen major Canadian consulting engineering companies with substantial contracts in various Arab countries," Fortier said.

Banged pipe gushed twice

Bad luck, they say, comes in threes.

But two is quite enough, thank you, as far as the peninsula water supply is concerned, Capital Region District spokesman Mike Williams said today.

Water service was restored at 2 p.m. Friday after two breaks in two days in a new section of pipe connecting the main system to a pumping station on Martindale.

"The quality of the pipe is good but it travelled several thousand miles and it was damaged in transit. These things happen sometimes."

Usually they happen rarely.

"It happened to us twice which is a bit of bad luck. When the pipe is banged it can be damaged without showing any outward signs of a problem. It only breaks when the water flows through and it is subjected to pressure."

The first bang must have been quite severe because the pipe broke on Tuesday as soon as water began to flow through it.

The second break came Wednesday in another section of the line after the first break had been repaired and as pressure was being increased.

The second break has been repaired and the pipeline now is operating at 140 pounds pressure, about 10 pounds under its rated capacity.

But the two breaks have caused enough concern to require a full testing of the quarter-mile section.

This test will be conducted in about two weeks by raising pressure to about 200 pounds, about 50 pounds above rated capacity, to see how the pipe responds.

If there are no further breaks, the project engineers will feel confident no other damage occurred during the trip.

While repairs were under way, peninsula residents were asked to conserve water by delaying washing cars or watering lawns. The CRD now has given the go-ahead for normal water use.

Williams, senior design engineer for the CRD, said it was unusual for two breaks to occur in a short section of pipe.

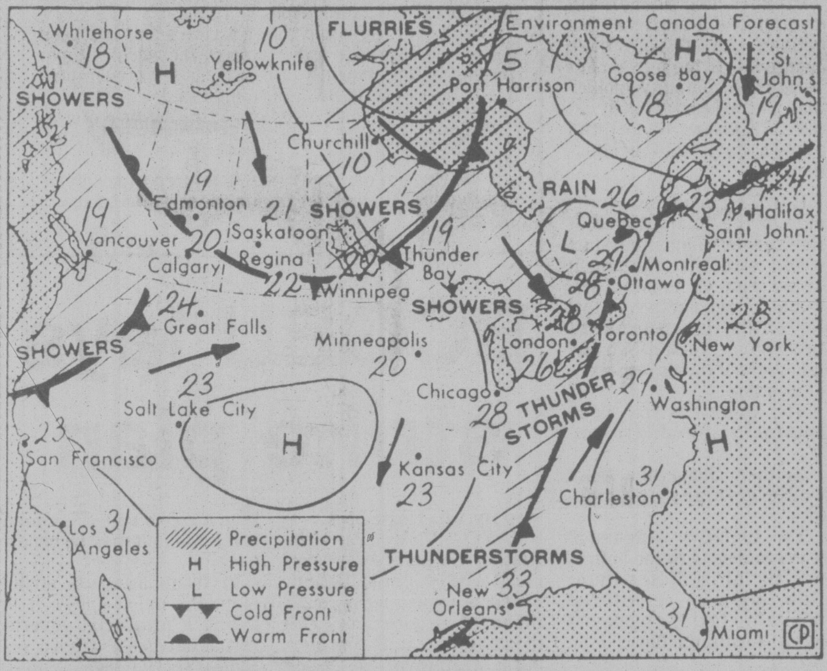

Map valid until noon Sunday

Cloud and showers covered most of the northern parts of the province this morning as a frontal system passed through the Queen Charlotte islands. The front is expected to weaken and move slowly south today spreading clouds and isolated showers to the southern parts of B.C. later today. Some clearing is expected Sunday as the front continues moving south but cool unstable air will give isolated showers to all but the south coast with a chance of some thundershowers over the interior.

Cleaners tackle intruder

A city police spokesman said the cleaning staff spotted a man in the store after hearing glass shattering in a jewelry display counter at about 3:30 a.m.

They tackled him and held him until police arrived.

Officers recovered between $4,000 to $5,000 in rings from the man's pocket.

The spokesman said the thief apparently entered the mall through an insecure door and then forced his way into the department store.

Iran, Iraq clash

TEHRAN (AP) — Iraqi border guards shot up an Iranian border post at Shalamchem, near the port city of Khoramshahr in southwestern Iran, the official Pars news agency reported today. No casualties were reported.

The attack Friday was the second reported Iraqi raid in Iran this week. Last Monday Iran said Iraqi jets bombed and strafed several Kurdish villages in northwestern Iran, killing at least six persons and wounding many more.

Pars said "the patience of the Iranian guards" involved in the latest incident at Shalamchem prevented any further clashes. No additional details were available.

Earlier in the week Admiral Ahmad Madani, the governor-general of Khuzestan province, accused the Iraqi government of smuggling large quantities of weapons across the border to arm autonomy-seeking ethnic Arabs.

The border incident Friday came as a crowd of 5,000 Iranians demonstrated noisily but peacefully outside the Iraqi embassy in Tehran to protest Monday's air raid.

Pigott engaged as adviser

OTTAWA (CP) — Jean Pigott, the Progressive Conservative MP defeated in her Ottawa-Carleton riding in the federal election, is to serve as a special adviser to Prime Minister Clark on human resources.

Pigott said Friday she is to make recommendations on hiring personnel and dealing with lobbyists and special interest groups.

Pigott said she had considered taking on the chairmanship of the National Capital Commission or the presidency of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, but decided on the human resources job.

Pigott ran a bakery before winning a byelection in 1976 and was Opposition critic on housing in the last Parliament.

Mexico collars runaway well

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Engineers are ringing a huge oil spill from a runaway off-shore well in the Gulf of Mexico to prevent environmental damage, a spokesman for the state petroleum monopoly said Friday.

Pemex spokesman Rogelio Cardenas said a flotation collar made of special plastic material was being laid down around the oval slick, which is about 32 kilometres long and more than one kilometre wide, to keep it from spreading while collector boats scoop up the oil.

Cardenas said Pemex had accepted an offer of help from the Norwegian state petroleum agency and special equipment and technicians are on their way.

"The engineers are working on it and it is being brought under control. There isn't very much danger to the ecology. In fact, it's minimal," said Miguel Tomassino, another Pemex spokesman.

The test well 80 kilometres off shore in Campeche Bay, one of Mexico's richest oilfields, turned gusher and caught fire before dawn Sunday. It is spewing out 30,000 barrels of light oil and comparable amounts of natural gas daily.

Tomassini said two collector boats are scooping up about 15,000 barrels of the spilled oil daily and dumping it in a tanker anchored nearby.

"The other 15,000 barrels is either evaporating because of the heat or is burning off," Tomassino said.

THE VICTORIA AIRFORCE

The Catholic priest who wanted to send hundreds of Vietnamese refugees off to what many called "the ends of the earth", is being sent there himself.

Tears filled the eyes of parishioners as they gave a standing ovation to Father Guy Merveille after his final mass at Victoria's Sacred Heart Church last Sunday.

Then moments later, members of the parish council began their campaign to keep the popular priest here.

Father Guy hit the headlines last November when he talked about his dream of buying the former fishing village of Butedale on remote Princess Royal Island near Kitimat and relocating about 60 Vietnamese families there.

But the scheme received a lot of bad publicity when many people familiar with the north coastal area said it was so rugged and unsuitable that the Vietnamese wouldn't be able to survive. Acting Premier Grace McCarthy called it a pipedream.

Now it seems that the priest, much loved by his congregation because of his work with people, must pay for his "pipedream." He is being "relocated" himself — plucked from his flock in Victoria and assigned to Gold River.

"Father Guy has been unjustly sent to Gold River — of all places — there isn't even a church there!" parish council member Lore Ingram said angrilly.

Ms. Ingram inferred that there were "a lot of Satanical things going on in the higher elements."

"Don't make it a big flashy, splashy thing," was her suggestion for my column. "Keep it low key. We don't want to reprimand anyone — the church or the Bishop — we just want to make people aware of what's happening."

And quite a bit is happening, she said.

"There is a lot of jealousy toward Father Guy because he is a rising star," she explained. "He is a radical in many ways because he insists on doing rather than talking.

"Father Guy brought the Vietnamese families to Vancouver Island," Lore Ingram said. "Now whom will they trust? No one! He started a number of things here because he thought he was going to be with us for five years and possibly longer, but now he has literally been banished."

Actually Father Guy, vacationing in the States before taking up his new post, has been with the parish less than three years.

"Routine" was the word used by Victoria's Bishop Remi de Roo to describe the transfer of Father Guy.

"His is one of several moves which are rather routine," the bishop said. "A bishop does this every so often.

"There is a bit of a furore being kicked up by a group of people who are emotional and may not have had all the facts explained to them," Bishop de Roo said, adding that these facts would be outlined at a meeting soon.

"I'm sure Father Guy has touched the hearts of many people and I understand they're sorry to see him go," the Bishop said. "But he has made it clear he wants to be a missionary and enjoys missionary work, and that's what he's going to Gold River to do."

Lore Ingram stressed that she and the other council members want only what is best for Father Guy. But, obviously, they also don't want to lose him.

"He has done fantastic work here," she said emotionally. "Children who would never go to church now look forward to attending the children's mass he introduced. Instead of watching TV on a Sunday morning, they wake us up and say 'Mommy, we have to go to church.'

"We're not Father Guy followers," Ms. Ingram said. "But he has tripled the congegation since he has been here . . . and he has brought us all closer to God."

Hunters hot line to enforce rules

In a move to counter increasing violations of fish and game laws, federal officials have set up a 24-hour clearing house in Vancouver that will handle toll-free calls from around the province.

Enforcement officials from Fisheries and Environment Canada, working in conjunction with the Fish and Wildlife Branch, have set up the report office. It is manned around the clock, and was established largely due to requests from the B.C. Wildlife Federation.

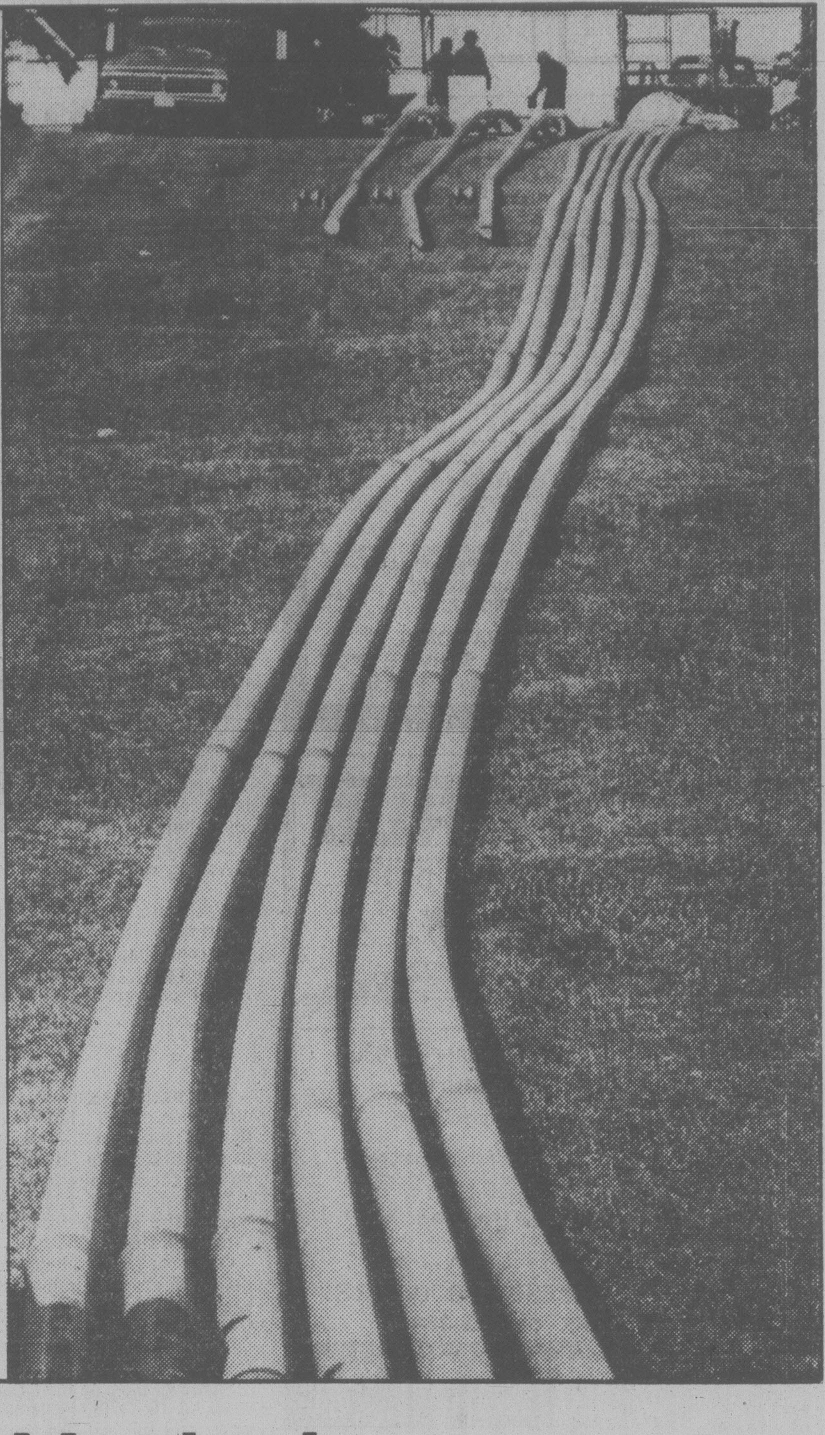
The Wildlife Federation, which encourages hunters and fishermen to patrol their own ranks, has been calling for such an operation because both federal and provincial enforcement officers are spread so thinly in B.C.

Chief enforcement officer Tom Moojalsky said the office will make it easier for people to report violations and other problems involving fish or wildlife.

The office can be reached by dialing the operator and asking for Zenith 666-2235.

Fisheries officers taking the calls will alert the appropriate official in the region where a violation has occurred. That could entail calling Fish and Wildlife Branch representatives, the RCMP or fisheries personnel.

Moojalsky encouraged anyone coming across an incident where fish or game laws are being broken, to be observant and take down the licence number of any vehicles involved as well as getting a description of the people.



Pipes keep water out

Like long stalks of bamboo, fibreglass tubing is being readied for underwater section of B.C. Hydro's new 250,000-volt feeder power line that will connect Horsey substation behind the Ingraham with the Esquimalt substation off Craigflower. Above, cable splicer Dudley Page applies epoxy resin to bind the six-inch ducts that will carry the three single-phase transmission lines under the Gorge waterway from the foot of Washington to Bamfield Park. It is the first time fibreglass has been used in underwater conduits and is regarded as something of an experiment. Land portions of the three-kilometre line will all be underground. The project, being carried out by Comstock, is expected to take about five months to complete. (Photos by John McKay).

Inventor sues over patent

He said a writ filed in Vancouver seeks to confirm cancellation of an agreement made 3½ years ago with Canadian Patents and Development Ltd. which was to have put into production the machine he designed with Englishman Robert Miller.

Nothing has happened.

Tilby alleges CPDL has hindered rather than encouraged development of the process capable of converting sugar cane to sugar or alcohol, with byproducts in the form of animal feed and building materials.

"The rest of the world is clamoring for this," he said. Third world countries can take particular advantage of the process to produce a source of foreign revenue while meeting demand for local food and construction products.

Last year he took the matter up directly with former Industry and Commerce Minister Jack Horner, who made a personal investigation and assigned consultants Peat Marwick and Partners to inquire into the CPDL licensing arrangements with Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd. and Arvid Machine and Tool Co.

Their report recommended both firms be given licences to develop the full potential of Tilby's invention, rather than assigning parts to each as CPDL had done.

Hawker Siddeley, which has done the least in development work, was given the sugar-making licence; Arvid, which completed a working prototype, got the animal feed rights. Neither company was allowed to develop the machine for its full potential to make all three products.

Tilby said splitting the technology made the sugar output only a marginal operation and renders the animal feed wholly impractical.

Potential overseas buyers are being told to purchase something from Hawker Siddeley which doesn't work and is not available, and that they cannot buy what has been recommended by international experts and demonstrated by Arvid to work well, Tilby said.

"Canada is being made to look ridiculous, particularly when at the same time trade missions are trying to persuade these same people to buy Canadian exports."

Bonnie and Clyde do it again

Bonnie and Clyde have done it again.

The unnamed male baby was born Thursday exactly a year to the day after the birth of his elder brother, Sinbad, the first California sea lion born in captivity in B.C.

Sealand trainer Case Schrage said today the pup, which weighed in at between 14 to 15 pounds, appears hale and hearty with its mother providing sufficient milk for her new offspring.

Last year Bonnie was unable to produce enough milk for Sinbad and the Schrage's were forced to take the pup to their home where they placed it in the family bathtub and fed it for eight weeks on a diet of formula milk and ground herring.

"We hope this time everything goes fine and the pup gains weight," Schrage said.

Another danger is the pup being trampled on by its parents as happened when Sealand's two Stellar sea lions accidentally killed their offspring in the frenzy of mating.

Varied programs seek youth jobs

Private enterprise will have to play a larger role in helping to solve the serious unemployment problem for Victoria youth, according to local Canada Employment Centre manager Wally Pickering.

"We have a number of active programs operating in this area but there is only so much government can do.

"We have not yet solved the unemployment problem for young people. Fully 50 per cent of the unemployed in the Victoria area are under 24," he said in an interview.

"Ironically, before the end of the 1980s we may have a shortage of young workers. But that doesn't solve the present problem."

He said Ottawa has five programs operating in the Victoria area, providing jobs for 888 young people in the under-24 category. In addition, the Canada Employment Centre for Students expects to locate jobs for 1,850 more this summer.

"It is clear we must rely upon the private sector if we are going to find enough jobs for all the young people who want them. We have found local business people very co-operative but we hope more jobs can be created."

The five federal programs for local young people are:

Job Experience and Training (JET):

This program has created jobs for 494 young Victorians with Ottawa providing a wage subsidy of up to $1.50 an hour. They get unskilled jobs, many working for the first time, for a maximum of 26 weeks before the wage subsidy expires. Many companies continue to employ the young workers after the subsidy period has ended.

Job Experience for Students (JES):

Similar to JET, this program is aimed at high school dropouts with the hope many will be encouraged to return to school in September after a brief brush with the working world. Co-ordinated jointly by the CEC and the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, it employs 70 young people until the end of August. Workers are selected on the recommendation of school counsellors.

Canada Employment Centre for Students:

Ottawa has hired six university students in Victoria to run this job-finding program at the CEC Youth Employment Centre, 2653 Douglas. Program manager Holly Weidner has set of goal of 1,850 jobs for local students this summer. Many of these jobs have yet to be located.

Young Canada Works:

Ottawa has provided funding of $461,350 to employ 212 local young people on a total of 44 projects. The employers in this program are municipalities, service clubs or other well-established organizations. Most of the jobs are service or recreation-oriented and are particularly suited to university students taking courses in physical education or recreation. The employment concludes at the end of summer.

Youth Job Corps:

This program provides direct employment over the summer in federal departments. In most cases the work provides practical experience as part of a university course. For example, two law students will spend the summer working for the RCMP. A total of 106 Victoria-area jobs have been created under the Youth Job Corps program.

All of the direct hiring positions have been filled. The job-seeking functions of the Canada Employment Centre for Students, however, is just getting under way and jobs will become available through that office.

Past is a mystery to the adopted

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Clare Marcus was 16 when she found out she was adopted. No birth certificate, no records of any kind — it was unnerving.

"My whole frame of reference went wacky."

Travelling on buses she wondered if other passengers could be relatives.

When she walked down the street she scrutinized faces for family resemblences.

Her past was a mystery that she tried sporadically over the years to solve, at one point hiring private detectives.

Three years ago, after following many false leads, she found her mother. Last year she talked to her father for the first time.

The reunions were not joyful, but they were polite and Marcus is happy she can put the pieces together at last.

Both parents are quite old now and live in different parts of England.

Her mother was at first suspicious of her motives and then afraid everybody in the villiage would hear about the indiscretion.

Her father had a wife and family and wasn't anxious for them to find out either.

Marcus said she isn't bitter about being abandoned.

"My parents grew up in the Victorian era, Things were different then.

"My mother sat down and explained it all to me and I understand. My father wrote me a very nice letter."

But she is angry about the prejudice she encountered during her search and the lack of support from government agencies.

From her personal records she has just written a Canadian guide for adopted adults looking for their origins.

Blockage of birth information by social service agencies is the biggest difficulty they will encounter.

In Canada it is still illegal for adopted adults to obtain their birth records, a holdover from the days when adoption was a shameful thing never discussed.

"People didn't talk about things like that. My adopted parents didn't talk about it because they were trying to protect me."

Marcus' adopted father was hurt when as a teenager she started looking for her natural parents, because he felt it reflected badly on his performance as a father. Others thought she was ungrateful to be seeking her natural parents.

But public attitudes must change, Marcus believes, now that thousands of adopted adults in this country are looking for their identities.

Foster parents give love and support, but natural parents are the repository of family history and connections.

"When people bring somebody into the world there is a responsibility in that — otherwise you go through life with hundreds of unanswered questions and you never adjust."

Parent Finders has a list of 8,000 names of people trying to find out who they are.

In the U.S. there are dozens of organizations like Parent Finders, she says.

Rewriting provincial legislation to allow adopted adults access to birth records is not a high priority in B.C. and the organization is hoping public awareness program will help change the government's attitude.

Marcus said she feels good about knowing who she is.

"I've met some weird relatives and some normal relatives. My brother phoned long distance from Europe and said he was pleased to know he had a sister."

Her brother is coming out for a visit in September and in July she is travelling to England to meet two half-sisters.

Adopted children should be told their origins when they are about six years-old and when they grow up have the right to know who their natural parents are.

U.S. orders recall of some sleep pills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government announced the recall Friday of most drugs containing a cancer-causing antihistamine that for years has been the active ingredient in such non-prescription sleeping pills as Sominex, Excedrin P. M. and Compoz.

The recall means the products should quickly disappear from pharmacies and other stores that sell over-the-counter drugs.

Wayne Pines, a spokesman for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, said it will be up to individual companies whether to reimburse consumers who have the drugs in their home medicine cabinets.

The voluntary recall involves drugs using methapyrilene, which for 25 years has been used in over-the-counter sleep aids and other drugs.

The announcement was made jointly by Joseph Califano, secretary of health, education and welfare, and the Proprietary Association, whose members manufacture 80 per cent to 90 per cent of the non-prescription products containing methapyrilene.

"This substance poses a potential risk to humans," Califano said. "People who take sleep aids or cough-cold or allergy remedies should discontinue using those containing methapyrilene. Consumers should consult the ingredient list on medicines in their possession to see whether methapyrilene appears."

The recall will not remove over-the-counter nasal sprays and skin medications that contain relatively small amounts of methapyrilene since the risk associated with those preparations is much lower, the government said.

The National Cancer Institute concluded in April that methapyrilene causes liver cancer in rats and mice and should be presumed to do so in humans.

After evaluating the cancer institute's data, the Food and Drug Administration reached the same conclusion.

It was not immediately clear what would happen if companies that do not belong to the trade association fail to recall their products. Pines said they would be asked to do so and could face seizure of the drugs through further government proceedings if they do not comply.

The Proprietary Association said that most makers of over-the-counter sleep aid products already have stopped manufacturing drugs containing the chemical and some already have begun to ship reformulated products.

Among the brands being reformulated are Sominex, Compoz, Excedrin P.M., Sleep-Eze and Nytol.

Officials said the reformulation involves substituting pyrilamine, a chemically related but less potent antihistamine, for the traditional ingredient.

Sex joins liquor, cigs on cancer danger list

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The spices of life, including sex, are more likely to cause cancer than food additives or air and water pollution, medical experts said Friday at a joint U.S.-West German cancer prevention conference.

Workers employed in such occupations as carpentry or the asbestos industry — but not necessarily the nuclear plant industry — may also face health hazards, the doctors warned at a news conference.

One of the radiologists was Dr. Mildred Scheel, wife of West Germany's President Walter Scheel and founder of Deutsche Krebshilfe, the German Cancer Research fund which co-sponsored the two-day conference with the American Health Foundation, a preventive medicine organization.

Sex was cited as a risk factor in cervical cancer and herpes, a painful sore recurring on the genitals and believed linked to cancer, according to Dr. Ernst Wynder of the AHF.

He recommended better sexual hygiene to help prevent the diseases. The number of cases of genital herpes has increased so drastically in recent years that it is being classified a venereal disease.

"We have talked against smoking, drinking and now sex — soon we will have no friends left at all," Dr Wynder said.

Alcoholism, not just a few drinks daily but heavy alcohol abuse, increased the risk for cancers of the mouth, pharynx, larynx, esophagus and liver, says a study presented by Dr. Kenneth Rothman of Harvard University. A major complicating factor was a generally high smoking level among alcoholics, the study said.

About 30 to 35 per cent of all cancers in U.S. men are related to tobacco use. The figure is lower for women.

The greatest cancer risk in the workplace is caused by smoke, says another paper, written by Dr. John Higginson of the World Health Organization in Lyon, France.

Both organizations sponsoring the conference are particularly keen to make the public aware of lifestyle and its role in preventing cancer. They discounted other possible risks.

Dr. Wynder told reporters that air and water pollution and food additives such as nitrites, used in bacon, or other preservatives, processing agents or packaging materials "do not relate significantly to any increase in the human cancer risk."

Regarding the controversial sugar substitute saccharine, Dr. Wynder said that two extensive bladder cancer studies are being conducted in the U.S. and the findings will be known later this year about the sweetener.

U.S. orders recall of some sleep pills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government announced the recall Friday of most drugs containing a cancer-causing antihistamine that for years has been the active ingredient in such non-prescription sleeping pills as Sominex, Excedrin P. M. and Compoz.

The recall means the products should quickly disappear from pharmacies and other stores that sell over-the-counter drugs.

Wayne Pines, a spokesman for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, said it will be up to individual companies whether to reimburse consumers who have the drugs in their home medicine cabinets.

The voluntary recall involves drugs using methapyrilene, which for 25 years has been used in over-the-counter sleep aids and other drugs.

The announcement was made jointly by Joseph Califano, secretary of health, education and welfare, and the Proprietary Association, whose members manufacture 80 per cent to 90 per cent of the non-prescription products containing methapyrilene.

"This substance poses a potential risk to humans," Califano said. "People who take sleep aids or cough-cold or allergy remedies should discontinue using those containing methapyrilene. Consumers should consult the ingredient list on medicines in their possession to see whether methapyrilene appears."

The recall will not remove over-the-counter nasal sprays and skin medications that contain relatively small amounts of methapyrilene since the risk associated with those preparations is much lower, the government said.

The National Cancer Institute concluded in April that methapyrilene causes liver cancer in rats and mice and should be presumed to do so in humans.

After evaluating the cancer institute's data, the Food and Drug Administration reached the same conclusion.

It was not immediately clear what would happen if companies that do not belong to the trade association fail to recall their products. Pines said they would be asked to do so and could face seizure of the drugs through further government proceedings if they do not comply.

The Proprietary Association said that most makers of over-the-counter sleep aid products already have stopped manufacturing drugs containing the chemical and some already have begun to ship reformulated products.

Among the brands being reformulated are Sominex, Compoz, Excedrin P.M., Sleep-Eze and Nytol.

Officials said the reformulation involves substituting pyrilamine, a chemically related but less potent antihistamine, for the traditional ingredient.
